OTONABEE HEIGHTS

A new neighborhood overlooking the city from its S.E. corner, close to the river and Little Lake, 15 minutes' walk to the street car line. Land on Otonabee Heights, being close to the city, is certain to rise in value.

There is yet for sale one seven-roomed frame house with good barn and one or two acres. There are only three building lots left for sale, each 150 feet frontage by 300 feet deep. Any one of them is a bargain at present prices and terms of payment.

Act now. Do not wait, because sites on Otonabee Heights will never be as cheap or as easily bought as now. Land values will rise at the war's end.

For information and inspection apply on Saturday, November 18, to Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, 600 Stewart St. or Telephone 26.

ARMGAARD KARL GRAVES IS HELD ON EXTORTION CHARGE

Self-styled Spy Accused of Trying to Get $3000 From Countess Von BernstorffForLetters

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 14.—Charged with attempting a blackmail scheme involving Countess Von Bernstorff, wife of the German Ambassador, a man giving his name as Armgaard Karl Graves and his address as No. 65 West Sixty-ninth street, New York city, was arrested Saturday as he left the residence of Prince Von Hatzfeldt-Trascenberg, Counsellor of the German Embassy.

Graves, who says that at one time he was a German spy, is accused of trying to obtain $3,000 for a package of letters addressed to Countess Von Bernstorff. These letters were smuggled into the United States on October 31 aboard the steamship Oscar II.

Graves, according to the officials, represented to Prince Von Hatzfeldt that the letters were from a man and were of such an intimate character that they would embarrass Countess Von Bernstorff greatly if they fell into the hands of her husband. They were, instead, letters written to the Countess by one of her friends, and contained nothing excepting endearing terms such as one woman would write to another. The letters were prepared in the style of a diary, covering the events of several days.

SPECTACULAR ARREST.

The arrest was spectacular. Detectives caught Graves as he was leaving the residence of Prince Hatzfeldt, where he had gone by appointment at half-past ten o'clock Saturday morning to receive the $3,000 for the letters. The money was paid in marked bills.

A. Bruce Bielaski, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, of the Department of Justice, put Graves through three and a half hours of cross-questioning. Upon the Evidence obtained Graves was arraigned at half past six o'clock Saturday night on charges of attempting blackmail and the theft of letters at Hoboken, N. J. He pleaded not guilty.

Commissioner Taylor placed the bond of $2,000, which Graves furnished after some difficulty. The bond was supplied by a professional bondsman.

This was Graves' second trip to Washington in connection with the letters. He came here on Wednesday night and saw Prince Hatzfeldt returning to New York city on Thursday.

CEASES ESPIONAGE

To newspapermen Graves told a remarkable tale of having come to the United States two years and nine months ago, after having been imprisoned in Scotland, where he had been arrested as a German spy. He said that he bought his way out of prison by revealing German secrets to the British, and that he had come to the United States as a place of safety. He said that he had done no work as a spy since his arrival here adding that he had made a living by writing two books and special articles revealing the secrets of the German spy system. He said his name is not really Graves, but an assumed name, used for protection.

"There is nothing to this charge of blackmail," he declared "and I do not like to have it go out that way. There was no effort to blackmail Countess Von Bernstorff. I do not act that way with women.

"Those letters had to do with diplomacy alone. That is all I care to say about them. I will not try to explain how I got them or what they contained except to say that they are important diplomatic papers.

BERNSTORFF'S METHODS.

"All I want to say is that I am merely using the same methods that the German Ambassador has been using for the last two years."

The reporters asked him to explain his last statement.

"Never mind," he resumed. "That needs no explanation. The public will know what I mean, and so will the German Embassy."

Clifford Grant, chief of detectives, in a statement to-night said:

"There was nothing really official so far as I know, about the letters this man had. There were three letters from the same person. Each wound up with the words, 'My dear.' They were written in the form of a diary, apparently with a view to keeping a record until opportunity should present itself for despatching the contents to the United States. Of course, there were some things in them which the British censor migh tnot have passed.

PAID $2,400 FOR THEM.

"It seems that the letters were entrusted to some one aboard the Oscar II. who, after receiving them, saw an opportunity to use them. Graves admitted that he wanted to make money out of the letters. He said he paid $2,400 for them and wanted to make a $600 profit."

A high official of the Embassy said to-night: "We had this man arrested because we wanted to let it be known that no person attached directly or indirectly to this Embassy can be made a victim of blackmailing schemes. We have no secrets."

LIGHT ON GRAVES' LIFE.

Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves, or Karl Armgaard Graves, as he sometimes is known, has been a thorn in the side of the German and British authorities for several years because of the mystery with which he has invested himself. He has written a book, has lectured and given out newspapor interviews in which he has claimed an inside knowledge of all the famous diplomatic intrigues of the last decade. He has asserted in print that he was one of the most valued agents of the German secret service. Graves' revelations of European espionage have been repudiated by both the British and the German Governments. When he was arrested on September 11, 1914, for pawning a ring belonging to a friend, he charged that his seizure was a German plot against his liberty.

In the field of predictions Dr Graves has succeeded in adding importance to his personality. He told in advance of the fall of Antwerp and he prophesied the invasion of England by Zeppelins. He told in advance the attitude that Italy would take. Also he ventured into discussion of the prospect that Germany would strive to effect an alliance with Russia.

Neither in his books nor his lectures has the self-described spy given any accurate information of his real identity. In Germany the Frankfurter Zeitung printed a long career of alleged crime and deception of Graves. His writings have been attacked on the ground of error by representatives of the British and German Embassies.

Graves in publications has given himself credit for starving off many international crises. Hardly a complication of nations arose during his term of espionage, he asserted, but that he was called in to help. His experience proved the danger of too much knowledge, he has confessed naively. Because he worked himself into the greatest secrets the German Government decided to betray him. They sent him into England to get information of Britain's army and navy activities and arrange matters so he would be arrested.

In England he was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment, but this was abbreviated, so he says, because Sir Edward Grey wanted to use him for spy work in this country. When he got here he decided to abandon espionage entirely.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES

"My boy, Frank, caught weak eyes and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ninga, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him. No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for coughs and bronchitis.

Lifted Heavy Log

Strained His Kidneys Got Pains in Back

Men in all walks of life where it is necessary to stoop, bend and lift heavy objects put a great deal of strain on the kidneys, and this continual wear and tear, sooner or later will cause the kidneys to become affected in some way. The most common of these troubles is backache, and the only way to cure the lame and aching back is to strengthen the kidneys.

This Doan's Kidney Pills will do for you. They know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are made for the kidneys only.

Mr. Owen Hewey, West Clifford, N. S., writes: "I was working in the woods and lifted a heavy log. I must have strained my kidneys as I got kidney trouble and pains in my back. I could not do any work for five months. A friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and after having used them I felt as if I were only eighteen years old. I can now work as well as ever I did, and have had no pains since.

Doan's Kidney Pills are put up in an oblong grey box with the trade mark of a "Maple Leaf". Do not accept any other.

THE THREE MUSKETEERS

THESE three Pals of the C.P.R. staff in London, England (reading from left to right: R. J. Harden, Passenger Department; E. G. Moore, Advertising Department; and P. T. Roberts, Management Department), at the Outbreak of War lost no time in offering their services for their King and Country, and within eight days of the Declaration of War they had all been posted to the 24th County of London Regiment (The Queen's).

They trained together, and early in 1915 they crossed together to France. They shared together the privations of trench warfare in the early months of that year, and in the great battles in which their Regiment took part; but in May all three were wounded, Harden and Roberts only slightly, but Moore, in the Givenchy fight, was so seriously injured that he was invalided to England and since his recovery has, to his great regret, been fit for Home service only. Harden and Roberts had rejoined their Regiment by June and a month later Harden, who had been promoted to Lance-Corporal, was again hit, this time very seriously and since then remained in Wharncliffe Hospital, Sheffield, where he has undergone so many operations that he is looked upon as a wonder by his doctors and a darling by his nurses and lady visitors. Though no longer able to take his part in the strenuous work at the front, he has yet had plenty of opportunity of showing his possession of one of the most soldierly virtues—patient endurance. It is hoped that after fifteen months in hospital he will soon be able to return to the service of the Company.

Roberts, the only remaining member of the trio, was promoted Corporal at the end of 1915, and news now comes of his promotion to the rank of Sergeant and the award to him of the Military Medal "for bravery in the field," in an action on May 23rd last. In decorating him General Sir Henry Wilson—the Corps Commander—stated the award was given "For gallantly leading an attack on a flank under very heavy fire, and directing his men in operations for four hours after being wounded." During these operations he was wounded, but has again rejoined his Regiment, and seems to be under the impression that he has not yet done all his bit.

RUSSIA FAST RAISING AN ARMY OF MILLIONS

London. — Russia will save Roumania from the Teuton menace this autumn and winter, and next spring will have the strongest army she has had since the war began. General Brusiloff told Stanley Washburn, the Times correspondent at the Russian headquarters on the Carpathian front recently. General Brusiloff commands all the Russian armies that made the great sweep into Galicia in the summer.

"I speak with authority when I say that from the common soldier up, the united sentiment of Russia is that Roumania should be protected, helped and supported in every possible way," said the great commander.

"The Roumanians must feel faith in the great heart of the Russian people," General Brusiloff continued. "They must know that in the efforts we are making to save them this sentiment is the dominant factor, not merely a question of our own self-interest to protect our left flank.

"Roumania is now feeling for the first time the pressure of war and the bitterness of defeat, but Roumania must realise that defeats are but incidents of a greater campaign. Behind her stands Great Russia, who will see that her brave little ally, who came into the war for a just cause, does not ultimately suffer for daring to espouse the cause for which we are all fighting.

"The war is won to-day, though it it is merely speculation to attempt to estimate how much longer will be required before the enemy is convinced that the cause for the sake of which they have drenched Europe in blood, is irretrievably lost.

"Personally, never since the beginning of the war have I believed that the enemy had a chance of winning. While they are able to continue successful offences, it is difficult for them to realise that they are not approaching a successful peace. This summer's operations mark a definite period of defeat. That period dates from the time when the allies, co-ordinating their programmes, seised from the enemy the capacity for continuing the offensives and dictating their strategy to us.

"From the beginning of the operations this summer on the Russian south-western front the enemy has lost control of the situation. In spite of his super-human efforts to regain the initiative, he has utterly failed to do so. Again and again on the front the enemy's design to block our plans and throw us back on the defensive, has been ruined by the valour and the fortitude of our heroic troops.

IT CANCELS WHOLE LIFETIME OF SINS?

The Christmas pastoral, 1914, of Cardinal Mercier, Archbishop of Malines, Belgium, was as follows:

"If I am asked what I think of the eternal salvation of a brave man who has consciously given his life in defence of his country's honour, and in vindication of violated justice, I shall not hesitate to reply that without any doubt whatever Christ crowns his military valor, and that death, accepted in this Christian spirit, assures the safety of that man's soul. Greater love of that man's soul. Greater love Saviour, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

"And the soldier who dies to save his brothers, and to defend the hearths and altars of his country, reaches this highest of all degrees of charity. He may not have made a close analysis of the value of his sacrifice; but must we suppose that God requires of the plain soldier in the excitement of battle the methodical precision of the moralist or the theologian?

"Can we who revere his heroism doubt that his God welcomes him with love? Christian mothers, be proud of your sons. Of all griefs, of all our human sorrows, yours is perhaps the most worthy of veneration. I think I behold you in your affliction, but erect, standing at the side of the Mother of Sorrows, at the foot of the cross. Suffer us to offer you not only our condolence, but our congratulation. Not all our heroes obtain temporal honours, but for all we expect the immortal crown of the elect. For this is the virtue of a single act of perfect charity. It cancels a whole lifetime of sins — it transforms a sinful man into a saint."—Cardinal Mercier.

HE HAD EATEN HIS ACT.

Mr. David Belasco, apropos the inroads that moving pictures have made on the regular theatre, said in New York: "I heard of a sad case the other day. There was a chap who had a dozen performing parrots. For a long time, thanks to the 'movies,' this chap had been out of a job. But at last his agent wired him that he had signed him up at a good price. Several days passed. Then the agent received on a soiled postal card from the poor fellow this tragic message. 'Can't accept. Have eaten my act.'"

"GRASPING HAND" IN TOILS.

Mexican Police Break Up Band of Robbers.

The police of Mexico City believe that with the capture recently of Ramen Capteli they have broken up a band of burglars and robbers which has terrorized the more prosperous residence districts of the city and which has taken loot said to amount to more than $100,000. The band was known as "La Mano que Aprista" or "The Grasping Hand" from the black imprint of a hand which always was left somewhere about the premises where the robbers operated. It is believed many persons robbed feared to report their losses for fear of the vengeance of "The Grasping Hand."

Canteli, it is said, was captured in a subterranean chamber opening from the wall of a deep well. He was traced through his wife who brought him food and it is alleged that several victims of the robberies have identified him as one of the band.

The 5,000 policemen of Mexico City have received an increase in pay of from three and one-half to five pesos a day. They also will be furnished their uniforms in future. Heretofore they have had to purchase their own uniforms.

THE Battle OF THE Somme

"THE GREATEST MOVING PICTURE IN THE WORLD"

SOME BRITISH COMMENTS

"If the exhibition of this picture all over the world does not end war, God help civilization. See that this picture, which is itself an epic of self-sacrifice and gallantry, reaches everyone. Mothers, wives, sisters and affianced ones, your hearts will hear, your voices speak in honour and glory of the living and the dead."
—Mr. Lloyd George.

"'The Battle of the Somme,' which was shown to a distinguished gathering at the Scala Theatre yesterday, is the greatest moving picture in the world, the greatest that has ever been produced."—London Evening News.

"Not the glory of war do the pictures depict, but war—war in all its grim, murderous reality and hideous ruin, relieved from utter repulsiveness by the heroic companionship and cheerful suffering of the human soul overshadowed and dwarfed by the gigantic powers of destruction around them."
—London Daily Telegraph.

"The pictures are extraordinarily realistic. They show all the grim horrors of war. The men are seen to leap from their trenches. The camera spares nothing, and indeed shows that some of the poor fellows did not get beyond the parapet before being struck."
—London Morning Post.

"So vivid are the pictures that you almost hear the word of command that sends the men scrambling over the parapets of the trench."
—The Liverpool Courier.

"The most wonderful films ever taken."—The Illustrated London News.

"The film of the Big Push, officially known as 'The Battle of the Somme,' is the greatest success in point of public appreciation that the cinematograph has ever known. Five firms who print positives are engaged in turning out copies, the biggest order ever given in filmdom. There has never been anything like this in the history of the moving picture."
—London Weekly Dispatch.

"If anything were needed to justify the existence of the cinematograph, it is to be found in the wonderful series of films of the opening of the British attack on the Somme, July 1st. In years to come, when historians wish to know the conditions under which the great offensive was launched, they will only have to send for these films—for we take it as a matter of course that a number of copies of them will be preserved in the national archives."

NEW USE FOR FALSE LIMBS.

Soldier Packs Luggage for Week-end in Artificial Leg.

Resourcefulness practised in the trenches does not desert our heroes when they leave the army, says a London Exchange.

A lance-corporal of the Kensington Battalion, London Regiment, had his right leg amputated in France, and later was fitted with an artificial limb.

When going away for the week-end the other day he met a friend. "It is unnecessary for me to carry a bag when I go away now," he remarked "I have packed all the luggage required in my artificial leg. It holds a hair brush, bottle of hair oil and shaving requisites very well."

The latest Paris cables say: "The new suit coats are semi-fitted without the marked flare that distinguishes last year's modes."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SANITARY INSPECTOR COOPER HAD A BUSY SIX MONTHS

Two Hundred Complaints Respecting the Collection of Garbage Were Heard During That Time—Inspector Claims That One-Half of These Resulted From the Employment of "Strange" Men and the Other Half He Attributes to "Public Fault"—Caused to Be Removed and Destroyed at the Incinerator Twenty-five Dead Animals of All Kinds.

BOARDING HOUSES INSPECTED

Mr. T. R. Cooper, sanitary inspector for the past six months, submitted his first report at a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday afternoon. In the language of the report, some "nine hundred and thirty-two calls and inspections of back yards and lanes were answered and put right."

The report in full contains the following:

In submitting my first six months' report for your consideration it is somewhat difficult to give a complete statistical record of work performed during that time, from June 6th, 1915 to November, 1916.

932 calls and inspections of backyards and lanes answered and put right.

210 garbage complaints, about half of which resulted from the employment of strange men, the other half, public fault.

Have made two visits to all slaughter houses that supply meat to the city of Peterborough, and found them all O.K.

Have visited all milk vendors in the city and found everything in a very sanitary condition.

Have put up and taken down: 23 diphtheria cards and 6 measles cards.

Inspected all butcher, fish and fruit shops at least once a week and found them all willing to what is right.

I have served 98 nuisance notices and in all cases they have been properly carried out.

Inspected all laundries and bakeries and found them, all but one or two, in a sanitary condition.

I have caused to be removed and destroyed at the incinerator 25 dead animals of all kinds.

Have examined and inspected the banks of the River Otonabee above the waterworks dam and also the river above the dam, twice, and found it in a sanitary condition.

The boarding houses have been carefully inspected and I have found very few causes for complaint. Of course the Italian places are the worst.

I have inspected all eating houses and cafes and have caused some of them to be put in better sanitary condition.

The foregoing report does not convey an adequate idea of all work done, as a great part of my time for three months was taken up with the scavenging difficulty, obtaining men to take licenses and placing them on routes; trouble with the incinerator man; getting incinerator in working order, and having to stay in my office at the first stage of my time trying to collect money for scavengers' work. Much work has been done in regard to night soil, but there is a great deal still to be done which I hope will be carried out in the coming year.

I must also say that Mr. Miller has given me much assistance which I have been very glad of.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

T. R. COOPER,
Sanitary Inspector.

SOLDIERS PRAISE SOMME PICTURES

Those Who Are Convalescing From Wounds Tell Their Friends

TO SEE THESE FILMS

They Will Be Shown at the Grand Opera House Next Week

When "The Battle of the Somme" official motion pictures, the greatest film in the world, were first exhibited in England and took that country by storm, not the least interested spectators in the millions of people who viewed the pictures, were convalescent soldiers recovering from wounds in English hospitals.

All of those whose condition permitted them to attend the theatres, saw the presentation and voiced hearty praise of the realistic reproductions of the fighting at the front.

Many of these convalescing soldiers were Canadians, some of whom have written friends and relatives in their home cities advising them to see the films if the opportunity was presented.

One officer who has returned to Toronto on sick leave, and who saw the pictures in London is Lieut. H. C. Matthaias, who declares that the film is the most wonderful production of its kind he has ever witnessed.

All Theatres Crowded.

The officer says that all the theatres in London during the exhibition of the Somme pictures were crowded, and that the films were the all-absorbing topic of conversation during the time they were shown in the mother country. Lieut. Matthaias asserts that the pictures bring home with an intense realism a keener appreciation of the warfare in France and Flanders. He was convinced that the photographing of many of the scenes had involved great danger to the operator of the camera. The lieutenant is one of the many who, having seen the films, expressed hearty approval and recommends them to the view of everyone.

If the Somme pictures are the greatest war films they also represent the finest peace picture in the world today; they are worth a thousand Hague conferences.

Wherever they are shown they should awaken the minds of men to the pretensions of pompous princes who have too long claimed the right as the "All Highest" to doom their fellow creatures to suffering and destruction for the gratification of their mad ambitions. It is impossible to believe the world will ever forget this picture; its impression will never fade from the memory of this generation.

Men who see it will never lightly talk of war again. In this picture the world will obtain some idea of what it costs in human suffering to put down the devil's domination.

These pictures are to be shown at the Grand Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evening. Matinee—Admission 15c. to any part of the theatre. Evening, 25c. to any part of the theatre.

FRENCH SEEK 100,000 TONS OF COPPER HERE

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The French Government has inquiries in the local copper market for a round amount of the metal, estimated at 200,000,000 pounds, which is wanted for delivery in the second half of 1917. Copper men said recently that the transaction had not gone beyond the initial stages of negotiation, and no prediction could be obtained as to the time when the sale would be closed. It is possible that this huge total will ultimately be split into a number of separate contracts, but if it goes through as a whole it will form one of the largest sales ever made in this country.

France participated in the recent order for 440,000,000 pounds of copper taken by several of the allied Governments. This order is to be filled in the first half of next year. While the major part of the big European purchases in the past year has been for munition making purposes, it is understood that a substantial tonnage has gone to manufacturers of commercial goods and a portion of the pending French order will probably be diverted to the same consuming channels.

The market for copper to be delivered this month and next is practically bare of supplies, a fact accounting for information obtained recently that several carloads had been sold at 32¼ cents a pound. The refiners have also disposed of most of their output for the first quarter next year, and buying for second quarter relivery has reached large dimensions. In copper trade circles it was said that little of the metal for delivery in the next four months could be obtained under 30 cents a pound with the price trend decidedly upward.

A bicycle-like machine is provided in London hospitals where soldiers recovering from injuries exercise to restore suppleness to the limbs.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE MEDICAL OFFICER OF HEALTH

Reference is Made to the Measles Epidemic That Visited the City One Year Ago—About Eight Hundred Cases Reported—Dr. C. H. Amys Calls Attention to the Necessity of Bettering the Domestic Ice Supply—Ice Taken From Little Lake is a Source of Danger.

ADVANTAGES OF SEWER CONNECTION

At a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday afternoon in the office of City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, the following report was presented by Dr. C. H. Amys, medical officer of Health.

To the Chairman and Members of the Peterborough Board of Health:

I beg to present to you my report upon the sanitary condition of the municipality.

During the ten and one-half months past we have been blessed with a freedom from any serious epidemic, as the reports on the following diseases will indicate:

Measles:—We placarded 314 houses, this represented 800 cases in all—4 deaths.

This epidemic commenced on November 27th, 1915, and, in spite of cases being promptly reported; and isolation enforced, it spread all over the city in a few days.

The general opinion among medical men is that the quarantine for measles is too long; and I trust we will see a change in the near future.

Typhoid Fever:—4 cases—3 deaths, on September 1st was the last case.

Three or all of these cases came from out of town, or had been visiting out of town. It might be well for us to state that with two large hospitals and several public institutions in our midst, inhabited by what might be called a floating population it is a marvel that we have been free, during the last year, of any serious epidemic.

THE ICE SUPPLY.

Typhoid is a water-borne disease and I would advise the Board to take immediate steps to better our domestic ice supply. If we continue to use in the house and restaurant, ice cut from the Little Lake we are certainly courting disaster.

Scarlet Fever:—9 cases—no deaths. April 19th gave birth to the last case. Several of these cases from one institution where there was quite an outbreak towards the close of last year.

Diphtheria:—45 cases—4 deaths. On October 11th was our last case. The School Nurse's work coupled with rigid isolation (hospital treatment) was, I consider, the chief factor in eliminating this dread disease from our midst.

You will agree with me when I say, that, as the school nurse's work is chiefly, if not entirely, to do with public health, she should be employed by the Board of Health. We could then extend her work to the Separate Schools and Collegiate Institute and Normal School; and when if necessary give her an assistant. I trust you will take this matter up with the School Board and Council before next year.

Tuberculosis:—No cases reported as required by law—15 deaths recorded.

Small Pox:—No cases.

Chicken Pox:—3 cases. This disease is not reported as required by law.

Erysipelas:—2 cases—no deaths.

Whooping Cough:—3 cases—1 death

Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis:—3 cases—2 deaths.

We had, I believe, only one case of the Epidemic type during the year

Infantile Paralysis—No cases.

NIGHT SOIL PROBLEM.

Before closing I wish to touch on the night soil problem, which is, I believe, causing our City Fathers a certain amount of thought and trouble. There is an axiom, "Tax anything and everything you want to get rid of". Tax it, I say, and have no scruples about it, because almost every house in Peterborough has to have sewer and water at its door. These houses should be connected up and every man, rich or poor, should know he is not taking the full advantage of this city's blessing, if he fails to connect up. Sewer connection will make his property more valuable, give him more space, give him and his neighbours purer air, less flies, fewer doctors' bills and a healthier and happier wife and family.

Thanking you, Gentlemen, I am, Your obedient servant, Medical Officer of Health.

On motion of Mr. G. H. Duncan it was moved that a copy of the foregoing report be forwarded to the Provincial Board of Health.

Capt. Burnham Offers His Services For Red Cross Work at the Front

Mr. E. H. Bartlett of the Trent Canal Office has received the following interesting letter from Captain Burnham:

[illegible], Shorncliffe Area, Kent, October 31st

[illegible] Bartlett,—You may be interested to know that I have applied for the service of the Canadian Red Cross in France. When as [illegible] I decided to have anybody [illegible] everybody had gone to France who was not rejected on account of his age, myself included. I was appointed by the Army Council (I suppose) to a Board that was to do work of a financial character amongst the Canadian forces in England. This I asked to be excused from as I had received a cable from Gen. Hughes that I was to be sent to France to look about and then return to Canada (for parliamentary and recruiting purposes).

Shortly after that all officers here were cited before an Army Board with Major-General Steele at the head to see what could be done with us, but since that again I have met so many of our Canadian wounded and realise so profoundly what we are up against that I have sent in the following application:

"Dear General Steele,—Will you allow me to say that when appearing at Folkestone before the Board it had not occurred to me to mention that if my age prevents, as it has done hitherto, all possibility of my being employed in a combatant capacity in France, I am very willing to go into the service of the Canadian Red Cross there. My people were largely surgeons and I have assisted at many major operations and am therefore familiar with the work. I am in the best of health and have passed all the medical officers easily. If it is possible for me to be of service this coming winter with all its prospective hardships for the troops, I would willingly do anything to that end, etc.".

The spirit of our men is so fine that he would be a dull dog who would not try to get over and help them in some way.

Yours,

J. H. BURNHAM.

NEED MORE FEMALE LABOUR

German Industries Call for Women to Free Men for War.

BERLIN, Nov. 14.—The demand for female labour is constantly on the increase, according to reports from agencies that supply help. This increased demand is accompanied by increased demands for pay on the part of the women, so that many of them now insist on at least 50 pfennigs an hour, (something under 10 cents, according to present rates of exchange).

The greatest demand for unskilled female labour has come from the leather and metal trades, which already employs thousands, if not hundreds, of thousands of men, whose presence in the army is more and more desired.

Corresponding to the increased demand for women in the trades, there has been a falling off of the demand for domestic servants, indicating an increasing simplicity in living standards.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such a result is not impossible, despite past failures. Most thin people are victims of mal-nutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are, when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood, much of the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal, amount of fat, the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can probably best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a careful combination of six splendid assimilative agents. Taken with meals they mix with the food to turn the sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect has been in many cases reported remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by all druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you with Sargol send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 Antoine St., Montreal and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid in plain wrapper.

End Not in Sight Says Mgr. Burke

BUT THIS IS BEGINNING OF THE END.

SANE RECRUITING METHDS FOR RESULTS.

Ottawa, Nov. 14—"We are just over the ridge. Though it is the beginning of the end, the end is not yet in sight. If the war is over in two years we can be thankful."

This was the summarised verdict of Rt. Rev. Monsaigneur Burke, P.A., former editor of the Catholic Register, who is staying at the Chateau, and who has returned from a brief respite from his activities as Chaplain with the Canadian army.

Mgr. Burke is a believer in conscription though not its ardent advocate. The available man supply of the British Empire will have to be garnered together if the war is to be hastened to a conclusion, he believes. While in Canada, he is endeavoring to stimulate recruiting.

ALL AVAILABLE MEN.

"Every available man should be released from his work and should join the colors," he stated. Conscription, he stated, might not be a popular measure, but it was undoubtedly the only logical course to pursue. He doubted, however, whether it would be possible to set up such a measure in Canada.

Though recruiting has slackened to a great extent, Mgr. Burke does not think it has ceased. He predicts that in Quebec there will be an awakening of loyalty.

"Undoubtedly sane recruiting methods will have beneficial results," he predicted. The difficulty with the French population has been, in his opinion, the lack of suitable officers to lead the battalions. He pointed out that at the beginning of the war, the French enlisted as quickly as the other nationalities. Lack of transportation, the authority of officers of alien temperament to the French, and the fact that they would have to undergo a hard and arduous training dimmed their ardor.

MISGUIDED ZEAL.

The misguided zeal of recruiting officers, who instead of exhorting, resorted to abuse, also had a dampening effect.

"There is undoubtedly a change in sentiment. The French are just as loyal. It only needs a definite campaign to get results. Undoubtedly they will enlist in large numbers from now on," he stated.

FOR LONG WAR.

While in France, Mgr. Burke met Rev. Major O'Gorman of Ottawa. The latter was in danger of losing his arm for some time, but is now convalescing in a French hospital.

The excellence of the Canadian and Australian troops is admitted on every hand. The thought in high official circles, however, persists that this effectiveness could have been turned to much greater benefit had they received more adequate military training before the outbreak of the war.

"The people of England are prepared for a long war. They have no delusions that it will end soon. It is necessary that all available men should be enlisted," he concluded.

The bones left from roast beef or lamb can be put into pot with potatoes and boiled. They will give the potatoes a rich flavor.

SEEK SEPARATE PEACE

German Said to ob Urging France to Discuss Terms.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—An Englishman well known in London, New York and Paris, who arrived on the American liner, St. Paul, from Liverpool, was emphatic in his assertion that Germany was secretly making overtures for peace to France.

"When I was in Paris two weeks ago," he said, 'I was informed by an official of high rank, whose word was indisputable, that every two weeks during the previous two months Germany had sent communications to the French Government asing for an armistice with a view to discussing terms of peace.

"It is also known to the allies that Germany induced Ambassador Gerard to go to Washington and ask President Wilson to open up negotiations for peace. In return the promise was made to him that the U-boat warfare would not be waged in a ruthless manner pending his absence."

CONTRACTS LET FOR SNOW PLOWING IN ASHBURNHAM AND WEST WARD

The lowest snow ploughing tender for the east and west wards were accepted by the Board of Works last night as follows:

District No. 7—South of Douro street, Westley Devall, corner of Erebine and Woodbine avenue, $136.

District No. 8— North of Douro street, Albert Valois, Woodbine avenue.

District No. 4—North of Sherbrooke south of Weller and west of Park street, Daniel McMillan, $100. Last year, $75.

Other tenders received were:

District No. 4—Fred Board $180.

No. 7—John Lynn, $155.

No. 8—Ben Revoy, $170; E. Reid, $150; Jos. Frith, $170.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Saunders, that the lowest tender for each division be accepted.

FOOD SITUATION IN ENGLAND IS SERIOUS

LONDON, November 15.—Warning that the situation in England had reached the point where the Government "may be compelled to take artificial means to limit the consumption of food," was sounded in the House of Commons to-day by Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade.

Runciman said he favoured the appointment of a food controller for England with greater powers than any similar official.

"Conscription has gone too far," said Runciman in the course of a debate on the food question.

"Men must be brought back for farming and shipbuilding or the Government may be compelled to take artificial means to limit the food consumption."

Runciman announced that the Government would assume the power to institute food tickets at any time it chooses.

SIR EDWARD GREY'S REPLY IS PRAISED

LONDON, November 15.—Newspapers to-day editorially hailed Sir Edward Grey's reply to the American protest on the British black list as an admirable expression of British sentiment. "Sir Edward Grey's defence of the black list," the Pall Mall Gazette declared, "leaves its assailants without a leg to stand on unless they are prepared to argue that we ought to prolong hostilities and endanger our victory for the purpose of filling others pockets."

"We wish to throw as few obstacles as possible in the way of neutrals," the Westminster Gazette asserted, "but they must realise the necessity of us confining our own resources in ships and trade to our own purposes until the war's end."

PETROGRAD, November 15.—Heavily reinforced German troops have succeeded in further pushing back the Roumanian forces which for several days have been on the defensive in the Jiul Valley below the Vulcan Pass district.

There have been some Roumanian reverses also on the Transylvanian front.

DEUTSCHLAND IS READY TO RETURN

NEW LONDON, Conn., November 15.—Although she has not filed her manifest, nor asked for clearance papers, the German merchant submarine Deutschland is believed to sail at once for home. All her stevedores have been dismissed and the only thing now lacking is a supply of fuel oil.

New Regulations In Regard To Food Likely

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The morning newspapers say that the Government will to-day present to Parliament a measure, providing, first, compulsory use throughout the British Isles of whole wheat flour instead of white flour; second, a ban on all fancy cakes and pastry, and, third, the institution of meatless days, on which neither shops nor restaurants will be allowed to sell meat.

LIVE STOCK MARKET

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Receipts heavy; market strong. Prices: Choice heavy steers, $8.35 to $8.75; choice butcher, $7.25 to $7.75; good heifers, $7 to $7.50; heavy feeders, $6.30 to $6.50; spring lambs, $10 to $11.40; others unchanged.

Winnipeg To Go Into Business

Examiner Special:

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 15.—The City Council will ask the Legislature for power to go into the bread-baking, dairying, and fuel business as a municipality. The dairy will cost a quarter of a million, and will be located near Stony Mountain Quarries, owned by the city.

MILK WAGON IN SMASH UP

Yesterday afternoon the milk cart belonging to Mr. Hetherington, the local milk dealer, had a bad spill on Stewart Street (North). The horses took fright at the top of the hill. The cart was upset and badly smashed, and Tuesday's supply of milk left behind. Mr. Hetherington, who was driving the cart, escaped with a bad shaking up.

TRUE BILL RETURNED AGAINST MRS. DAVIS

LINDSAY, Nov. 15.—The Supreme Court or Fall Assizes opened at the Court House yesterday afternoon, with Mr. Justice Latchford presiding. Considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings in view of the fact that Mrs. Davis, of Kinmount is standing her trial for shooting one Spenceley, of that village on September 6th last.

In opening the court Mr. Justice Latchford congratulated the county on its immunity from crime, as was evidenced by the fact that only one criminal case was on the docket.

TRUE BILL RETURNED.

The Grand Jury returned a true bill against Mrs. Davis on the charge of murder.

WHISTLES ARE BANNED.

Brantford, Nov. 14.—The Dominion Railway Board sustained the action of Mayor Bowlby, in ordering the cessation of whistle blowing and bell ringing in the city limits by the T. H. & B. and other roads.

POLES UP, TREES DOWN.

Board of Works Authorizes Erection of 14 Poles, Removal of 5 Trees.

The Board of Works last night granted the Bell Telephone Co. permission to place six poles on the south side of Parnell street and eight poles on the north side of Romaine street.

David O'Connell, 451 Concession street, was authorized to remove five shade trees.

Sir Sam Hughes Comments On Current Topics Said To Have Hastened End

"I Am Still Doing the Work of Ten Men, Twenty-four Hours a Day" Was a Recent Statement by the "Lion of Lindsay"—"I Can Get a Million Recruits Any Time I Want Them" Was Another.

(The Toronto Star)

Away back in the year 1913, Aug. 23 was the precise date, and Montreal the place, Sir Sam Hughes, then Colonel the Honourable, whose resignation was requested and accepted by the Premier primarily on account of his habit of talking, declared the policy of himself and his colleagues in the Government. They would, he said, keep their eyes and ears open, and their mouths shut.

Speeches made and interviews given by Sir Sam during his visit to Toronto last week were the culmination of a series that kept the Premier so continually in hot water that he must have thought Sir Sam a Knight Commander of the Turkish Bath. In view of Sir Sam's announcement in the days of long ago, extracts from his speeches and interviews made in Toronto, especially during his last visit, make interesting reading.

"I am still doing the work of ten men, 24 hours a day," replied Sir Sam to a Star interviewer, who sought the Minister's opinion on the curtailment of his powers. That doesn't look as if my powers were curtailed, does it?"

Sir Sam's speeches before the Empire Club and in the Metropolitan Church on Thursday last, are thought to have been the last straws that broke the camel's back. Charges against the British authorities that they did not properly care for Canadian wounded and that they scrapped Canadian equipment substituting inferior material, and his declaration on the question of conscription, no doubt hastened the end that had already begun. He declared that the statements were made "advisedly and on his own responsibility," as were all the statements he made during his visit, and in the light of subsequent happenings, were no doubt an endeavour to forestall the blow that was to come.

"Our transports, our rifles, our saddles, our harness, our shovels, equipment, clothing and boots, were all set aside and supplanted by inferior articles," declared Sir Sam.

"The splendid surgeons who gave up thousands and tens of thousands of dollars for the cause of the Canadian soldier, had never put a knife into a man," he said in regard to the medical services in Britain. "Instead of that the British Government had left them to the care of first-year medical students and other gentlemen." He also declared that Canadian soldiers had been sent back to the trenches before they were half well.

Dealing with the question of conscription in the Metropolitan Church Sir Sam declared: "If it should be necessary to resort to conscription, I submit that this matter should be placed on some proper basis, leaving those districts that contributed their quota exempt."

The Mayor and His Esteemed Nose.

Statements on current topics made by Sir Sam during his several visits to Toronto stirred the city—militant and civil—on more than one occasion.

"The Mayor will have to keep his esteemed nose clean or he won't have any soldiers in Toronto at all this winter," declared Sir Sam in September, 1915, after Mayor Church had criticized the shortage of uniforms.

"We are getting two recruits for every one we need," was another statement made on the same occasion.

"Fine! How else could they be but fine? Didn't I pick 'em out myself?" was the reply he made during the same interview to an inquiry as to the conduct of the Canadians at the front.

Sets the Pace for the World.

"My recruiting campaign will set the pace for the whole world," declared Sir Sam, six weeks later. "They are trying it in England now."

"I can get a million recruits any time I want them," declared Sir Sam on another occasion when questioned again about his "two recruits to one" statement.

Few things have stirred the city of Toronto so much as Sir Sam Hughes' public criticism of the militia mobilization in the city in November of 1914. "The fact that the whole militia of Toronto was mobilized yesterday is to my mind a piece of ridiculous nonsense," declared the Minister at the Y.M.C.A. "The mobilization yesterday was a piece of the worst military tactics that could possibly have been carried on." He declared that the principal thing he had found in Toronto was "a panicy feeling."

"Show me a 'grousing' returned soldier, and I will show you a man who pawned his overcoat" was an epigram coined by Sir Sam on another visit to Toronto.

"Toronto is the greatest place for getting het up about little fiddling questions," was another remark. "This liquor for soldiers, for example. By the way Toronto talks you would think soldiers were drunkards. But I know that soldiers as a class are a soberer lot than the class that criticizes them."

"Yes, sir, Armand Lavergne is a nice boy, a nice chap," said Sir Sam on another occasion. "Too bad this thing has cropped up. He has his belief that Canada shouldn't mix up in the Empire's war, and he is entitled to his opinion, the same as anybody else. Lavergne's a very decent chap, and I quite understand his feelings on the matter."

Those 8,000 Sweet Creatures.

"Do you think 8,000 darling, loving sweet creatures like the Women's Christian Temperance Association would behave themselves any better?" asked Sir Sam on another occasion, when referring to charges of drunkenness and immorality at Exhibition Camp. "Do you think you can find 8000 of the ministers, or the mayors, or the boards of control who would behave themselves any better?"

"Canadian manufacturers are keen shoyl contracts now when they find there is money in them," was Sir Sam's comment on another occasion. "They would not touch them at first."

"Kind of handed it out to them, didn't I?" was the Minister's observation when he visited Toronto for the first time after the Meredith-Duff inquiry. "Taught them that I won't take puppyism from the Angel Gabriel."

"It's a matter of supreme indifference to me—mere piffle from start to finish," was his comment on the proceedings at Ottawa.

"Allison is one of the biggest and best men in Canada—and the cleanest, too," was another comment. "Allison has earned credit for what he has done and for the enemies and traducers he has made. Who are they, this disreputable little clique? Line them up and look them over for yourself."

"It is the best rifle in the world, and you have never heard it criticised by a man who used it at the front," said Sir Sam of the Ross rifle on more than one occasion.

THE MOTHER'S PART IN THE "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE",

Mother Maurice Plays a Wonderful Role in This Grand Picture

Broad, human, sympathetic, lovableness, reflected in the soft glimmer of her eyes and her snow-white hair, have endeared this sweet-hearted woman to all her co-workers and to an ever-growing host of admirers.

Not only is she the "mother confessor" to all her "boys" and "girls" of the Vitagraph Company who find in Mother Maurice a great wealth of human kindness and tenderness, but on the screen these same heart-appealing emotions have registered just as strongly.

Perhaps the studious life of her earlier years is in her part responsible for her sympathetic kindliness, or perhaps her contact with the world, later in professional life, has divulged to her the ashes of the human heart.

Nearly fifty years ago when her "silver strands were golden," Miss Maurice started her professional career in Pittsburg in a farce, but gravitated toward Shakespearean roles, with John McCollough, Edwin Booth and Lawence, and then with Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle."

"Mother Maurice," who plays the wonderful role of the mother in "The Battle Cry of Peace" to be shown at the Grand Opera House on Friday and Saturday, has won the title "The Mother of the Movies," through the sweet smile which speaks for itself of her charming personality.

Are We Downhearted?-NO!

THE desolation and hardships of war, and the worst of winter weather, cannot damp the spirits of our Canadians when the Christmas boxes arrive from "home".

As you plan the parcel for HIM who is dear to you, don't forget how keenly Gillette shaving equipment is appreciated in active service. If he already has a send him a generous supply of Gillette Blades, for probably he is sharing the razor with his pals who are not so fortunate.

Those who haven't been through trench life can scarcely realize how good it feels to the boys to have a Gillette shave—smooth and easy—clean and comfortable. That's the kind of shave they can get with a Gillette, under conditions where any other razor would be helpless.

Whatever else you put in his Christmas box, be sure there's a Gillette Safety Razor or a supply of Blades. Your Hardware Dealer, Druggist or Jeweler will be glad to show you an assortment—"Bulldogs" and Standard Sets at $5.00—Pocket Editions at $5.00 and $6.00—Combination Sets at $6.50 up.

OVERSEAS MEN IN LONDON

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

It is interesting to note what pleases the different men who come to London for their leaves. All over the city there are clubs for the Canucks, Anzacs and Springboks (South Africans) where the requests of the men are granted so far as it is possible to do so.

Their one real aim is enjoyment and he would be an unusually dense soldier who could spend six days or even less in London without improving his education and enjoying himself at the same time. Really valuable education, like happiness, most often comes incidently in the pursuit of something else and the channels through which our soldiers learn will be as varied as their tastes.

"I wish you would tell me where I should go to see suicides throw themselves into the Thames," was the request of a Springbok, who in a hospital ship all the way from Egypt had dreamed of the things he would see in London. He was disappointed that visits to Waterloo and London bridges had failed to reveal to him the sight he had so long imagined.

A new Zealander had nursed for 20 years, an ambition to attend Sunday service at St. Paul's and his first request on arrival at one of these clubs was for some one to conduct him on a Sunday morning to the Cathedral. Then some boys' greater ambition is to take an actress to supper—this is an entertainment they do not expect the ladies of the club to provide for them. Many are anxious to hear the mob orators in Hyde Park. A South African wanted to see the best comedians and another wanted "something high class"—an opera preferred. Many are disappointed at the grime which colours the buildings while others see beauty in its light and shade, and many are disappointed not to see a "London particular" fog.

Some men's one idea of a holiday is perfect freedom, and these must roam about at will, asking no engagements even with themselves for more than five minutes ahead. Others are like the man who said, when he was asked if he would like to be motored to Rochampton Club, that he did not care where he went so long as there was someone with him who knew the right way. He had been lost ever since he arrived in London.

Sunday is the day when London is most crowded with soldiers and when there is least available in the way of entertainment for them. On fine days the river attracts many for "high-brows". The Albert Hall Sunday concerts are a source of great pleasure, to the musical, others are interested in the building and especially in the fact that seats and boxes are held on a nine hundred and ninety-nine years' lease.

Petticoat Lane is one of the few attractions available on Sunday mornings, when the Jews sell their wares in the open, but the "Zoo" is the chief resource of those who have to tell these men what they can do on Sundays. A great many love the museums and art galleries, the Tower and Madame Tussaud's, but these are closed on Sundays.

Their requests are strange as well as amusing. One man required his "mother's sister" traced—he had not been in communication with her since his mother died eighteen years before. Many Canadians ask to be directed to an ice cream soda fountain; one wanted to know the cost of a blouse one of the waitresses wore, as he wished to buy one like it to send to his wife in Canada; but it was an Australian who wished to be introduced to a nice girl "for keeps".

The delights of a "bed that gives when you put your hand on it" and the privilege of "sleeping in" as some Scotch Canadians call staying late in bed are looked forward to by some men more than all the historic sights. Most touching are the homesick lads, so tired of the kind of loneliness that exists amid the sociability of barrack life and a crowd, that neither museums, palaces, music halls, streets, nor parks have any charm as compared with a few happy hours in a real home.

What London can teach is much less essential than what she can learn from these men. To some a round of musical comedies, river trips and garden parties are as unsatisfactory as a course of illustrated lectures in art, science and history is to others. To great thing and the thing all the clubs aim at is to give each man the best possible good time after his own heart, not after something, somebody else's.—J.E.H. (Canadian Overseas).

TAKE IRON FOR YOUR BLOOD AND PHOSPHOROUS FOR THE NERVES

Iron makes pale faces rosy, and phosphorus restore nerves, making you 100 per cent strenger in a few days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, digest well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to attain this glow of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested, then your bowels are unable to take any nutriment from the undigested food and the food begins to ferment, causing indigestion, the impurities run into your kidneys soon follows liver trouble, constipation, rheumatism, etc., and your skin becomes sallow, your nerves shake, you feel tired and all worn out, you take all sorts of medicines and you find nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorus to restore your nerves. First see how much you weigh, then go to your druggist and get some Bonised Phosphorus with iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 100 per cent. stronger. The moment that Bonised Phosphorus with iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By combining the iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Bonised Phosphorus with iron as a tonic of more does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine, nor any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. This is not a stimulant which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach liver and kidney complaints. Bonised Phosphorus with iron is dispensed in this city only at P. C. Weber's Drug Store, Charlotte street.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

FINEST SHOTS OF THE YEAR ON AMERICAN GOLF COURSES

(By Grantland Rice.)

Chic Evans and Bob Gardner in their match for the amateur golf championship had come to the 17th hole at Merion with Evans one up in a hard fought match.

When Evans, who had the honors, stepped to the tee he had as hard a shot to make as we have ever seen. The distance to the pin from the tee was 215 yards. The green was so well trapped that only a narrow entrance was allowed where only a well played shot would turn the trick.

And what is still more important, upon this particular occasion a young gale was whistling across the course at a most difficult angle. A slice meant disaster. A hook meant equal trouble. Even a straight shot would more than likely have been blown off the line. There was just one shot to play—a fairly low brassie, with a faint pull to hold the ball against the tide of the wind; a shot that required full power, and yet a delicacy of touch that raw chance could hardly produce. Evans started the ball about eight feet to the right of the cup, with just enough pull to bore its way against the wind and drop exactly hole high six feet to the left for a fairly possible 2.

As the ball stopped Jerry Travers, ex-open champion, made this remark: "Beyond any doubt, considering all conditions, that is the finest brassie shot I ever saw."

JOCK HUTCHINSON'S MIRACLE SHOT.

At Siwanoy, in the big professional tournament for the Wanamaker Trophy, Jock Hutchinson, the braw Scot, and Jim Barnes, the tall Englishman, were fighting out the final round.

The fifth hole at Siwanoy is about 450 yards in length. One hundred and forty yards from the screen there is a deep, water covered ditch, that is hardly more than three yards wide at the top.

This ditch, replete at the bottom with mud, water and rocks, is considered unplayable.

Barnes had just put his second shot on this hole ten yards from the green. Hutchinson, trying for a long wallop, toped his second into the ditch.

Barnes had in sight a sure 5, and a possible 4. For Hutchinson to drop out meant an almost sure loss of the hole. But when he came to his ball in the narrow gash, Jock found it partially under water, three-quarters sunk in the ooze, with a sheer face only a foot and a half beyond rising four feet above the ball.

The Scot waded in with a niblick—a miracle resulted. The ball had to come up straight enough to clear the side of the ditch—an almost impossible shot. It did this—and something more. For, having once risen from its captivity, it seemed to take a forward spin the air, and when it came to rest was just four feet from the pin, 145 yards away. Three leading professionals standing back of Hutchinson, took council, or counsel, as the case may be, and offered this verdict: "The greatest shot of the year, and one that only a master could have played."

But even then they were unable to explain what wrist wizardry could lift a ball from the water almost straight into the air and still land it 145 yards further on. The pity of it was that a golfer who could make such a shot finally had to lose the battle on a 5-foot putt. Such being the weird and uncanny ways of the royal and ancient game.

ENTER THE KID PHENOM—BOBBY JONES.

The sixteenth hole at Merion is one of the hardest holes on the course to escape without disaster.

It is around 440 yards in length, with the green set high, guarded by a grotto replete with sand, mounds and other trouble—a grotto sixty feet across, a hundred feet in length, and at least fifteen feet below the surface of the green.

After a good drive this hole calls for a brassie, spoon or long iron shot, depending on the wind.

Upon the average a 180-yard iron shot is needed to do the trick. In the amateur championship young Bobby Jones came to this hole in three matches with the battle closely joined.

In each case he knew well enough that any sort of a miss meant trouble of the worst sort.

There could be no finer test of iron play or of iron nerve than the carry to this green, yet three times in succession Jones dropped the ball less than eight feet away, one full midiron against Frank Dyer for 180-yard carry stopping exactly three feet from the cup. And Jones followed this shot at the next hole, 215 yards long, by planting a wallop with a driving iron 4 feet from the cup for a 2. It would be hard to recall two finer iron shots played in succession than these two—one from 180 yards and the other 215 yards away, and neither a good club length from the pin.

DYER'S FINE SHOT.

It was against young Jones in this tournament that Dyer played one of the great shots of the year. At the fourth hole the Pennsylvania champion hooked his tee shot far to the left. The ball pulled up in a patch of loose earth at the edge of a trap, leaving in addition to that a downhill lie, to prove again that "the way of the transgressor is hard." From this lie Dyer was called upon to play a 150 pitch to a fast green, guarded by a deep trap. He was forced also to play to a narrow green, with sure trouble beyond. It would have been the hardest sort of a shot from a perfect lie, padded with grass.

But to get the ball up with sufficient backspin from that down hill, dirt-blighted landing, looked impossible. Yet by taking just a nip of the loose dirt Dyer got the ball high in the air and brought it to earth with a sharp backspin only six feet from the cup.

Such, however, is the carefree or careless confidence of youth. Jones in place of being depressed by this remarkable recovery, barely waited for the applause to die away before he dropped a high mashie niblick pitch even closer to the pin.

"He isn't old enough yet," remarked a veteran golfer near by, "to know when he ought to lose a hole."

Yankees Spend $232,190,000 In Year For Golf

ROUGH ESTIMATE SHOWS $182 A YEAR PER PLAYER—1,400 CLUBS IN COUNTRY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—In a year what does your golf cost you? Have you ever figured it out, or do you know any one who has? Not so long ago a prominent amateur made a table in which he estimated that there are 1,300 golf clubs in this country, with a membership around 350,000. The average membership is given as [illegible] with hundreds of clubs with a much larger list, while there are hundreds more organizations with lists ranging from 100 to 200.

The average yearly expense, merely a guess, for the man who takes up the game for the first time is about $[illegible], proportioned as follows: Initiation, $50; dues, $50; balls, $20; clubs, $17; car fare, $20; caddies, $25, and with the exception of the initiation and dues this seems reasonable.

Golfers Spend $42,000,000.

It is said that the 350,000 golfers will spend $42,000,000 a year, an amount that does not include initiation fees. The average acreage of 1,300 clubs given is 160, which is a trifle high when the number of nine hole courses is figured. Placing the value of $600 an acre gives a total valuation of $74,000,000.

In discussing the cost of upkeep the same individual figures, $7,800,000, which is somewhat out of proportion, as most of the nine hole courses will average from $2,000 to $5,000, while few of the eighteen hole courses run over $10,000 a year. The cost of the clubs in the members' bags, averaging seven clubs to the bag, is $6,125,000. Figuring that each player will buy on an average of one club a year, he estimates a further outlay of $875,000 for clubs.

The average professional earns about $1,200 a year, which gives a total of $360,000. The caddies earn about $60,000 a week, or a total of $3,000,000 a year. The real estate value is placed at $100,000,00 and $50,000,000 more is spent each year for labourers and caddies, and fully 300,000 men and boys are employed by the golf clubs. That would give the following table:

Real estate	$100,000,000
Professionals	360,000
Labourers and caddies	50,000,000
Cost of upkeep	7,800,000
Golf balls	7,000,000
Golf clubs	7,000,000
Initiation and dues	60,000,000
Total	$232,190,000

While some of these figures might not be borne out by actual facts, others are too conservative. Certainly no other game in the country has as much money invested in it and no devotees of a sport spend more money than do the American golfers.

He Says It's Worth the Price.

Getting down to individuals, the wise man stops estimating when he comes to gold, unless he figures that its cost is in excess of what it should be. One man was asked how much he spent in a year, and his reply was: "I don't know what it is and I don't want to know, but it is worth whatever I spend and more. That is the one thing that I do not keep an account of. It would take half of my pleasure away if I did."

off immediately to him. In the parcel is enclosed a printed card, asking the recipient if he is willing to assign 10s. (2.50) a month to the Society towards the cost of their parcels. This suggestion was adopted at the request of many of the men, who, being in receipt of their full pay, wished to contribute towards the cost.

This assignment is altogether voluntary, and no man is under any compulsion whatever in the matter, and even if he refuses to comply with the suggestion, he suffers not one whit, but receives his weekly parcel the same as every other Canadian boy. To the great credit of the men, however, the refusals are very few.

Do the Parcels Reach the Boys?

Yes, they do. At our Headquarters, in London, they have thousands of acknowledgements. Since the Peterborough Branch undertook to pay for the forty-nine local boys who are prisoners, Miss Morrow has received a large number of cards of acknowledgement from them. Sometimes a parcel may go astray, nor can the Society guarantee that every German official is honest, but if once in a while some parcel fails to reach its destination, that is hardly sufficiently strong evidence on which to convict the Society of negligence, unfairness, or taking money, and then sending no parcel. It must also be remembered that some boys never write a letter or card if they can possibly help it, and it would be most surprising if among the 2,500 Canadian prisoners in Germany there were not a few content to get the parcels, but careless in acknowledging them.

The following letter explains itself:

The Secretary, Canadian Red Cross Society:

I am writing you this letter to inform you of my arrival in Switzerland and to thank the ladies of your Society for the manner in which you have looked after me during the fifteen months of my captivity in Germany. I suppose it is unnecessary for me to say that but for the parcels received from friends, the conditions of the unfortunate prisoners would be absolutely unbearable. Your Society has acted nobly to the Canadians, and I take this opportunity of expressing my gratitude.

The reason why I made no assignment to the Society was that I had previously assigned all I could afford to my mother for parcels from home. Through some mischance your Society did not get my name until the 5/12/15 parcels were sent off and, as I have never asked anyone for anything since I was made prisoner, I made other arrangements about food and winter clothing. I am glad to state, however, that outside my own case I personally know of only two cases among three hundred Canadians who were overlooked in your office, and both these cases were attended to by Jan. 15, 1916. Nearly every Canadian in Germany has to thank the Canadian Red Cross Society that he is not going hungry to-day, or at least that he is independent of that unspeakably filthy German soup.

I think the parcels you are now sending to Germany are packed with fine judgment. Many men would often do without meat or butter or health-preserving fruit if it were not for your kindness. I should like to see your good work shouted from the housetops in Canada, where, thank God, few, or none, know the gnawing pangs of hunger.

I hope you will write me, and, although this is simply a personal letter, I am sure the other Canadians join with me in sending sincere thanks for your continued labours on our behalf.

With all good wishes, I remain,

Dear Madam, sincerely yours,
(Signed) .....
Sgt. 2 Gd.

Continue Good Work.

Many of our subscribers cannot afford to pay $7 a month in order to 'adopt' a certain prisoner, but we ask them to increase their subscriptions, if possible, but if impossible, the local Society will look after them.

The Society every month, when forwarding its subscription every month to Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley, says "this is for our own Peterborough boys, the surplus, if any, to help other boys." We hope matters pertaining to 'Prisoners Parcels' will now be clear to all those contributing or desirous of so doing.

Signed on behalf of the Executive of Peterborough Red Cross Society,

Annie Forbes Allan.
E. Morrow.

Letters From Overseas

Mrs. J. D. Manley has received the following letter from her son, Gunner Claude Manley, who went overseas with the 33rd Battery, and is now at the front with the 4th Battery:

France, Oct. 27, 1916.

Dear Mother,—I received your letter to-day and one from Verna, and was pleased to hear from home again.

I received your snapshots that Verna had taken, and it sure makes one think of home.

I am sitting in a dugout. We have a fire burning in a can, so it is warm and comfortable.

I received two parcels about a week ago. They do not come regularly, so it is hard to tell you if I get them all, but I think I do. In your next parcel send some heavy shirts and leather gloves and socks. The weather is getting a little cool now and I will need them.

I was not far from Barrie when he was killed. I have been talking with him often, and was very sorry to hear of his getting it. He died before they got him to the dressing station.

I have not seen any of the 93rd Battalion fellows yet, but they are around here somewhere.

Remember me to all the people around and to grandma and grandpa, and tell them to write often.

Well I will close now, hoping this will find you feeling well and enjoying life.

Your loving son,
"Cliff."

Mrs. McKinley, of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, has received the following letter:

Dear Mrs. McKinley,—Just a few lines to thank you personally for the socks sent by the Wives' and Mothers' Club.

I understand the socks were sent for the old members of the 39th Battalion that are here in Sandling.

I am very thankful; and I am sure the rest of the boys are, knowing that we are not forgotten yet.

We are having our winter weather here now, rain nearly every day.

I keep meeting different Peterborough boys over here every day, and they are all in the best of health and anxious to have a turn at Fritz.

Wishing the best of success to the Wives' and Mothers' Club, and thanking you again for the socks.

Sincerely yours,
One of the Original 39th.

Colson, manager of the Oriental Hotel, was appointed Superintendent of the Children's Shelter at a salary of $500 per annum, out of which Miss Colson will procure and pay for all help required. Miss Colson come highly recommended by the committee of the Shelter in Renfrew, with which she was connected for a year and five months.

In an interview with Miss Colson she stated that she went into the work because of her love of little children and desire to allay suffering amongst them. Miss Colson's charming personality and sympathetic nature will be appreciated in the office which she has undertaken. She will undertake her new duties from December 1st. The following is a letter accompanying a purse of gold presented to Miss Colson on her departure from Renfrew:

Renfrew, Ont., Sept. 30th, 1916.
Miss Colson, Town:

Dear Madam,— Kindly accept the enclosed as a slight token of the appreciation of the Children's Aid Society of your services as Matron of the Home. The executive feel they can never in any way adequately repay you for the work which you have carried on among the children, wards of the society. Nor can we call this a gift as every cent of it, and more, have been earned by your during the time you have spent with us at the same time we wish to convey to you the knowledge that your work has not passed unnoticed but has been appreciated by every member of the society. We regard your departure as a very real loss to the society and especially to the children among whom your work has been ideal.

Wishing you on behalf of the Society much happiness in the future, and assuring you of the good wishes of every member, I am,

Yours very truly,
E. J. STEWART,
On behalf of the executive of the Children's Aid Society.

MRS. DEVINS HONOURED BY BIBLE CLASS

Receives a Handsome Cut-glass Water Pitcher and Eulogistic Address on Eve of Her Departure From City.

A FAITHFUL MEMBER

The Co-workers' Bible class of the George street Methodist church gathered at the home of Mrs. Curtis last night to say farewell to one of their most faithful and energetic members, Mrs. W. J. Devins who leaves on Saturday for Dundas where her husband is manager of the Grafton store. Mrs. Devins has been a member of the class for along period and her services have been thoroughly appreciated, as is evidenced by last night's affair.

After a short business meeting had been transacted and refreshments had been served by Mrs. Curtis, Mrs. Devins was presented with a beautiful cut glass water pitcher. The presentation was made by Mr. James Kendry while the following address was read by Mrs. W. Cunningham:

Dear Mrs. Devins,—We, the members of the Co-workers' Bible class of George street Methodist church desire in some weak way to express our heartfelt regret for your removal from the city. Although we know your removal to Dundas means for your husband and yourself enlarged possibilities through promotion in business, yet we are selfish enough to look at your going from our standpoint, and realize keenly how much we will all miss you from the class and the real loss we are sustaining in your removal. You have always been a willing worker, ready to take any place, perform any duty we have laid upon you. You have been indeed tried in the balance and have not been found wanting. Your cheerful optimism has always been a real help to the class as a whole in its work, and to each member in particular, through example. You indeed possess the art of living in that you desire to make others happy. Will you please accept this small gift and let it express some measure of our esteem and love for you. When you look upon its clear, sparkling purity let it remind you of the blessing accorded to those who are pure in heart. We will not forget to pray for you and your family, and hope you will soon have the joy of clasping your dear boy in your arms after this terrible struggle is ended, when our beloved Empire and her Allies shall have tasted the sweets of a victory for righteousness.

Again assuring you of our sorrow at your removal.

On behalf of the class.
Lucy Cunningham, Secretary.
Elizabeth Kendray, Teacher.

Mrs. Devins made a suitable reply, expressing her regret at having to sever her relations with the class. "The class sang, "She's a Jolly Good Fellow" in honour of the departing member, after which a vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Curtis for her hospitality.

Geo. Lockie's Suit For $1,000 Against North Monaghan Is Proceeding Before Judge To-day

An action for $1,000 damages from the municipality of North Monaghan was begun before His Honour Judge Huycke, this morning, at a special session of the County Court, with George Lockie, who resides on Lot 4 Con. 7, of the township as the plaintiff. The suit was practically divided into two sections, $500 for trespass by reason of the municipality maintaining a road on land Lockie declares is a strip of his farm, and $500 or the municipality's neglect to fulfil an agreement in which a stream was diverted from Lockie's farm on the promise of the Township to provide sufficient water for his cattle.

Lockie is 86 years old and spent a lifetime on the farm. The present damage suit appeared to be the issue of a long disagreement and dispute concerning the exact boundary line between Lockie's, lot 4 and lot 5, on which W. J. Hall lived. Hall cut the timber on this boundary and Lockie claimed it as his, that it had been cut from his land. He engaged the late Mr. Cameron, the surveyor, to determine the boundary line, and his work showed that Hall had cut Lockie's timber. In his turn Hall engaged Mr. Wilkins of Norwood to strike the line, and by the latter's survey Hall had cut only his own timber. With nothing determined or settled with finality Mr. Cameron was re-engaged and this time "killed his first line," as Mr. Lockie termed it. In the meantime he had rendered an account to Hall for the value of the timber. Lockie's next step was to engage Mr. W. L. Innes, now manager of the Dominion Canners' Co plant at Simcoe, who ran the line coincident with Cameron's first survey. Mr. Goodfellow, who lived on the south end of lot 4 and had been away from there fourteen years, told Lockie that the original post between the two lots was in a clump of cedars through which the boundary ran. He had seen it with his father when a boy. He made a sworn statement to Innes to that effect and this spot was on the boundary Mr. Innes struck. A Toronto surveyor named James made a survey and ran the line practically where Innes had struck it.

In the meantime Hall and Whitfield, the farmers who resided on lots 4 and 5, which was supposed to be on the west side of lot 5. They used the Wilkins survey and Mr. Lockie claims that they encroached some fifty feet on his property. The road was told as a short-cut to South Monaghan to Messrs. Lattimer and McIlmoyle and six or seven years ago it was taken over by the Township and has been since maintained by North Monaghan.

Mr. Lockie states that for years he had put up fences and other obstacles on the boundary line, but the other parties removed them.

Re the Water Case.

Regarding the other side of the damage case Mr. Lockie states that it dates back to some 26 years ago. The municipality wanted to build a line between concessions 7 and 8. A stream that circled through his property presented the necessity of the township building three bridges unless it was diverted. He states that he consented to the diversion necessary providing culverts were put in and kept clear, and that sufficient fresh water was provided for his cattle. This agreement, he claims, was not fulfilled by the Township. Thus he claims $500 on the latter count, and $500 for the trespass of the roadway and further asks for re-possession of this fifty-foot strip.

Messrs. Peck and Kerr are representing North Monaghan, and Messrs. O'Connell and Wearing, the plaintiff, Lockie. After dinner Mr. Peck commenced the cross-examination of the plaintiff.

FARMER FINED $50 FOR SELLING DETERIORATED MILK TO FACTORY

A patron of Myrtle cheese factory, Ennismore, was fined $50 and costs amounting to $53.10, by Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of selling deteriorated milk to the factory. The accused put up the gallant plea that his wife did it, and that she had thoughtlessly extracted cream and replaced it with water. Magistrate Dumble stated that agriculture was Canada's greatest industry, and dairying its most prominent branch.

way of an example to other farmers industry. His Worship extracted a considerable portion of the extra money the accused obtained from the high price of cheese.

Inspector Ward made a complete test of the milk in this district some weeks ago and forwarded his report to Mr. C. C. Farlow. The lack of solids in this particular case irked this morning caught his attention and he in turn sent Inspector Gibson of Kingston to lay an information and prosecute the case. Inspector Ward's test showed an appreciable lack of solids to the extent of 28 per cent below normal. This was explained by the separation of the cream and the addition of skim milk or water.

Magistrate Dumble showed no inclination to deal lightly with the accused and unceremoniously applied a fine of $50.

Do you feel in need of help, and surely we all do. Have you friends you would like to help into a better life, and who has not? Well, here is the promise that cannot fail. Matt., 18; 19-20:

"Again I say unto you that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask it shall be done for them of My Father, which is in heaven, (20) For when two or three are gathered together in My name, there am I in the midst of them."

We desire especially to help those who do not attend any place of worship; but our strong aim is to help all and we want all to feel that they are welcome. We welcome laymen workers from any church. 4d-113

For All Complexion Ills

If the skin be colorless, sallow, muddy, over-red, blotchy or freckled, nothing will so surely overcome the condition as ordinary mercolized wax. It literally takes off a bad complexion—absorbs the dead and scarcely perceptible particles of surface skin, gently, gradually, causing no inconvenience at all. A new complexion is then its evidence, clear, spotless, delicately soft and beautiful. One ounce of this wax procurable at any druggists, will rejuvenate even the worst complexion. It is used like cold cream.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Alfalfa leaves, or even alfalfa hay, will be relished by the poultry.

All kinds of farm produce are going to be inordinately expensive this winter. Get the cows producing and the hens laying.

Ten years ago the production of creamery butter in Nova Scotia totalled 164,000 pounds. The output for this year is estimated at 1,600,000 pounds.

There is no profit in hens that are given merely a 'maintenance ration'. Give the fowls enough feed to enable them not only to keep alive, but to produce eggs as well.

The Guernsey cow Langwater Hope is the third of the breed to make a record of more than 1,000 pounds of butterfat in a year. Her production for the year totalled 19,282 pounds of milk and 1,008.17 pounds of butterfat, an average of 5.05 per cent.

Get the eggs to market as frequently as possible, meantime keeping them in a cool dry place.

Fifteen years ago W. H. Gibson of Clarke Township could pick his entire apple crop in a day. Last year he shipped 3,500 barrels.

A little oil cake and bran form an excellent addition to the winter ration of horses. These help to keep the bowels regular and the hair soft.

Since the war began the exports of horses and mules from the United States have reached a total value of about $200,000,000. Exports of horses alone amounted to 600,877 head.

Charcoal is given to poultry as a corrective, and not as a food, asserts R. M. Sherwood, acting head of the Department of Poultry Husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural College.

A mixture of charcoal, sulphur, air-slaced lime and common salt is excellent as part of the winter ration for hogs. Wood and coal ashes dumped into the hog yard are also beneficial.

No Greater Outrage Ever Committed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON Nov. 16.—Commenting on the Belgian deportations in the House of Commons yesterday Lord Robert Cecil said no greater outrage was ever committed even by the Germans.

"Meat Prices Will Not Come Down" is the cheerful news from the Department of Agriculture. Meat prices will not worry the man or woman who knows that a Shredded Wheat Biscuit will supply more real body-building nutriment than beefsteak or eggs and at much less cost. Shredded Wheat remains the same price, the same high quality, supplying all the nutriment a man needs for a half-day's work. Two shredded wheat biscuits with peaches and cream or other fruits make a complete, nourishing meal at a cost of not over five cents.

The Teutonic Reserve Is Not Sufficient To Feed The Firing Line

Some Sections of the Enemy Battlefront Are Denuded to the Last Degree of Safety—Latest British Offensive Has Made Serious Inroads in the German Lines—Military Expert of the New York "Times" Reviews the Recent Drive.

ON THE ROUMANIAN FRONT

After a long period of comparative inactivity, the British have launched a major attack in an entirely new section of the Somme line. This section is in part the line that received the first shock of the British offense in July. At that time the British advanced beyond the village of Serre, but the Germans, pivoting on their strongly fortified position at Thiepval, swung back and regained most of the ground lost in this section. Now after several months the British have again struck, and this time have made serious inroads in the German lines.

There is subject matter in this for serious consideration. Three months ago this position was practically impregnable. Tuesday the British swept over it for a depth of more than a mile, capturing a large number of prisoners and many defensive guns. The question is, why the difference then and now? No better proof could be asked, if, indeed, further proof were needed of a fact frequently stated. German numbers have suffered to such an extent that they are not sufficient to defend more than a comparatively short section of their line. A blow at any other section during the last month has always gained materially and with comparative ease.

ATTACKS WERE SUCCESSFUL.

It is noticeable that during the last month the heaviest fighting has been before Les Boeufs and Gueudecourt and for the village of Sailly-Saillisel. But two isolated attacks at the extremities of the Somme line, one at Chaulnes and the other that of the British, delivered while the fighting in other quarters has been at its height, have been entirely successful.

This may not mean an insufficiency of German numbers. But if it means anything else the cause is not apparent. Certainly the German reserves is not sufficient to feed into the firing line at a rate sufficient to overcome the rate of wastage. Consequently such reinforcements as are thrown into the firing line come from other sections of the line which are denuded to the last degree of safety in order that the threatened point may not be forced to give way.

It is not to be expected that the German line will eventually be broken or forced into a general giving way. At the same time, the present situation, as revealed by the success of these isolated attacks, gives ground for the theory that this is a possibility to be considered. The fear of it is apparently in the mind of the German High Comman also, otherwise there would not be so many and such positive protests from the Germans that it cannot be done. If it were not in their minds they would not speak of it. As a matter of fact, no one can speak with authority as to what can or cannot happen. The development of trench warfare is a development of the present war. Such a situation as that which now exists has never been seen before in the history of war, and there is nothing to guide us as to what it may bring forth.

Details of just how far the British have advanced their lines and what the present situation is, are not available as yet. It appears, however, that the British have taken St. Pierre Divion, in Beaumont hamel, and as well the scattered houses of Beaumont which lies between.

The spread of the attack north of the Ancre brook is significant. The ground between the present British lines north of le Sars is strongly held by the Germans, and is such that the advantage of terrain is against the offense. The Butt de Warlencourt affords gun positions and a point of observation which have proved a barrier to the British advance.

ADVANCE UP THE ANCRE VALLEY.

If, however, the British are able to advance up the Ancre Valley two important objects will have been achieved. In the first place, the familiar double salient will have been created, but in two ways. South of the Ancre the Germans will be taken in rear and almost surrounded, while north of the brook a similar situation will have arisen, although in a form not so exaggerated. The German positions south of the brook, which have been giving the British such a great deal of trouble, will be turned, and, taken from the rear will have to be evacuated as the British north of the brook push forward.

In other words, the situation now is that with every advance north of the river not one, but two, sections of the German line will be affected. If the Germans south of the Ancre can be dislodged by a flanking operation in the north, then will come a situation very much to the British liking. The salient, of which Beaucourt has been the apex, is almost a right angle. The sides of this angle are too far apart for the guns on one side to reach to the other. Unless this can be done there is nothing necessarily weak in this form of battle line. At present there is nothing weak in the German position, and will not be until the salient can be sharpened into an acute angle. As this angle is produced the length of German lines, which can be reached by the British artillery, increases so that with each blow a greater front is affected. This is the principal danger to the Germans in this last attack.

When the British are able to gain good gun positions north of the Ancre (and it may be that this last attack has brought them this advantage) the German line, which stretches north from Beaumont Hamel, will be doubled up on short sections at a time. The situation about Combles will then be duplicated. A continuation of this process and the line will then be straightened out from Arras south.

ON THE ROUMANIAN FRONT.

By a roundabout way there comes a report that the Russians have crossed the Danube behind Mackensen in Dobrudja, and, by the threat against his line of communications, have compelled his retreat. It is not apparent that this report is authentic, but it creates an interesting possibility, which has not escaped comment.

Mackensen bases his entire campaign in Dobrudja on the theory that his flanks were safe and could not be turned—that is, the Danube could not be crossed in his rear and troops could not be landed by the Black Sea route behind his right flank. It will probably prove that so far his assumption is correct. But there is no reason to doubt that a movement across the Danube is within the bounds of possibility.

The situation is entirely different from that which existed when the Roumanians tried this expedient some time ago. Now it is recognized that Mackensen is under severe pressure in front, pressure which has driven him back for thirty miles. If an attack is threatened against the single thread upon which all his supplies come, he must turn a part of his forces to meet it. A weakening of his present front in the face of the reverses which it has so far met would be dangerous in the extreme.

The Russians need not cross in great force. A heavy raiding body would be sufficient. Mackensen would then have to fall back or send sufficient troops to the rear to ward off the blow. The effect in either case would be the same—giving up the cherished railroad to the Roumanians.

Margaret Anglin Writes Life Story

Margaret Anglin, Canada's greatest actress, has written the story of her career, and it will be published in five instalments in Everywoman's World, Canada's greatest magazine. The first instalment of this interesting tale of stage life will appear in the Christmas number, on sale November 25.

Margaret Anglin stands out as the leading Canadian actress, without a peer in her profession in the great Dominion. She was born in the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa, while her father was Speaker of the House. She spent most of her youth in Toronto, having been educated at Loretto Abbey. Her life has been crowded with big and interesting things, and Miss Anglin has the art to tell about them in an interesting way. She rose from humble roles to stardom in a few brief years, and created such notable roles as that of Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac", Mrs. Dane in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" and Ruth Jordan in "The Great Divide".

Her story, which will appear exclusively in Everywoman's World, should be an inspiration to every ambitious Canadian girl. No true Canadian woman should miss this wonderful story of a sister's accomplishment, and should make sure of getting every instalment by sending a year's subscription ($1.00) to Everywoman's World, 62 Temperance street, Toronto. Single copies are 10 cents each. The supply is limited, and orders will be filled in order received.

BRITAIN, DEFENDING BLACKLIST, ACCUSES THE UNITED STATES OF HARBOURING PRUSSIAN PLOTTERS

Remarkable Diplomatic Communication Made Public at Washington in Answer to American Protest States That the Government Has Failed to Adequately Suppress Breaches of Neutrality—"I Do Not Think This Will Be Denied," Flat Statement of Viscount Grey—British Position is That Its Action is Taken Legally With the Sole Purpose of Restricting the Action of British Subjects in British Territory and is Not Subject to Protest.

WASHINGTON, D.C., November 16.—In a truly remarkable diplomatic communication Viscount Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, has replied to the protest of the United States against the British blacklisting of firms domiciled within the United States. The text of this note dated October, 12, was made public at the State Department.

The British position is maintained without a suggestion of compromise or concession. The British action is defended legally on the ground that its sole purpose and effect is to restrict the action of British subjects within British territory; in short, that it is strictly municipal legislation, not subject to protest by the United States.

"I can scarcely believe," says Viscount Grey, "that the United States government intends to challenge the right of Great Britain as a sovereign State to pass legislation prohibiting all those who owe her allegiance from trading with any specified persons when such prohibition is found necessary in the public interest."

After stating his defence point blank, the Secretary then proceeds to suggest that "suspicions and insinuations" based upon a misunderstanding have caused the British action to be construed "as an opening for secret and unavowed designs on neutral rights." Such suspicions and insinuations, he declares, "should have no place in the relations between two friendly countries."

HIS LANGUAGE IS EMPHATIC.

Viscount Grey appears to have read in the American protest the suspicion that the British action in blacklisting these firms was not taken primarily as a war measure to further British military interests, but as a trade measure to advance the interests of British traders above neutrals. Against this suspicion the British Minister registers a protest in language incomparable to that used in any note yet received from Downing Street.

He reminds the United States that German firms in foreign countries have been centres for the promotion of Prussian political and social influence, as well as agencies of espionage and paymasters for criminals serving the German government. He then concludes with an unequivocal statement that the United States government has failed to take adequate measures to suppress breaches of neutrality on the part of such German firms within its own territory. "I do not think this will be denied," he states confidently.

"The experience of the war," says the note, "has proved abundantly, as the United States government will readily admit, that many Germans in neutral countries have done all in their power to help the cause of their own country and to injure that of the Allies; in fact, it would be no exaggeration to say that German house abroad have in a large number of cases been used as an integral part of an organization deliberately conceived and planned as an engine for the furtherance of German political and military ambitions. It is common knowledge that German business establishments in foreign countries have been not merely centres of German trade, but active agents for the dissemination of German political and social influence, and for the purpose of espionage.

"In some cases they have even been used as bases of supply for German cruisers and in other cases as organizers and paymasters of miscreants employed to destroy by foul means factories engaged in making or ships engaged in carrying supplies required by the Allies. Such operations have been carried out in the territory even of the United States itself, and I am bound to observe, what I do not think will be denied, that no adequate action yet has been taken by the government of the United States to suppress breaches of neutrality of this particular criminal kind, which I know that they are the first to discountenance and deplore."

In view of this record of German trading houses in foreign countries, Viscount Grey concludes that it is entirely unreasonable for the United States to expect the British government to permit such firms to benefit and receive strength through Britisih trade channels.

LOSS TO THE EMPIRE POSSIBLE.

All restrictions placed upon British subjects against trading with these or any other foreign firms, he explains, must inevitably cause a loss to the British firms, and hence to the British Empire. It would be ridiculous to suppose, he declares, that the British government would suffer that loss merely to strike at neutral trade or in any case where military necessity did not require the sacrifice. The British government, he asserts, has been careful for its own interests only to forbid British trade with such firms as are giving support and strength to the military and political ambitions of Germany.

He then attacks the suggestion often heard in official circles here, namely, that Great Britain is being far more drastic in her exercise of belligerent rights than there is any necessity for her to be, in view of the military situation.

"The idea would seem to be prevalent in some quarters," he says, "that the military position is now such that it is unnecessary for His Majesty's government to take any steps which might prejudice, even to a slight extent, the commerce of neutral countries, that the end of the war is in sight, and that nothing which happens in distant neutral countries can affect the ultimate result.

"If that were really the position it is possible that the measures taken by His Majesty's government might be described as uncalled for but it is not. We may well wish that it were so. Even though the military situation of the Allies has greatly improved, there is still a long and bitter struggle in front of them and one in which justice to the principles for which they are fighting imposes upon them the duty of employing every opportunity and every measure which they can legitimately use to overcome their opponents."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses in eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort but by awakening the action of the liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This rests the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear

Income Heavily Taxed in England

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Jos. Duveen, the Fifth Avenue art dealer, who returned from Europe on the St. Paul, spoke of the advances in the cost of living.

"The people who are suffering most in England now, and who will continue to do so after the war, are those who live upon unearned incomes. A man with an income of $50,000 a year from his estates or stocks in England is receiving only $25,000 a year, as 40 per cent. goes to the Government and the other 10 per cent. is taken up by the increased cost of living.

"The price of food, according to the Duke of Marlborough, who keeps up a big household, has increased 100 per cent. since the war began. He told me this in Paris, and when I returned to London I found for myself that eggs cost 10 cents each and sugar was $1 a pound.

"Gasoline has gone up so high that wealthy people have put away their motor cars, and use taxicabs instead. The English and French people are all confident now about the outcome of the war and believe that with three months good weather the Allies will be able to strike a decisive blow. It is expected that the Russians will make a big forward movement with the Roumanians next spring, and that the war will be over for certain by next summer.

When the barn yard is covered with about half a foot of ice you will realize what an advantage a drain would have been.

MAKING IT PLAIN

A common mistake which some people continue to make is to accept from a druggist an "extract" of cod liver oil thinking they will get the benefits of an emulsion of cod liver oil.

The difference is very great. An "emulsion" contains real cod liver oil, which has had the hearty endorsement of the medical profession for many years, while an "extract" is a product which contains no oil and is highly alcoholic.

Scott's Emulsion is the standard emulsion of the world. It guarantees the highest grade of real cod liver oil, skilfully blended with glycerine and hypophosphites, and is endorsed by good physicians everywhere.

BUTTER, CREAM, EGGS AND OTHER PRODUCE HIGH

The following opinion expressed this week by August Tietjen, on the Produce Exchange, Chicago, regarding the future of the hog market, may be of interest.

The provision option markets showed a slight reaction yesterday, but the cash markets were not affected. There was not much trading, and the somewhat lower quotations for hogs at Western packing points had some effect. "The underlying situation has not changed in the slightest," said Augustus Tietjen, on the Produce Exchange. "A few weeks ago I said that lard would reach 18c, and I was told that I was too enthusiastic. Well, it has come mighty close to it during the week, and I don't think there is any doubt at all that it will strike 18c during the coming week. I am not enthusiastic because I do not like to see these high prices. They do not represent big profits, as most people would seem to think because we have to pay more for our hogs. It is true live hogs have slumped a little lately, but if they do not decline in November when the run is the heaviest, when are they over likely to do so? Yet, look at the prices hogs are selling at compared with what you would naturally expect at this time of the year.

"The demand for lard is enormous and the foreign countries seem to be taking every pound that we can give them. The domestic demand is exceeding all bounds and the demand for compound is not as great in proportion, although it should be greater under the circumstances. The people appear to be insisting on the pure lard in place of the substitute, which is undoubtedly an evidence of the prosperity of the country and of the spirit of the working people, who have now more money than they ever had before, in obtaining the best money can buy. They are also taking the better cuts of pork and bacon, and we would be rather badly off if it were not for the fact that foreigners are glad to take anything we have to offer."

Very little change was shown in butter and eggs, as Saturday is not much of a trading day in these commodities. The shortage of eggs in storage warehouses has been confirmed by the government figures from Washington which report that 152 warehouses throughout the country reported 2,794,296 cases on hand on November 1 as compared with 3,686,533 cases on November 1, 1915. Holdings decreased 25 per cent. during October. Butter comparisons from 142 warehouses showed there were 79,294,074 pounds in storage, as compared with 92,718,949 pounds a year ago. There was a decrease of 14 per cent. in the hold and more, people with chest and throat troubles have tried to cure them by pouring cough syrups, lung tonics and the like into their stomachs. All a mistake! The Peps way is different.

LOCAL PRICE.

The local price of hogs this week is 10.50.

POULTRY.

The local Saturday market has been heavy lately with poultry, chickens, ducks, geese, and some turkeys, and this is likely to continue until the new year comes in.

A Toronto wholesaler says that in all their experience in the poultry business, they have never seen poultry come worse. This firm specializes in crate fed poultry of all kinds, but are unable to get enough to fill their present orders. They say it is scarcity of grain. The farmers don't seem to want to feed their poultry long enough—but as they point out a good farm chicken weighing four pounds at 17c is worth 68c. Whereas the same chicken fattened for three weeks or so would weigh six pounds at 21c, is worth $1.26, or nearly double. It certainly does look as if it might pay any farmer with 50 or 100 husky young cockerels to fatten them, as the price is more likely to raise than go down.

EGGS VERY SCARCE.

Eggs are in a class by themselves just now. Forty five cents was last Saturday's price with offerings light. Toronto reports light deliveries.

Hens stopped laying earlier this year than usual and the pullets will not be laying until the first of the new year. On this assumption it is said that there should be a good winter lay as the fall one was so short.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Last Saturday a top price of 23 3-8c was paid for cheese at the St. Hyacinthe Board. Montreal, Toronto and New York all report increases. Thus the price of cheese and butter continues to hold a position that has been unshaken by the closing of the cheese factories.

The Toronto Creamery guarantees a price of at least 44c per pound of fat, net, to shippers, for the first half of November, with sweet cream at 40c, delivered at Toronto. A further advance on these prices will be paid if the market warrants it. On the present basis, really choice sweet cream, not more than two days old, has been sold a little higher than this quotation. The supply of cream is falling off rapidly in spite of the high prices paid, according to this firm.

SUGAR DROPPED.

A decline of 15 cents per cwt. is reported in refined sugar this week.

RECRUITING MEETING HELD IN OMEMEE

OMEMEE, Nov. 15.—On Sunday evening a successful recruiting meeting was held in Coronation Hall, Omemee, under the direction of Capt. H. B. Keany, of the Dominion Recruiting Staff, who is assisting in the recruiting work of the 39th Battalion. Every seat in the hall was occupied, and the officers of the 39nd Battalion feel confident that Omemee will have a number of men, notwithstanding the fact that a considerable number are already serving their King and country from this place.

Reeve Mulligan was chairman of the meeting, and briefly referred to the object for which the meeting was called. Quartermaster-Sergeant Allin sang two songs in excellent voice, accompanied by Miss James.

Capt. Currie, of the 2nd Battalion, who is home on leave, recovering from wounds received in France, then gave a stirring address. He related his actual experiences in the field, and told of the harrowing hardships, the refugees from Belgium and France have suffered. Capt. Currie has every reason to know of the urgent need for men at the front at present, and urged the young men to consider their position more keenly.

Major Thompson and Captain Wilson, of the 39nd Battalion, followed with short addresses in the interests of the unit now being raised in Victoria and Haliburton counties. Capt. Wilson, as Quartermaster, stated that the battalion had all the equipment in store necessary for the men, and hoped that he would be given an opportunity to fit out a number of men this week.

Capt. Keany followed with a forceful and inspiring address. He discussed the war from all standpoints, and showed conclusively that it was now more important than at any time during the war that young men should enlist.

The meeting was brought to a close by the National Anthem.

TO ILL TO TESTIFY.

BUFFALO, Nov. 15.—The trial of John Edward Teiper, alleged murderer of his mother and brother, may be further postponed because of the physical condition of his sister Grace Teiper, one of the most important witnesses in the case. Teiper's lawyer informed District Attorney Moore that when he broached the subject of the impending trial to Miss Teiper last night she collapsed and has since been under a doctor's care.

Every Women's Ambition For Rosy Cheeks Now Easily Satisfied

Hollow cheeks with dark lines under the eyes, how a woman hates them!

But rosy cheeks, clear skin, and bright eyes, give them to a woman and she is happy.

The woman who attracts, whose fresh, dainty complexion compels admiration, is always careful of her health, particularly of her blood condition. Bad complexion always means bad blood.

Girls, don't let your blood grow thin or watery. To do so brings on haggard looks and declining strength.

Many a woman who has allowed herself to run-down, to develop that tired, worried look has built up again in this simple way. Why don't you try it?

At the close of every meal, just take two small chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets — any person can do this in a minute. The action of Ferrozone is apparent at once. It sets you up, makes you feel good, starts up your appetite, aids digestion, brings that old-time feeling of youth into the system again.

Ferrozone puts you on the right road—the one leading to health.

Men or man, woman or child needing blood, vigour, endurance—not a person who is weak, nervous or sickly, not a person in ill-health who won't relsive immediate help from Ferrozone.

As a tonic and restorative, as a health-bringer and body-builder, Ferrozone is unrivalled. It cures because it feeds and nourishes, because it contains the elements that build up and strengthen. For better looks and better health try Ferrozone yourself, sold everywhere, 50c. per box, 6 boxes for $2.50, or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

No Talking Machine Manufacturer Dares to Make this Test

No talking machine manufacturer dares to invite a public comparison between a great artist's voice and the reproduction of that voice by a talking machine. No talking machine could sustain such a test.

The NEW EDISON

has been tested in this manner before two hundred thousand people. Great artists such as Marie Rappold, Anna Case, Alice Verlet, Christine Miller, Marie Kaiser, Elizabeth Spencer, Helen Clark, Arthur Middleton, Thomas Chalmers, and numerous others, have matched their voices against Mr. Edison's Re-Creations thereof and two hundred thousand music lovers have confessed their inability to distinguish the real voices from Edison's Re-Creations of them.

Not a Talking Machine

The New Edison is not a talking machine. It does not re-produce music. It literally re-creates music. It is the world's most wonderful musical instrument.

Come to Our Store

We want to give you an Edison Musicale. There will be no obligation on your part. It will be a pleasure to us to demonstrate this wonderful new invention which Mr. Edison has licensed us to sell.

COLONEL LEWIS NOW ABOARD

Gun's Inventor to Make More Weapons for Allies.

Colonel I. N. Lewis, inventor of the machine gun bearing his name, is in England arranging for the manufacture of more of his guns for the English and French armies. The Lewis gun was rejected by the Ordnance Bureau at Washington, of which General William Crozier is the head, after a number of tests, although it was said that Major Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding the Department of the East, had expressed his approval of the weapon.

Several months ago the inventor said that he had offered the gun to the War Department as a gift, but that it had been rejected. General Crozier, in a public statement recently said that the gun had not been offered to the War Department as a gift, but that royalties were to be paid. In reply Colonel Lewis issued a statement in which he said he had offered the gun to the department several times in the period from March, 1910, to September, 1912. He said the offer was not made to Gen. Crozier, but to the Chief of Staff and to the President of the Board of Ordnance and Fortification, General Wood.

Secretary Baker then decided to give the Lewis gun consideration again, and appointed the board of officers and civilians whose preliminary report was made public yesterday.

Best Nerve Specialist In England Was Consulted

But Nervous System Failed to Respond to Treatment Prescribed

Nervous disorders frequently result from injury to the nerves in accidents or because of the shock to the system.

The writer of this letter was injured in a mix-up with some colts, remained unconscious for three weeks, and in spite of continued treatment in hospital could not obtain restoration of the internal nerves which control the action of the digestive and other vital organs. He travelled to Europe and consulted England's greatest nerve specialist. Relief was only temporary, in spite of many treatments used.

His letter gives the facts briefly and tells how he was finally cured by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Can you imagine any more severe test of this great nerve restorative?

Mr. Henry F. Venn, Cefn Ranch Malakwa, B. C., writes: "Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has restored my nervous system and given me new health. Having met with a severe accident seven years ago, from which I was unconscious and which left my nerves in a very sore plight. I was treated by doctors galore and consulted one of the greatest nerve specialists in England, but nothing seemed to do me much good. Hypophosphites and, in fact, all and every kind of nerve mixture in almost every form was used, but never with more than temporary benefit.

"But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has acted very differently, for it has built up my nervous system until I feel like my old self again. If this medicine will do for others what it has done for me, I shall not regret having written this letter. I have recommended the Nerve Food personally to many, and shall always esteem its great restorative value."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Heads or Tails

An Automobile Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Ralph Dodge had taken his degree at college, had returned to his native city and was waiting on the platform of the railway car in which he had made the journey for those ahead of him to get off. The next person before him was a girl badly loaded with hand baggage, and there was no trainman to help her down, no attendant to carry her belongings.

When she reached the cement platform her foot struck a place where the cement had been chipped, her ankle turned and she fell. A suit case in one hand, a handbag and an umbrella in the other, went flying in different directions.

Ralph dropped his own belongings and lifted the girl to her feet. But when she got on them she would have gone down again had he not supported her.

An attendant came running up and gathered the lady's belongings, including a bunch of violets that had fallen from her belt. Ralph reached for the violets, leaving the other articles with the attendant, then would have moved away with the girl had she not been unable to touch her foot to the platform.

Something must be done.

Ralph Dodge had won renown as right tackle on the university team of his college, and the carrying of a simple 110 pounds was a bagatelle. He took the girl up in his arms and carried her to a taxicab. Putting her and her belongings—all except the violets—into it, he tipped the attendant for her and, with the most courtly bow he could enact, bade her adieu as she was whisked away.

Dodge went to his home thrilled with the sensation of having carried a pretty girl in his arms.

During the autumn following his graduation Ralph and his chum Bob Kittredge were touring when they got into a region with which neither was familiar. Coming to a place where the road forked, they stopped to consider what they should do.

"Which road shall we take, Bob?" questioned Ralph.

Kittredge reached for the automobile road map in the leather pocket before them. Then he drew back his hand, laughing.

"Leave it to chance, Ralph," he said. "We're out merely for fun. What difference does it make whether we get home by way of Onyxville or through Ellsworth Center? All roads lead to New York."

"Don't you believe it," contradicted Ralph. "I've motored around on that theory and fetched up in all sorts of God forsaken holes where they think New York is as far away and inaccessible as London."

"Let's get along somewhere, anyhow," said Bob. "It's too fine a fall day to spend wrangling. Let's toss up for it."

"That's always your way of solving every problem," laughed Ralph. "Very well—toss up. Heads wins the right hand road, eh?"

"Yes." Bob brought forth a coin and flipped it in his palm.

"Tails!" he announced.

"Hope it's no indication that we'll come out at the tail end of things," grinned Ralph as he turned the motor into the left hand road.

"Fate has decided for us," declared Bob sentimentally. "I believe I scent an adventure."

"Let me out of it, then. I'm not strong on adventures."

"Ho!" jeered Bob incredulously. "What about the adventure of the girl with the sprained ankle? I heard that she sprained it when alighting from a train and that you assisted her to a taxi and after it had rolled away you picked up a bunch of violets she had dropped, and I suppose you cherish them to this day."

Ralph reddened under his tan. "An adventure usually ends in something or other," he said disconnectedly. "I never heard or saw the girl afterward, although I've"— He stopped and bit his lip as his companion laughed heartlessly.

"I don't wonder you are sore on adventures," cried Bob. "Take it from me, Ralph, you'll meet her sooner or later. It's written in the stars."

"By Jove, what a narrow road we've run into!" exclaimed Ralph suddenly. "There certainly isn't room for a turnout here if we should meet another car."

There wasn't room for anything except the car, and the sides of that rubbed against the huckleberry bushes that hung perilously on the edges of the bank on either side. The trees overhung the level track that appeared to run for some distance through these thick woods. They had not passed a house for some time.

"Likely we won't meet another car," said Ralph after a survey of the road. "No one but a pair of sentimentalists would flip a coin and take a road on a blind chance like this."

"We might back out again," suggested the creatfallen Bob, whose adventurous spirit was always getting him into scrapes.

"Might as well go ahead and get out of it," and the car sped on.

"Queer thing this, having a good road like this running into a forest," growled Bob. "Mighty deceiving!"

"Written in the stars, you know, old chap!" grinned Ralph.

"By Jove, I believe it is!" muttered Bob in his ear, and a light met their eyes that brought their own car to an abrupt standstill.

In front of them was another motorcar, a small runabout. In it sat two girls facing them with dismayed countenances. The girl whose hands were on the steering wheel was a fair haired, blue eyed maiden, and her companion was as dark as a gypsy, and both were pretty.

"Pisco aux dames!" murmured Bob.

"Idiot!" hissed Ralph in his ear. Then, whipping off his cap, he addressed the fair motorists:

"We will back out, ladies, and permit you to continue your way. The road is too narrow for turning."

"Oh, no!" protested the fair one. "You see, our car has broken down. At least it refuses to move on."

"Perhaps we can help you," said Ralph. And so he and Bob hastened to leave their own car, while they questioned the girls concerning the trouble with the runabout.

"It went beautifully until five minutes ago. Then it stopped suddenly. I suppose something has broken. You see, Miss Wakely"—the fair one nodded toward her dark companion—"wanted to leave the car here and walk back, but I persuaded her to wait awhile after we had tossed a coin to decide. So I was right after all," she chattered.

"It was certainly the wisest thing to do," agreed Bob solemnly, while Ralph made a thorough inspection of the gasoline.

"Engine doesn't work," announced Ralph. "How about your gasoline?"

A look of dismay overspread the faces of the two girls.

"We never thought of that!" cried the fair one.

"Oh, Dorothy Moore," murmured Miss Wakely, "the next time you steal a motorcar I hope you'll see that there is plenty of gasoline!"

"Steal!" repeated Dorothy indignantly. "Whose suggestion was it?"

The two young men bending over the car looked at each other with startled eyes.

"I don't believe it!" declared Ralph hotly.

"You don't, eh? Why not? The beauty said so," sniffed Bob incredulously.

"The beauty! Huh! You don't call the dark one a beauty, do you? Now, the fair one—I may as well tell you, Bob, she's the girl with the sprained ankle!"

"No!" said Bob incredulously.

"Yes," corrected Ralph, with a warning glance at his companion. He went around to the front of the car.

"Your gasoline tank is empty," he announced, "and from appearances I should say that it had been leaking badly for some time." He pointed back down the road in the direction whence they had come and showed a black oily streak through the center of the white mud.

"What shall we do—walk back and send some one after the machine?" asked Dorothy Moore.

"Unless you will permit us to drive you home in our car. We might tow your machine."

"Oh, no! Let it stand here until James sends for it. You see, it's my brother's car. He's got a brand new one, and Hilda, Miss Wakely, and I thought it would be a lark to go riding in this one without James knowing it. We smuggled it out of the garage and have only come this far, and now we are stalled. James will be so grouchy!" Dorothy sighed pathetically.

Bob had been using his eyes to good advantage. "I beg pardon," he interrupted, "but is Jim Wedge Moore your brother?"

"Yes, of course. Do you know him?" Dorothy's eyes were round with surprise.

"Classmate of ours." Bob included Ralph in a gesture. "My name's Kittredge, and this is Ralph Dodge."

"I've heard James speak of you," admitted Miss Moore a little breathlessly.

"Called me 'Bonehead Kittredge,' didn't he?" asked Bob cheerfully, while Miss Wakely suppressed a smile.

"You've got a partial name!" admitted Miss Moore, dimpling.

"Not at all," declared Bob. "You see, I was so clever that the chaps simply gritted their teeth with rage and envy and called me 'Bonehead' for spite. It has quite the opposite meaning in my case."

"I don't doubt it," interpolated Miss Wakely warmly, and Bob threw her a melting glance of appreciation.

"What did they call you, Mr. Dodge?" asked Dorothy, looking at Ralph with interest.

"Oh, nothing at all, Miss Moore," he said hastily. "I went through unobtrusively, leaving not even a footprint of credit or fame behind. In fact, no one would ever know I'd been through college if I didn't advertise the fact."

"Nonsense!" chirruped Dorothy, growing pink in his defense, even as Miss Wakely had championed Bob's cause.

Then after a discussion it was decided that Bob and Miss Wakely were to remain in the runabout while Ralph took Miss Moore in the large car and went to the Moore home for confession and assistance.

It was not until after the large car had backed out into the main road again that Ralph reminded Dorothy Moore of the incident of the sprained ankle.

But it was not until she officiated as one of the principal performers in a double wedding that Ralph showed her the faded bunch of violets he had kept.

Four happy people are firm believers in the flip of a coin and what is written in the stars. "Look at us," they [illegible]

Rubber Supply Is Steady While Leather Gets Scarcer

This Explains Low Price of Rubber Footwear in Spite of Increasing Cost of Fabrics, Chemicals and Labor

The war is using up enormous quantities both of leather and rubber. At the same time it is seriously restricting the output of the former, much of which came from Russia—while rubber production keeps pace with the demand. From the great plantations now reaching maturity in Britain's tropical Dominions will come this year 150,000 tons of raw rubber—75% of the world's production, and an increase of over 40,000 tons from last year.

Thus, thanks to the British Government's foresight in encouraging these plantations, the Allied armies have been abundantly supplied with all the rubber products they need—Germany and her allies have been cut off—and the price to the world at large has actually been reduced. Meanwhile, leather has been getting scarcer and more expensive—80% higher than in 1914—and the end is not yet.

At normal prices a pair of good shoes cost about four times as much as a pair of standard quality rubbers, and would last nearly twice as long if the rubbers were worn to protect them in bad weather. So even before the war rubbers were a mighty good investment, to say nothing of their prevention of wet feet, colds and doctors' bills.

Now, when shoes cost seven or eight times as much as the rubbers, the saving from wearing the latter is so outstanding that no one who believes in thrift will think of going without them. Nor will those who are anxious to help win the war, for by wearing rubbers and overshoes we conserve the leather so scarce yet so absolutely necessary for the soldiers.

Wear Rubbers and Save Leather for Our Fighting Men

Presentation To Miss H. Dawson Of Bailieboro

Recipient Has Been Recording Secretary of the Women's Missionary Society

BAILIEBORO, Nov. 15.—The monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church Bailieboro met at the home of Miss S. Dawson on Thursday last following the close of a successful meeting for the purpose of presenting their Recording Secretary, Miss Hazel Dawson with a hand painted china biscuit jar and the following address:—

Dear Miss Dawson,—"It is with mingled feeling of joy and sorrow we meet to-day for the last time to greet you as our Recording Secretary. Sorrow to lose so valuable an officer, but we shall ever remember you with kindliest gratitude for your unceasing and tireless efforts to promote the interests of the W.M.S. of the Methodist church of this place. We could not consent to part without leaving with you some token of our esteem. Let it be a pleasant token of our love and affection for you.

Signed on behalf of the W. M. S., by the President, Mrs. J. W. Dawson.

Miss Dawson though taken completely by surprise made a very graceful reply, saying that what assistance she had given was given freely and without any expectation of return. Miss Myrtle Dawson gave the following reading:

Tell her now:—
If with pleasure you are viewing any work a woman is doing,
If you like her or you love her, tell her now,
Don't withhold your approbation till
the person makes oration,
And she lies with snowy lilies o'er her brow;
For no matter how you shout it, she won't really care about it;
She won't know how many teardrops
you have shed:
If you think some praise is due her,
now's the time to give it to her
For she cannot read her tombstone
when she's dead
More than fame and more than money, is the comment kind and sunny,
And the hearty, warm approval of a friend,
For it gives to live a savour and it makes you stronger, brave;
And it gives you heart and spirit to the end.
If she earns your praise, bestow it; if you like her, let her know it,
Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over and she's underneath the clover,
For she cannot read her tombstone when she's dead.

At the close of this reading the hostess, Miss S. Dawson served refreshments and all present spent an enjoyable evening and dispersed after singing:—

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love;
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

It is a truly dependable cough remedy that should be kept handy in every home, to use at the first sign of a cough during the night or day time.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and you have 16 ounces of the most effective remedy you ever used.

The quick, lasting relief you get from this excellent cough syrup will really surprise you. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the mucous membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

MRS. DAVIS WAS SENTENCED TO FOUR YEARS IN PENITENTIARY ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

LINDSAY, Nov. 16.—Mrs. May Davis of Kinmount who shot Edward Spenceley, also of Kinmount, in that village on the evening of Sept. 6th, last, and who was tried on a charge of murder at a session of the Supreme Court on Tuesday, was sentenced to four years in the Kingston Penitentiary by Mr. Justice Latchford. The charge had been reduced to manslaughter by the jury. The unfortunate woman bore up bravely under the sentence, although during the period in which the jury was deliberating, she was visibly affected, and was taken from the court room by Mrs. F. E. Sharpe.

The evidence in the case was concluded shortly after ten o'clock, on Tuesday evening, after which Mr. W. S. Middleboro, Crown Prosecutor, and I. E. Weldon, counsel for the accused, addressed the jury. Then followed the judge's address, the jury retiring about 11.45 o'clock.

Considerable interest was manifested in the proceedings during the afternoon, the seating capacity of the court room being taxed to the utmost.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

The prisoner, May Davis, was placed in the box and pleaded not guilty to the charge of murder. Mrs. Davis is a small, slight woman, twenty-four years of age and rather prepossessing appearance. Her husband sat beside her counsel, with the tears streaming down his face, greatly affected by the proceedings. The wife was also on the verge of tears and felt her position keenly.

MRS. SPENCE'S EVIDENCE.

Mrs. Lizzie Spenceley was the first witness called. She appeared carrying a baby in her arms, which she gave to her mother. She had been married to the late Mr. Spenceley, she said, for twenty-one years. She saw her husband coming from work at John Austin's sawmill, Kinmount, shortly after 6 o'clock on September 6th. He laid a small parcel of flour on the table and went out to the Davis homestead. Next thing Mrs. Spenceley heard was the report of a gun, and then saw the smoke. She rushed over and saw her husband leaning against the Davis house, and Mrs. Davis standing with the gun in her hand, pointing toward him.

"I asked my husband what she had done to him. He was unable to answer, but she replied for him: "I shot the son of a —, if you want to know, and I'll give you some of the same if you're not careful,' and started to reload the gun. Her husband came, and when I asked him he took the gun from her for fear she would do further damage, and went for the doctor. After nearly an hour I started to go for the doctor, but met him at the gate. My mother went over to Davis' a few minutes after I did. Mrs. Davis went in the house. I was there at the time, then, till the doctor came, except when I went home to get the baby.

Mrs. Davis said she would not allow the doctor to wash his hands in a pail or tub of water. My husband was then carried home on a door, which was too wide to enter our house, so they took him down town, where I went also and stayed all night. The shooting happened Wednesday and he died in Lindsay on Saturday. I have six of a family, and one married daughter."

A HUSBAND'S TROUBLES.

Then Geo. Davis, husband of the accused, took the witness box. I was married in 1913, and had no trouble with Spenceley until a year after I was married. I was previously good friends with him. I ordered him off my premises. He was continually coming over to my place to see my wife. One day he came over while I was home and then ran away when he found I was there. I separated from my wife in consequence and went to Toronto for about a year, after which I came back again, but he came again and I had another row with him. I blackened his eyes and drove him from the house and he left. I had troubles right along right up to the time of this accident. I warned him—only two nights before the accident not to come on the premises. He said, "As long as there is peace and quietness, I'll stay away." My wife was not present on the occasion I told my wife to write a letter to Spenceley and warn him to keep away. Reports reached me from the neighbours that he was continually running to my house, and I had reason to believe he was infatuated with my wife. I came home on the day of the accident. I found the house upset and I had a row with her over Spenceley, whom I suspected of being over there. I nearly struck her, I was furious. I had previously struck her to make her keep Spenceley away. I went outside to read. I heard Spenceley come and heard the row he and my wife were having at the front door. He said he did not want any more of her letters. She told him to get off the lot, as he was making trouble between her and her husband. He started away, but came back, saying, "No one like you will keep me off here," calling her vile names. She ran in and got the gun and came out and then he started to wrestle with her for the possession of the gun which went off in the mix-up. I ran to help him. He said take me home and I told him to go home as he was not wanted there. I couldn't realize then that he was badly injured. I held him a minute and within two minutes Mrs. Spenceley came. I grabbed the gun from my wife and ran for the doctor. My wife had no time to get a cartridge and I saw no cartridge. It was all done so quickly. I loaded the gun the week before, as I had been shooting, and neglected to take the cartridge out. My wife did not threaten to shoot Mrs. Spenceley that I heard, and I was right there.

DYING DECLARATION.

The following is Fred Spenceley's dying declaration.

"I, Fred Spenceley, of the Township of Somerville, in the County of Victoria, labourer, do solemnly and sincerely declare I am making this declaration with a full consciousness and belief of impending death, and without any hope of recovery, and in apprehension and expectation of immediate death. Through the day she wrote me a letter and claimed that I stole a hoe and one thing and another. She left the letter in the hands of Chas. Wellstood, and I got him to read the letter. I took the letter to her place at night, at 6 o'clock. She pulled the gun on me. She ordered me off the place. I could not get off—my leg was broken. I laid there nearly an hour. I was not there very long before I was shot—only a few minutes. I don't know hardly what took place before I was shot. The only thing I know was her putting the cartridge in the gun. There was only me and her present when this took place. She tore the letter to pieces and threw it down in the house."—Dying declaration of Fred Spenceley.

Evidence of Mrs. Davis.

When trial commenced May Davis, the accused, was the first to be examined. In part she said: "I knew the deceased since 1912. I was married the same year on Feb. 9th. It was in the year 1913 that I came to know Mr. Spencely. My husband and I had several quarrels on Mr. Spencely's account, and we became separated. My husband went to Toronto and then I came to Lindsay to work. He also followed me to the station and he said: "If you go to Lindsay I will make you sorry for it."

"What happened then?"

"While I was in Lindsay my house was burned."

Witness—"Then my husband returned and we lived together, but Spencely returned and my husband caught him and gave him a pair of black eyes. I told him to stay away several times; my husband was in Toronto working this summer and Spencely kept coming over and wanted me to run away with him, and when I refused he threatened my life and I was afraid of him. Two nights before the accident I was out when he called and was met at the door by my husband. Then my husband told me to write a letter to Spencely and I did so, telling him to keep away and to return a hoe and a trowel. The night of the shooting my husband came home." Then Spencely came and said I got your letter and I want you to keep your letters, and I told him to take a warning. He went away a few feet and then turned again and said: "No—— can't put me off these premises." I turned and grabbed the gun and he said he was not afraid of "any damn gun." He grabbed the gun and almost jerked me off my feet. Then the gun went off. He had threatened me before and said he would have revenge if he had to swing for it. I didn't know that the gun was loaded, but wanted to threaten him. One other time he choked me and I was carried into the house unconscious. After he was shot I told my husband to go for the doctor. I did not threaten to shoot Mrs. Spencely. Mrs. Spencely called me several dirty names. I could hear her in her own house talking to her husband. When Spencely came I was in a passion, having had words with my husband."

Mr. Justice Latchford intimated that the letter written by Mrs. Davis was such a letter as to cause Spencely to call. He also stated that Mrs. Davis must have taken the shell out of the gun and not Davis. She must have threatened Mrs. Spencely, as the letter claimed.

According to the dead man's statements she ordered him of the premises after his leg was broken. If you are to credit his story what becomes of the accident theory?"

THE SENTENCE.

Mr. Justice Latchford, passing sentence, said that those who took human life in this country must, and will be held accountable for their crime. There is nothing so precious as human life, and if persons took it without proper excuse the country would be such that we could not live in it. Addressing the prisoner, the Justice remarked: "You, perhaps, have been more sinned against than sinned, and it may be that the man did you bodily harm as well as moral harm. No other verdict could be properly arrived at.

"I am greatly concerned," said Mr. Justice Latchford, "as to the extent of the punishment. A life sentence might be imposed by the count, but in this case I will impose a sentence of four years in the penitentiary, and if your conduct is good I shall, after a reasonable time, recommend to the Department of Justice that the sentence be shortened. Your conduct will be taken into consideration."

Had Violent Coughing Fits

Looked Like Consumptive

Mrs. Mary Whelen, North Forks, N.S., writes: "Having taken five bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, during the past few weeks, to relieve a chronic cough and general throat trouble, allow me to express my unbounded satisfaction and thanks as to its sterling qualities. A short time ago I became subject to violent coughing fits at night and directly after rising in the morning. I began losing weight, and all my friends cheerfully informed me that I was going into consumption.

"After taking the 'Dr. Wood's' I am pleased to relate that the cough has entirely disappeared and I have since regained the lost weight. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup."

There are many imitations of "Dr. Wood's" on the market so see that none of these so-called "pine syrups" are handed out to you when you ask for "Dr. Wood's." It has been on the market for twenty-five years, is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 35c and 50c.

RUNNING NOSE COLDS CURED SNEEZING STOPPED INSTANTLY

The worst of a cold is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand — it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold —that's worth remembering.

Beware of dangerous substitutes meant to deceive you for genuine Catarrhozone, which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months' treatment costs $1.00; small size, 50c.; sample size, 25c.

PRISON DOORS WILL OPEN.

Germany to Investigate Causes of "Preventive" Arrests.

BERLIN, Nov. 15—According to the Berlin newspapers, the War Ministry has met the complaints made in the Reichstag last session regarding preventive arrests with circular instructions that the cases of all persons now in prison should be investigated carefully, and that as many persons as possible should be released, only those being kept locked up who constitute a menace to public safety. In future all persons placed under arrest will be given an opportunity to clear themselves of suspicion. All unnecessary severities must be avoided in order not to risk damage claims after the war.

OPEN WINDOW WEEK IN HEALTH CAMPAIGN

Children Will Be Educated in Value of Preventive Measures from December 4 to 10.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—In conjunction with several anti-tuberculosis committees, the Department of Health will conduct an "Open Window Week" from December 4 to December 10. During the week an intensive study of the value of fresh air is to be encouraged in the public schools and in churches and among all who can be reached.

On each of the days topics of importance in the campaign are to be featured by lectures and personal advice by instructors of the Health Department. The subjects upon which emphasis is laid and the days for their consideration are: — "Open Windows," Monday; "Medical Examination," Tuesday; "Walk to Work," Wednesday; "Sanitary Workshops," Thursday; "Children's Health," Friday; "Sunshine Sabbath," Saturday; and "Sunshine Sunday," Sunday.

Medical examination day represents an annual effort to induce every one, ill or well, to have an examination as a preventive measure. The work in the schools will be extended over the entire week and the teachers will endeavour to interest pupils in health topics.

The culmination of the campaign comes in the synagogues and churches on Saturday and Sunday, with special emphasis of the relation of religious bodies to health work. The movement has the indorsement of church dignitaries in almost all the creeds.

FELL IN A FAINT.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall on the floor. I could not sweep without fainting. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has so built up my system that I can wash and do my housework. Your medicine cured me when doctors had failed."

COFFEE FAMINE IN NORWAY IS REPORTED

British Embargo Stops Importation and Speculators "Corner" the Market in Christiania.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Ever since April last imports of coffee into Norway have been stopped by England. As a consequence the supply at the present moment is extremely reduced, says the Post's correspondent in Christiania. The finer qualities are practically unobtainable, the entire supply being in the hands of Swedish, Danish and Russian firms, who bought before the veto on importation came into effect and stored their goods for re-export when the Norwegian export prohibition ceased. These foreign speculators are now, therefore favourably placed. Prices have steadily risen and have become almost prohibitive. Under the circumstances the Norwegian government has fixed maximum retail prices for the different qualities, the order to take effect from tomorrow. It is feared that nevertheless, coffee will continue to be practically unobtainable, because holders are not disposed to sell at the prices fixed. In the meantime negotiations with England continue, and it is hoped that the prohibition on imports into Norway will be removed.

THE DISPOSAL PLANT.

Provincial Engineers' Enquiry As To Site Decided Upon.

Mr. F. A. Dallyn, Provincial Sanitary Engineer, wrote City Engineer Parsons that he has planned a trip to Europe after December 1st, and before that date desires to know what action the city has taken in regard to the sewage disposal site. Mr. Parsons was instructed by the Board of Works to inform him of the frontage of land in the Rutherford property the city will require for its plant.

in your choice of an ointment. An inferior ointment is worse than none at all, because it irritates and inflames, and sometimes even poisons the place it is intended to soothe and heal. In using Zam-Buk you take no risk, as its soothing, healing properties have been proved by thousands of users, and its purity is vouched for by the famous English Chemist, Mr. W. Lascelles Scott, who says:

"I have made an exhaustive analytical examination of Zam-Buk, and find it exclusively of vegetable origin, with none of the impure and irritating mineral drugs and animal fats found in ordinary ointments. The germ-destroying powers of Zam-Buk exceed those of carbolic acid, yet it does not inflame even the most sensitive skin. I have no hesitation in certifying the purity of Zam-Buk, and its value for skin diseases and injuries."

Zam-Buk is best for eczema, ulcers, running sores, old wounds, abscesses, blood-poisoning, boils, pimples, piles, cuts, burns, scalds and all skin injuries. 50c. box, 3 for $1.25, all druggists or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Send 1c. stamp for postage on free trial box.

NOT ALL FIGHTERS IN TOMMY BURNS' FAMILY

Shed a tear for Eddie Brusso! The younger brother of Tommy Burns became imbued with the idea that all the pugilistic talent in the Brusso family was not cornered by the former heavy weight champion of the world, so decided to send himself in against one Young Ross, who hails from the province of Alberta. The embroglio lasted a shade under three rounds. Hardly had the bell sounded for the start of the third frame when, to quote an enraptured correspondent of Lethbridge, "Young Ross landed a left cross to the jaw and a right one to the heart." Whatever these strange blows may be, evidently they turned the trick, for Eddie did a 'Brodie' to the floor, and was counted out with all due ceremony.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, lossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief

Liver Troubles, Sick Headache, and Habitual Constipation.

Liver troubles and habitual constipation can be cured—but not by cathartic or purgative medicines. The only possible way is to help your system to cure itself: and that is what Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief so surely does. It is not cathartic, it is not violent, it is quite different to the coarse purgative preparations in common use. These only irritate and weaken; Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief tones and strengthens the liver and bowels, and so restores their power to do nature's work in nature's way.

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, liver troubles, sick headache, flatulence, acidity, heartburn, and impure blood.

Ask your Druggist for Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief and take no substitute.

THE ALLIES ARE NEARING MONASTIR

WIN ALL ALONG THE MACEDONIAN FRONT

THE FRANCO-RUSSIAN TROOPS ARE ONLY FOUR MILES FROM MONASTIR

Have Reached Vera River and Occupied Three Villages Just South of Monastir--Allies Progressing Along the Whole Macedonian Front---French Hurl Germans Back From Pressoir Where They Had Attained a Foothold Yesterday

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 16.—The Franco-Russian troops have hurled back the German defenders and are now a bare four miles south of Monastir.

This and the fact that throughout the Macedonian theatre of war, the Germans have been steadily forced backward, was announced in to-day's official communique.

The statement reads: "Along the Salonika front, despite snow and rain, the Ally advance is progressing favourably despite the most violent counter-attacks. Along the bend of the Cerna River the Franco-Serbian forces are progressing toward Tarastok. West of the Cerna the enemy has been compelled to abandon during the night positions they had fortified for months.

North of Kenali, the Franco-Russian forces pursuing the enemy, attained the Vira River, four miles south of Monastir, occupying the villages of Zapjani, Parodin and Velusina."

ASTONISHING ADVANCE BY SERRAIL'S MEN

Franco-Russo-Serbian Forces Reach The Plains of Monastir After Battling Through Snow and Rain Over Great Natural Mountain Fortress

Examiner Special:

LONDON, November 16.—Monastir is almost within reach of General Serrail's indomitable Franco-Russian-Serbian forces after one of the most astonishing advances recorded in the great European war.

Battling against snow and rain over great natural mountain fortresses, the Allied forces have now reached the plain of Monastir, and to-day's official communique from Paris—partially confirmed in the Berlin statement—indicate the sweeping back of the Bulgarian-Teutonic line, to a point within four miles of the City of Monastir itself.

Berlin's admission was a brief comment that "prepared new positions" in the Cerna sector were occupied.

The new positions achieved by the Franco-Serbian troops are the result of two separate successive flanking movements. The first involved the well nigh impossible passage, under fire, of the mountains which guard the bend of the Cerna. It was successful.

The Serbian official statement gave further corroboration to the French news of the advance around Monastir. It stated after violent fighting the Allies had captured all enemy positions southwards of Tepavic, including the village itself and Gules.

Bulgarians Admit Their Troops Are Retiring

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, November 16.—The Bulgarian official statement from Sofia to-day admits a retreat northwards toward Monastir in the fact of violent attacks from the Franco-Serbian troops. "Throughout the day our Monastir plain positions were fiercely bombarded," the statement declared. "The enemy's violent attacks failed around the bend of the Cerna River. We retired northward towards Tepawiza and Cigol."

Foe Is Dislodged From Pressoire Village

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS (Bulletin), November 16.—After a violent battle, French forces have dislodged the German forces which yesterday succeeded partly in occupying the Village of Pressoire, according to to-day's official statement.

Heavy Gun Fire By Enemy Is Reported

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 16.—General Sir Douglas Haig reported to-day considerable shelling by enemy northwards and southwards of the Ancre during the night. Otherwise he had nothing to report.

Hot Fighting On Somme Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 16.—An unceasing series of attacks and counter attacks swept a wave of fire and steel across six miles of the Franco-British front to-day.

There it appeared the mightiest thrust the Germans have yet made in a counter-attack was centring upon that portion of the line where British and French forces joined hands.

To the north the British were still smashing forward, consolidating their gains and improving their positions under desperate onslaughts from the enemy. Southward French lines were forced slightly to give way from tremendous concentrated pressure at the very base of the angle which recent British and French gains have thrust into the German lines.

It was General Foch's French troops that bore the brunt of the day's fighting. Within striking distance of Chaulnes, an important centre, these troops have been threatening an enveloping movement here for several days.

DRIVER CLAUDE W. MANLEY

A Peterborough member of the Canadian Field Artillery, who is officially reported killed in action.

DRIVER MANLEY OF PETERBORO' IS KILLED IN ACTION

Well Known Member of Post Office Staff Who Left Peterborough With 33rd Battery Gave Up His Life on November 4th

AT FRONT EIGHT MONTHS

The tragic news has been received of the death at the front of a well-known and popular Peterborough boy, Driver Claude W. Manley of the Canadian Field Artillery. His father, Mr. J. D. Manley, grocer, corner of Lock street and Braidwood Avenue has received a message from Ottawa, stating that Driver Manley is officially reported killed in action on November 4th. The young soldier, he was only nineteen years of age—had lived all his life here, having been born in Otonabee just outside the city. After leaving school he was employed for some time in the C.P.R. Office and afterwards as a clerk in the local Post Office where he was employed at the time of his enlistment. He joined the 33rd Battery here and went to the front with the first draft, being transferred to the Fighting Fourth Battery which contains a large number of Peterborough 1st contingent men. Driver Manley had been at the front since February 28th last. A letter from him was published only last evening in the Examiner.

Driver Manley is survived by his parents and by one sister, Miss Verna residing at the corner of Lock and Braidwood Avenue.

He is the fourth employee of the Peterborough Post Office to lose his life at the front the others having been Pte. Wm. F. Gibson, 2nd Battalion, Pte. Trevor Cuffe, 9th C.M.R., and Pte W. Hall, 92nd Highlanders

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO SEE "THE BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

Through the generosity of Mr. T. H. Hooper the school children of Peterborough will have an opportunity of seeing the wonderful moving picture "The Battle Cry of Peace," at the Grand Opera House on Saturday morning. Mr. Hooper, who has seen the film and has been impressed by its striking educational possibilities, believes that every school boy or girl should have a chance to learn the lesson taught by "The Battle Cry of Peace," and accordingly has secured the Grand Opera House and arranged for a special performance on Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Free tickets will be distributed at the different schools throughout the city, and every child will have the opportunity of seeing the picture.

IMPORTANT CHANGES IN RECRUITING METHODS ARE DECIDED UPON

235th, 247th, 252nd and 254th Battalions to Have Privilege of Combing Seven Counties in Search of Eligible Men---Lt.-Col. Ackerman Back From Conference--Capt. O'Flynn to be Attached to the 247th Battalion---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

As a result of the recruiting conference held in Kingston yesterday which was attended by all the officers commanding overseas units in No. 3 military district, including Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion—important changes were made in regard to recruiting. Instead of the Battalions being authorised to recruit only in the counties originally assigned to them, the territory is to be thrown open and commanding officers can recruit where they like.

The Counties of Victoria and Haliburton, Peterborough, Northumberland and Durham, Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington will be a joint recruiting ground for the 235th, the 247th of Peterborough, the 252th of Lindsay, and the 254th of Belleville. These units may recruit anywhere in the counties named. The main object is to get men into khaki. The officers feel that with four units stirring up interest and introducing new methods, throughout the district the results will be decidedly better than if the battalions were confined to one county. Under the old system a commanding officer was prevented from going across the border into another county after men even if he knew of a dozen whom he might recruit and whom he knew would not join the battalion assigned to their district. All the commanding officers except one were heartily in favour of the change decided upon.

Men are needed and officers will work on the principle that if they can't get a man to join their unit they will try to get him in the artillery or the Army Service Corps or some other branch of the service. A closer co-operation and harmony is expected as a result of the conference.

Experienced recruiting officers, notably Col. de Salaberry and Col. Scobell spoke of the great assistance given by the press and of the value of personal canvass.

Lt.-Col Ackerman has called a meeting of the officers of the 247th Battalion for to-morrow when the information secured at yesterday's conference will be discussed and plans made for the recruiting drive that will fill up the ranks of the new Peterborough Battalion.

The canvass of the city by the 247th Battalion is making good progress. All drill has been suspended until this important work is completed.

Capt. O'Flynn, originally of the 2nd Canadian Battalion has been attached to the 247th Battalion and will arrive in the city to-night. Lt.-Col. Ackerman is delighted at having been successful in securing the services of the popular Belleville officer who was a prime favourite with the men at the front and equally liked by all who knew him at home. He will be a source of great strength to the 247th Battalion.

The 247th Battalion is fortunate in having among its officers men who have seen service. Lt.-Col. Ackerman, Capt. O'Flynn, Capt. Belton and Lieut. Barney Quinn have all had much experience at the front in the present war and Lieut. R. G. Johnston is a South African veteran. The number of experienced officers will be added to before long.

A recruiting meeting under the auspices of the 247th Battalion will be held at Lakefield next week, probably on Tuesday night

Mr. and Mrs. Downes and family desire to thank Chief Thompson and his staff, the County Constable Moore, for their kindness in sending a Xmas parcel to Sergt. E. Downes, Coldstream Guards, who they know will appreciate it to the full.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 15.—There were 285 men received in the third division during the past two weeks, a slight increase over the previous two weeks.

DAILY ORDERS.

By Lt.-Col C. H. Ackerman, Commanding 247th Battalion. C.E.F., Orders for Thursday, November 16th.

1. PARADE.—

Men employed on recruiting duty will report to officer in charge of sector in which they are employed at 9 a.m. for duty.

2. DUTIES.—

Orderly Officer for Thursday, Lieut. F. J. Hayes.

Next for Duty—Lieut. Bosdet.

3. LEAVE.—

Leave of absence is granted Capt Thomson from Reveille November 17th to Reveille, November 20th.

R. B. BROOKS, Lieut.
Acting Adjutant 247th Battalion.

ANOTHER RECORD FOR 235TH..

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 16.—The 235th Battalion, under command of Lieut.-Col. S. B. Scobell, has again established a record for recruiting in Military District No. 3. During the past weeks it has been stationed here, is battalion, besides nine men being rejected. The good impression the battalion has created in Belleville and Hastings county during the three weeks it has been stationed here, is assisting materially in recruiting.

Liberal Meeting Held in Ottawa

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—Three hundred and fifty Liberal delegates from ten counties around the city of Ottawa assembled this afternoon and began a two-days' discussion of political questions.

The meeting assembled at the call of G. B. Rochester, President of the Ottawa Reform Association, and he called it to order. The gathering consisted chiefly of members of the Federal Parliament, Ontario Legislature, and of candidates for one or the other of these houses. The counties of Leeds, Grenville, Stormount, Glengarry, Carleton, Lanark, Renfrew, Dundas, Russell, and Prescott were represented. There were officers of the Liberal associations of the ridings and other representative party men.

It was announced that there had been no programme prepared, but that the discussion would be general.

To-night there will be a banquet at the Chateau Laurier, with Sir Wilfrid, Hon. G. P. Graham, and the Hon. Charles Murphy as the principal speakers.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Business Girls' Club will be held to-morrow (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock in the Green Room of the Y.M.C.A.

Further Gains Are Made On The Ancre

Sir Douglas Haig in Reporting Success Warmly Praises His Troops For Their Conspicious Skill, Dash and Fortitude.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Sir Douglas Haig's troops after consolidating during the night the ground won in the new offensive movement, further advanced the British front north of the Ancre to-day. Nearly 6,000 prisoners were taken during the three-day offensive, one British division advancing a mile and capturing over a thousand prisoners at the expense of 450 casualties.

The bulletin from general headquarters in France, issued to-night reads:

"During the day we further advanced our front north of the Ancre.

"The prisoners taken since Monday morning have reached a total of 5,679.

"The troops employed have shown conspicuous skill, dash and fortitude. Our success was not won without a hard struggle, as the enemy resisted strongly, and as conditions of the ground greatly increased the difficulty of attack. Our losses, considering the extent of our gains, have not been high. One division advanced a mile and took over a thousand prisoners at the expense of 450 casualties.

"South of the Ancre we established the positions won yesterday east of Butte de Warlencourt. The enemy, massing at one point for a counter-attack, was dispersed by our artillery fire.

"Yesterday our aeroplanes did much useful work. Last night they made successful bombing attacks on an enemy aerodrome, railway lines, stations and rolling stock."

A BATTALION OF PRISONERS

A despatch dated Wednesday from the British headquarters in France says:

Except for local ineffective bombing attacks from the direction of Serres, the Germans made no effort to retake their lost ground in the Beaumont-Hamel region to-day (Wednesday). The British are proceeding with its consolidation and also are occupying the high ground immediately north of the river.

Prisoners aggregating a battalion were taken to-day from trenches abutting the area captured during the past two days. An order dated Oct 13, issued by the commander of the Second Guard Reserve Division which has lost heavily in the present battle, was found on one of the men. It calls upon the guards to make greater exertions and sacrifices, which are necessitated by the unbroken spirit of their enemies, and adds:

"We shall see to it that the British and French armies are exterminated in the Hell they have created."

The order also emphasizes the necessity of economizing ammunition on quiet days in order to be ready for emergencies.

SIGNALLER CHAS. MANNERS

Peterborough member of the 21st Battalion, who has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. He is the second Peterborough soldier to get this decoration in the present war.

O. C. M. WON BY PETERBORO' BOY IN SOMME FIGHTING

Signaller Chas. Manners of the 21st Battalion and Before the War Foreman at Henry Hope Factory, is Honoured For Bravery

SIXTH LOCAL DECORATION

Word was received by the Examiner to-day of the awarding of a war decoration to another Peterborough boy Signaller Charles Manners of the 21st Battalion has won a Distinguished Conduct Medal for bravery during the recent fighting. His wife having received a message to that effect. Signaller Manners was a foreman at the Henry Hope factory before enlisting and lived at 583 Chamberlain street. He enlisted with the 57th Regiment's quota for the 2nd contingent—October of 1914 and left with the squad on November 3rd to join the 21st Battalion at Kingston. Signaller Manner's brother, Pte. Ben Manners who resided with him and who was also employed at the Henry Hope factory was the first Peterborough man to be killed in the present war. He was a reservist of the Imperial Army and responded to the first call. Signaller Manner's father and five brothers all gave their service to the Empire. His wife is at present in Toronto where she went to be near Signaller Manners' mother "Charlie's" many friends in Peterborough will be glad to hear of the honour he has won.

So far Peterborough soldiers have won one Military Cross, two D.C.M's and three Military Medals, the 2nd and 21st Battalion and the 4th Battery, C.F.A. each having two awards.

BORDEN OFF ON HOLIDAY

Special to Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—Sir Robert Borden left for the south this afternoon, via New York, where he will address the Lawyers' Club on that city. It is understood the Premier will spend ten days or so in the Southern States taking a rest. No appointment to the Minister of Militia vacancy will be made till he returns. In the meantime the administration will be in the hands of F. B. McCurdy, under secretary for the Department. Sir Sam called on McCurdy this morning and wished him good luck.

Young men save your money to pay on a Y.M.C.A. membership during the ten-day contest Nov. 20-30. It will be your best investment of the year. 12d-115

Conservation of Food Supply Approved Of

Special to The Examiner.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 16.—England is a unit to-day of the support of the Government's food dictatorship plan. Not a newspaper nor an individual apparently in the whole of the United Kingdom voiced criticism of the plans announced in Parliament to-day by Walter Runciman contemplating the conservation of England's food supply. The only criticisms heard were that governmental control had been overlong delayed. Lord Milner is talked of as food dictator.

GOOD SIGNS.

The despatches state to-day that 400 Germans surrendered to an army chaplain and a handful of men. This is the first instance on record that German militarism surrendered to any good influence. This incident, while it does not indicate any real moral change of ideals, emphasizes the fact that German arms are not unconquerable, and that readiness of surrender is a sign of weakening morale and subsidence of the cocky spirit of confidence, that animates the German when he thinks he has his god—Isaac—on his side. This is a fight for the triumph of morality, and the defeat of militaristic immorality, and it is a satisfaction to know that the international moral ideal is coming to the surface. Another encouraging sign is that the Teutons, who wanted war and made war, feeling that they have failed, are now praying for peace. But there shall be no peace till the enemies of peace are beaten—horse, foot and artillery, and the spirit of militarism is effectively laid.

JOURNAL OF COMMERCE.

The high cost of printing—the high cost of printing paper—does not deter the Journal of Commerce or subdue its enterprise. It has issued a special edition of 120 large pages, chiefly devoted to the interests of a trade revival and expansion campaign. This number is called the "Ontario Number," and covers matters in which this Province is most vitally concerned. Ontario is, in virtue of its geographical location, its resources, and its population and spirit of its people, the foremost province of the Dominion, so that a publication specially directed to a consideration of the affairs and interests of the province, industrial and economic, is of primary concern to both Ontario and the people of the Dominion at large. This special number of the Journal of Commerce is not only a credit to journalistic enterprise and large outlook, but a storehouse of useful and important information, emphasized by striking illustrations, showing how the premier Province of the Confederation is both playing its part, and is also adaptable to playing a far more important part in future development and expansion.

LAURIER AND RECRUITING.

The Toronto News gives striking, if negative, testimony to the place occupied by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the public life of Canada. In discussing the subject the News says: "Laurier no longer rules Canada," an admission that Laurier, morally, if not officially, has been a ruling influence in this country. The Ottawa Journal, however, thinks otherwise. It talks as if Laurier were Prime Minister, and argues that the slow recruiting in Quebec is due to the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not, as he should have been, "preaching recruiting in Quebec, though the fact remains that the Government and not any private citizen, is responsible for recruiting. Sir Wilfrid has made more appealing appeals in Quebec than Sir Robert Borden or any other first-class member of his cabinet. The Borden Government is responsible for killing the recruiting spirit in Quebec. It has fostered Nationalism, whose doctrine, that Canada should take no part in the wars of Britain, has been preached in season and out of season, not only by unofficial propagandists, but Nationalism has been officially admitted to the Borden cabinet, and allowed to shape its attitude and paralyze its actions along imperial lines. It is up to" the Borden government to revive the cause of slow recruiting in Quebec. It created the cause by subjecting the health spirit to poisoning in its cabinet, making it, in part—in effect—the policy of the Government. No, no; the responsibility of the Government cannot be so lightly ignored. Not an honest Conservative or Conservative journal nor an honest worker in the interests of recruiting that does not blame the Government for not taking action to place recruiting upon a systematic and organized basis, instead of leaving it to the initiative and sustained effort of private individuals. How is the Government National Service organization getting on? If the late lamented Sam Hughes had been put on the job he would have had its wheels moving merrily before now. Sir Sam did things; his late colleagues talk of doing things. The people are ready for the Government to act in the matter of recruiting—to take some organized and effective steps that will prevent resort to more drastic steps—compulsory service.

NEUTRALITY STILL.

President Wilson is again officially made the ruler of the United States and the custodian of its interests and dignity of the country, or the country has somewhat suffered under his dilettante statesmanship. His literally literary administration—writing notes—has not added to the good name of the United States, nor demonstrated a real concern for the dignity of the country, or the sacredness of its flag. It is sometimes thought that President Wilson's cult of exaggerated neutrality was due to political considerations — a little tendying to some of the electorate; but the necessity of that is past; and the President of the United States can, with the question of four more years in office settled, afford to look a little after the interests of the United States, and exercise a little official regard for its standing, both in the eyes of the people and the eyes of the world.

Belgium, Serbia and Poland have been outraged in many ways, but they have escaped the humiliation that has, unresented, more than in the case of any other great nation of history, been placed upon the United States, through or under the diplomacy of Mr. Wilson. The flag of the United States has been made a door-mat by Germany; it has not protested, does not protect, its citizens on the high seas. The Captain of the Columbia, a citizen of the United States, and master of a ship carrying the United States flag, was under the delusion when threatened by a German submarine, that the flag would protect him. He flung it to the winds, but it was no protecting talisman; his ship was torpedoed and sunk, and he, himself, taken prisoner and humiliatingly confined as a captive for six days, and fed a few morsels of black bread. But he had also to swallow the blacker and more bitter bread of humiliation over the fact that the flag of his country, the star-spangled banner, that had blanketted his cradle and flaunted its vaunted omnipotence of protection over all his days, became a dishonoured rag in the hour of trial and stress. The flag of the United States, the symbol of its being, and the visible token of its essential power and of its international influence should protect its subjects, the embodiment of nationality, whenever its protection is invoked, or even indicated. And the fact that it does not do so, gives the good people of the United States a serious subject of thought.

It is not so with the "meteor flag of England," that protects the humblest of its subjects in every part of the world, and never suffers shame unavenged. If a ship stoker, a British subject, is visited with wrong or outrage in the ports of any foreign country, a war ship flying the Union Jack is at once on the spot; full reparation is demanded, and if it is refused, the decks are cleared for action and if needed, there is war; for the sacredness of the flag is to be vindicated, its power to protect those to whom the shelter of its mighty symbolism is due, must be maintained. It is war over a humble British subject, not for the man alone, but for the principle. Britain is fighting for a principle to-day, and her strength lies in the fact of her sublime slavery to principle.

Germany outraged the principle of the national integrity of Belgium. Britain went to war and is sacrificing millions of men and treasure to vindicate a principle. Germany has, besides, outraged every principle of freedom and humanity for which the United States stands, which its flag symbolizes. That flag is made a scoff and United States citizens outraged in nationality and person under its very aegis, material folds. Is United States neutrality, is national self respect, itself, compatible with such conditions?

Canada's Egg and Poultry Production

At no time in the history of the Dominion has the necessity for increased production of eggs and poultry been more apparent than at the present time. The demand is unprecedented. This is true whether for export or for home consumption. Consumers generally and even producers themselves are eating more and more eggs. The average per capita consumption of eggs in Canada this year will be greater than ever before.

The market for Canadian eggs and poultry is very firm. Prices to producers are extremely high, but even at these prices trade is increasingly active all over the country. The prospects for a continued demand are very bright. The country is facing a shortage, not only of current receipts, but of Canadian storage stocks as well. So great has been the export demand that we shall be obliged to import to meet our own requirements. Increased production has never rested upon a more secure foundation.

That poultry on the farm are profitable needs no argument. Eggs now rank as a staple article in the products of the farm. Poultry flocks can be increased materially without much additional outlay for buildings and equipment, and the increased labour involved is not such as will bear heavily upon the time of those charged with the care of the stock. Some object to the present price of feed, but when it is considered that the selling price of the produce is from forty to sixty per cent. higher than it was two years ago, the margin of profit is such as will compare favourably with that obtainable elsewhere on the farm.

Canadian egg producers have responded well to the call for increased production. The country as a whole which was importing eggs a few years ago, has in the aggregate, produced more than sufficient for its own requirements this year and last. Between seven and eight million dozen Canadian eggs were exported to Great Britain last year, and as an indication of that is going forward this year, nearly one million dozen were shipped during the first week of October. Yet the supply on the British market is still short, and there is a demand for many millions more. Increased production, more and better poultry, should be the motto of every Canadian farm and homestead.

Canada has all the requisites for the production of a quantity far in excess of her own requirements, and with her favourable climatic conditions can, with proper care and attention, produce quality equal to the best in the world. Only the fringe of production possibilities has been touched up to the present. The Western Provinces, with their volumes of cheap feed, are the natural home for the Canadian hen. The bulk of the surplus at the present time comes from the provinces of Ontario and Prince Edward Island. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Quebec do not produce sufficient for their own requirements. They must do more; and there is now an opportunity for the Western Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta to demonstrate to Canada and the Empire as a whole what they can do in this connection in this great hour of trade expansion. The first experimental shipments of eggs from Winnipeg to the British market are either now, or soon will be on their way, and it is hoped that the increase in production in the Western Provinces in the ensuing year will be such as to warrant the opening up of a big trade in this direction.

Eggs are scarce in Canada at the present time. Current prices are high, and a sharp decline immediately following the conclusion of the War is not anticipated. When prices advance gradually, as has been the case in staple food products, they decline slowly. It will take some years to re-establish the normal meat supply upon the markets of the world, and while prices of meats are high, people will continue to use increasingly large quantities of eggs. This condition will naturally be reflected in the matter of price.—Journal of Commerce.

SIR SAM HUGHES GOES OUT.

The withdrawal of Sir Sam Hughes from the Borden Government, under pressure, was not altogether unexpected. He has been a heavy load for the Administration ever since the out break of the war. A man of great energy, he was possessed of the driving force so noticeably absent in the Prime Minister and some of his colleagues, and had he stuck to his desk and his official duties as Minister of Militia Sir Sam might have become a tower of strength to the government and a great force for good in the country.—The Globe.

HELPING THE "TRUSTS."

The Toronto News says: "We are still unconvinced that we could reduce prices and destroy combinations in Canada by subjecting the Canadian people to the ruthless domination of the world-circling American trusts and corporations." Does the Editor of The News never look out of his office window? At any hour of the day he can see the waggons of the "world-circling" American food trusts carrying meat to the citizens of Toronto from a market controlled by Chicago meat packers and operating under the shelter of Canadian food taxes.—Globe.

THE CANNERS' COMBINE PRICES.

Everyone in the tomato-growing districts of this Province knows that the canners' combination squeezes the price paid to the producers down to the last possible cent. The farmers of Ontario, under agreement with the combine, have to supply almost a bushel of tomatoes to the packing houses for the price which the retail grocer is bound to extract from the consumer for a single tin of the same tomatoes, some of them put up by cheap imported foreign labour. It does not require much skill in political economy to see that it would be possible by a distributive system, exempt from the handicap of having to pay returns on watered stock and unutilized factories, to give the producer more per bushel for his tomatoes, and charge the consumer less per tin for them in their prepared form.— The Globe.

SIR SAM LIFTS THE CURTAIN.

One of the most common complaints made against the Borden Government regarding its dealings with the affairs of the overseas forces of the Dominion was that the patronage system was in full operation during the early months of the war, and that the scramble for a share of this patronage often interfered not only with the efficiency of the service, but clogged the wheels of the administrative departments. Sir Sam Hughes, in his final retort to Sir Robert Borden, lifts the curtain and shows the role played by some of the members of the Government.

"It is difficult for me to recall," writes Sir Sam to the Premier, "where you have actively supported me in the passage of any order in Council concerning the upbuilding of the militia when opposed by two members of the Cabinet usually antagonistic to anything proposed by me. As you are aware, it took us four months in the midst of this great war to fight through this principle of purchasing, for the Second Division, trucks at the lowest wholesale prices, instead of allowing large commissions to local agents who would have nothing whatever to do with securing the order."

That four-months fight at the Council Board of Canada for the spoils of party patronage should become historic. It shows why the Canadian Manufacturers Association broke loose and denounced the methods of the middlemen who swarmed at Ottawa, making profits to which they were not entitled, because they had the ear of some member of the Government.—The Globe.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT DESTROYED

Norwood Will Be Without Lights For a Couple of Weeks—Visitors to the Village During the Week

NORWOOD, Nov. 15.—The electric light plant was partially destroyed by fire on Sunday morning about two o'clock. The village will therefore be without lights for a couple of weeks. Mr. Harrison, the proprietor had it insured for $2,000.

TOOK CHARGE.

Rev. Mr. Cooke, pastor of the Westwood and South Dummer circuit took charge of the services in the Methodist church on Sunday.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday morning, November 8th at seven o'clock at the home of Mr. J. Winnacott, Huntsville when his eldest daughter, Florence was married to Mr. Harold Dancey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dancey of Norwood.

The bride who was given away by her father was attended by her sister, Miss Eva, while Mr. Dean Maxwell of Toronto supported the groom.

The bride who was charmingly and becomingly attired in white silk crepe de chine, wore the conventional wedding veil and carried a bouquet of white roses, while the bridesmaid wore pink crepe de chine and carried pink roses.

After the ceremony which was performed by Rev. Adams of Huntsville in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties, a very dainty wedding breakfast was served.

The numerous beautiful presents received by the happy couple testify to the esteem in which they are held.

At nine o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Dancey amid showers of confetti and with the best wishes of many friends and acquaintances who assembled at the station, took the train for Toronto and other points.

After November 15th Mr. and Mrs. Dancey will be at home to their friends at the Rowanwood Apartments, Toronto.

At a meeting of the Women's Institute on Thursday night, Mrs. Barton and Mrs. Long were appointed as delegates to the convention to be held in Toronto this week.

Mr. Hartley Ivey of Brantford is home this week on account of the very serious illness of his father.

Mrs. J. E. Roxburgh returned home from Peterborough on Tuesday.

Miss Jane Stewart of Swift Current who has spent the past month in Otonabee has returned to Norwood to visit friends.

Mr. Andrew Williamson who was a guest this week at the home of Dr. Sutton left on Monday for his home in Lethbridge.

Mr. Norman Pickard of Port Arthur was a guest on Tuesday of his sister-in-law, Miss F. Waters.

On Wednesday evening Rev. and Mrs. Sanderson and Mr. and Mrs. Birmingham motored over from Campbellford and attended the dinner given by the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church in the basement of the church.

After dinner all assembled in the auditorium of the church where a most interesting lecture was given by Rev. Sanderson on his tour through Europe and his escape from Germany in the summer of 1914.

Several well-received solos were sung by Rev. McKenzie of Peterborough. The receipts at the door amounted to $129.30.

Miss Zella Paget of Havelock was in town on Wednesday.

Mr. A. Pickard of Newcastle was in town on Tuesday.

WEDDING BELLS.

On Wednesday, November 8th in Belleville the marriage took place of Mrs. Maggie Stevens, daughter of Mrs. David Paget of Norwood and Mr. Ernest McDonald. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald will reside at Cottesloe.

Mrs. Williamson and little son, of Lethbridge are guests at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Sutton.

Miss Mary Kirkpatrick has returned home from Brighton where she has been visiting friends.

Mr. and Mrs. McDowell leave next week for Montreal. Mr. McDowell has been transferred from the Norwood branch of the Department of Agriculture to the Monteith Demonstration farm in New Ontario.

EASTERN ONTARIO DISTRICT DAIRY MEETINGS

The Annual District Dairy Meeting for the County of Peterboro will be held in The City Council Chamber, Peterboro, on Wednesday, Nov. 22

At two o'clock p.m., under the auspices of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario.

Mr. G. G. Publow, Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, Mr. L. A. Zufelt, Superintendent of the Dairy School, Kingston, Mr Henry Glendinning of Manilla, and the District Representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, will address the meeting.

The local Dairy Instructor will be present and report upon his work during the season.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, Director of the District, will occupy the chair.

At the close of the meeting a Director will be nominated to represent the District for the ensuing year.

This will be a very important meeting as the new Dairy Act will be under discussion, and every farmer and farmer's son, who has the interest of his calling at heart, as well as its monetary success, should not fail to be present.

THE BATTLE OF THE SOMME

"The greatest moving picture in the world"

On Monday Next For Three Days

The official British war pictures of the Battle of the Somme, will be presented to the people of Peterborough, being a record in film of the opening phase of the British offensive, when the German lines were smashed on July 1, and giving a vivid idea of the terrible preliminary bombardment. These pictures are guaranteed authentic by Sir Douglas Haig. They are endorsed by the King and released by Mr. Lloyd George, Secretary of War, on condition that they be shown exactly as they were issued. These pictures are the first official moving pictures of a British battle ever shown, and a living illustration of the biggest news event to British eyes since Waterloo.

"If the exhibition of this picture all over the world does not end war, God help civilization. See that this picture, reaches everyone. Mothers, wives, sisters, and affianced ones, your hearts will hear your voices speak in honour which is itself an epic of self-sacrifice and gallantry, and glory of the living and the dead."—Mr. Lloyd George.

Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday

The pictures of "The Battle of the Somme," released by the war office for public exhibition in honour of Britain's heroes at the front, created a perfect sensation in England and throughout Great Britain. A million people saw them in London alone during the first few days. Fifteen hundred copies of the film have been printed, the greatest order since the invention of the motion picture.

The film consists of 5,500 feet of action. All superfluous matter was carefully cut by the film editors of the British Topical Committee, acting under authority of the war office. Sir Douglas Haig states that the picture is correct and authentic as it now stands, and the British Government have decreed that once released for exhibition it must not be tampered with, even though it show the horrors of war as well as the heroism. The soldiers have suffered and sacrificed—it is for us to bear witness to their honour and glory. "If this film does not end war, God help civilization," declares Mr. Lloyd George.

A BIG MINE EXPLOSION.

Prussian Super-Zeppelin Carries 60 Bombs, 9 Guns

London. — That airships of the Zeppelin type are vulnerable, that when they come in contact with things that can hit back they are helpless indeed, is what the remains of the L-33, now lying open to the public gaze in a field "somewhere in Essex," tell.

The most serious blow to the Prussians in their airship raids on London in September and October, in which they lost four airships, was the present they were compelled to make of a super-Zeppelin—the L-33—to the British authorities.

As some compensation to the suburbs which suffered damage on the night of September 23rd it may be said that the Zeppelin which caused most of it, has provided means to all the drawings in the construction of such a machine—and a better—though it is doubtful if the British want such things unless for naval reconnoissance. Otherwise they are useless, because it is no part of the English game to raid undefended places for the slaying of the helpless.

Under the guidance of experts a party of newspaper correspondents had a private view of the super-Zeppelin. As was said on the morning that she fell, she looks just like the Crystal Palace in need of glazing. There is a marked depression in the centre of the framework. She is big, certainly, but whichever way she is looked at in detail she suggests the thin-skinned and mortal balloon. Yet she was the best that Count Zeppelin could do as things are. She was built this year, and it is believed that the raider was on her maiden voyage. Undamaged petrol tanks bear the date "July 11, 1916," and there are evidences to show that this date does not apply to the tanks alone, but indicates the period at which the fabric was completed and the "Zepp" fully equipped for its mission of frightfulness.

INGENIOUSLY CONSTRUCTED.

There is not much about the structural details which were not fairly well known to the Admiralty before, but minute examination does not detract from the tribute which may, without prejudice, be paid to the ingenious lines on which this monster of the air was built.

"The weight of the Zeppelin," said an officer, "with crew and full load aboard is 60 tons," and for a full hour he talked figures full of interest.

There were six engines, he explained, each developing 230 horse power. All were in gondolas, small and large, shaped like boats.

"This is one of the gondolas," he said, and showed a little aluminum 18-foot boat. The inside was bristling with machinery. In the centre was a large engine which was started by a hand lever. In front of the engine was a little seat. "In that seat," explained the guide, "sat the man who tended the engines. Here, almost touching him, sat the man who manipulated the machine gun, and forward was the place for the sailor who looked after the wireless machinery."

That gondola told the story of the Zepp. Everything was compact, well thought out, strong and efficient, with not an inch of spare room. The beauty of the work and the excellent craftsmanship were apparent to all. Some of the work probably was done by women

FABRIC WAS BURNED.

Coming to the remains of the main body, which is 750 feet long, the guide explained that 2,000,000 cubic feet of gas were used to expand the 24 compartments. Nothing now remains of the fabric, some of which was made of Manchester shirting. It perished in the fire which was started by one of the crew before he deserted the ship.

But the girders remain and they convey vividly the enormous size of the air ship when intact. To demonstrate the lightness of the structure, one of the officers lifted with one hand aleft a strip of laced aluminum metal work.

"This piece of wood," he proceeded, pointing to some charred remains in the centre of the tangled wreckage, "is all that remains of what is called the 'cat-walk.' It is really the keel of the Zeppelin, which runs the whole length of the ship. Inside the keel is a tunnel along which the crew can walk, and reach any of the gondolas, or indeed any part of the ship."

Another part of the ship which was specially interesting was that which was used as a receptacle for bombs. "The actual bomb dropping apparatus," the guide explained, "has been taken away, but here is the window through which the bombs were dropped. All that the man in charge of the bombs had to do, was to open this window and press a button. The machinery did the rest. There was room for 60 bombs in this 'Zepp.'"

The guns, or rather the places where the guns had been, was one of the most interesting features. "One was there, two there, and another there," said the guide pointing to the sides of the ship. "Another was perched up in the tail, and two were on top of the airship. There were nine in all. The calibre of some of them is greater than our English machine guns."

Small metal cylindrical tank at intervals along the ship contained ropes, which were used for mooring purposes. When the ship was about to come to anchor a lever was pulled, and all these ropes shot to the ground simultaneously. By this means the soldiers were able to capture her quickly, and guide her to her shed. But that shed will never see her again.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everybody should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble

Mountain Village Establishes Record

MANY RECRUITING MEETINGS THIS WEEK HAVE PRODUCED GOOD RESULTS FOR THE 207TH.

Ottawa, November 14. — The little village of Mountain of about 200 souls has established a record for Canada in the matter of giving to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. At a meeting held there this week conducted by Captain Dancey and Lieut. O'Brien, of the 207th, about $1460 was contributed. Several became life members of the local branch of the society, by paying $25. Others gave $20, and nearly everybody in the village gave a substantial donation after Captain Dancey had made an appeal on behalf of the fund.

Captain Dancey also conducted a meeting at Kemptville, at which seven young men offered themselves for military service. Four of these were added to the 207th. He reports that the series of meetings which have been held at Chesterville, Mountain, Winchester and Kemptville, this week, have been productive of good results

SPOILED ALLIES' PLAN.

Greece Prevented the Cutting Off of Turkey from Germany.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Operations in the Roumanian theatre of the war must for the time being be regarded as of merely local importance, according to the Petrograd correspondent of the Morning Post. The correspondent writes:

"The allies' whole plan of campaign in this quarter fell through as soon as it became evident that the forces at Saloniki were unable to devote their undivided attention to their task owing to the attitude of Greece.

"If the adhesion of the Roumanians had been accompanied by similar action by Greece—which it is believed here could have been brought about by the use of a couple of warships at the proper moment—matters would now be very different, and joint action from Saloniki and the Dobrudja would now have cut off Germany's supplies of men from Turkey. The Turks have always been among the finest war material in the world, and under German officers they must be considered extremely formidable. Greece has been allowed to prevent the allied scheme for cutting off Germany, or at any rate to postpone the scheme for another year."

WHY RHEIMS WAS SHELLED.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—In explanation of the recent bombardments of Rheims by the Germans, the Overseas News Agency says they were in retaliation for the bombardment by heavy French guns on several occasions of the towns of Vitry, Warmerville and Berasmont, behind the German lines, causing the death of three men, one woman and one child in Beauncourt. Rheims was shelled on five days. The fire was not directed against the cathedral, but against concealed positions of French cannon in the city.

MEXICO REPORTS NO FOOD-STUFF SHORTAGE.

The production of food stuffs in Mexico for the current year has obviated any chance of shortage, according to the department of agriculture. The crops are said to be not only sufficient to prevent famine but will make Mexico practically independent of importation of foodstuffs from other countries although a certain amount of corn and flour will continue to be imported into the northern states from the United States, because of superior facilities for transportation to those localities.

The crops, it is admitted, will not reach normal production but will be sufficient to allow a certain amount of exportation. The question of food supply is one of distribution rather than production, and it will be necessary to transport it to the more barran states products from those localities where normal or nearly normal crops prevail. It is pointed out that while some undoubtedly died of starvation in the capital last year, this was due not to shortage of food but to the impossibility of adequately transporting what was available.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

To clean hair brushes, take a cupful of cornmeal and fill the brush, rubbing gently with the hand. As it absorbs the grease and dirt shake it out and use fresh meal till the brush is cleaned thoroughly. This is better than ammonia, as there is no water to injure or loosen the back of the brush.

TRENCH PHRASES

BY A CANADIAN OVERSEAS

For some time I have been collecting war phrases, or trench slang, and I must say the boys have been very good in assisting me. Some of the expressions will, in all probability, remain, especially those in general use. Some phrases differ in meaning amongst the different battalions, but nowhere is the difference very great.

Probably the one most often used is 'Napoo' or 'Narpoo' (from French n'a y plus). It has a variety of meanings.

'Nothing doing'—('I went to headquarters—but Napoo'.)

'A polite refusal'—(I asked for leave, but got, Napoo').

'A false alarm'—(We were ready for the Huns, but Napoo').

And it also means 'no more.' A man is 'Napoo' when his body is in so many pieces and covers so many square yards of ground that it is scarcely worth while gathering the pieces.

Tommy has derived a great many of his expressions from fraternising with the gallant 'Poilus' and the brave 'Belgies'. i.e.

Bon (good).
No bon (no good).
Plenty bon (very good).
Compray (Do you understand?)
No compray (I don't understand).
Plenty compray (I understand very well).
Mongy, from 'manger' (to eat).
Fini (Finished).
Merci boko (Thank you very much).
Allay (Go away; away with you).
Apres la guerre (After the war).

Another expression which Tommy uses is of German origin 'Strafe). 'Strafing the Fritzes' (Bombarding the Huns).

Funk holes (Dugouts).
Pip squeaks (German 3 in. shells).
Janker or Jankerluid (A defaulter).
Gone West (Killed).
Four by two (Tommy's term for a Jew).
Rooti (Bread (from Hindustan).
Pozzy (Jam.)
Burgoo (Porridge).
Gippo (Gravy or grease).
Jack Johnson, Black Marias, Coal Boxes, (German 17 in. shells).
Swinging the lead (Feigning sickness to the M. O. when you have nothing to complain about.)
Chucking the dummy (Collapse on parade ground to impress the officer you have fainted).
Buckshee (Extra rations; anything over after the issue has been made, i.e., 'Buckshee loaf')
Dekko (To have a look).
On the peg (When a man is warned for company office).
Poultice wallahs (R.A.M.C.)
Home and Colonials (H.A.C.)
Monkey drill (Ceremonial drill on parade ground.)
Slash the pheasant (Pass the margarine).
Gunfire (tea).
Brew up; drunq up (Make tea).
Square pushing (Flirting).
Windy or wind up (A man nervous in the trenches).
Ready for anything (R. F. A.)
Physical jerks ('Gym.)
Cushie, cushy (A soft job, or rest in billets).
Talcum powder batteries (18 pounders).
Jake (Everything is 'jake' when rations are good, equipment in condition; Frits not bothering you; in short, you are generally happy and it is a 'bon war.'
Coal box; Sausage; Minnewerfer (German trench mortar shells).
Throwing iron rations (Putting over shells).
Whizz bangs (So called because the explosion follows on the first sound of the shell passing through the air. The trajectory is low; the range short, and the speed high, as compared with Howitzer shells.)
Salvo (A whole battery of guns firing at once).

Last of all is Tommy's term for England whilst abroad, "Blighty." It is also Tommy's name for a wound serious enough to necessitate a man being brought home to England. There are various theories as to the origin of 'Blighty.' One is that it is Tommy's pronunciaton of the Hindu word for England: "the land across the black water." It has also been traced to the Arabic 'bilad-i.' 'My country,' or 'My home.' Whatever its origin 'Blighty' will always be the synonym for 'home.'

SOMME PICTURES ARE NOT HORRIBLE

London Press Unanimous That They Should Be Presented Unchanged

SENTIMENTALISTS AT WORK

"Don't Humiliate Germany" Movement Asks That They Be Pruned

London newspapers were practically unanimous in declaring that "The Battle of the Somme" official motion pictures should not be tampered with when they were presented to English audiences. The chief question—aside from military considerations, however, was whether the actual portrayal of war was too grim for realism. All the journals asserted that nothing should be done to the pictures to destroy any part of their realistic presentation.

It has been decided by censorship boards in Ontario that the pictures, should be witnessed by the people of this province without deleting the thrilling episodes of the fight.. As a result the film will be shown at the Grand Opera House, beginning Monday, November 20th.

When General Sherman said that war was hell, he spoke what was a truism to every soldier and a world which knew that side of war which is concerned with broken hearts and ruined homes, agreed with him.

But the world did not know war at first hand; the question was, should it be enlightened so far as the moving picture camera could accomplish that feat. Should those who worked or waited, or most of all, those who were not giving the maximum of effort in support of those actually fighting, be shown in a more intimate and nearer way than even before. Something—but not by all means all—of what these last were suffering in the cause of justice and of freedom.

The judgment of authority was given in favour of this revelation and the nation has endorsed it. It was no question of making a show of death or suffering for the recreation of pleasure-seekers, nor have the pictures so widely shown ever been accepted in that spirit. They are to the vast mass of the nation a sacred thing for they show something of the greatest sacrifice that man can make—the giving up of life itself, and all that it holds dear in a noble cause.

But then came sinster rumors of an attempt, by means of subtle influence such as we have learned to know well in this war, to get certain scenes removed from the films that are being shown. These scenes, it was understood, are not those which deal with the charges of our troops under fire and in which men are seen to fall, perchance to rise no more, there are the scenes which might be considered offensive to German or pro-German sentiment. It was asked whether an unseen hand was at work once more through the medium of our sentimentalists and whether this underground agitation was another phase of the "Don't humiliate Germany" movement that was so sternly repressed by public opinion at the opening of the conflict.

The English public, however, would stand no tampering with the films which are now to be shown in Peterborough. They have already been carefully edited, they contain absolutely nothing which it is unfit that the nation should not see and as they are now, so they must remain. The beginning of the terrible combat on the Somme, an actual battle in progress, artillery actions, mine explosions and charges into the enemy trenches is shown in the official pictures.

The films include five sections dealing with the preparatory action fro a June 25, to June 30, and at attack on June 31, and July 1, and every phase of the acting is marvelously depicted.

The Battle of the Somme in motion pictures is the greatest production of its kind the world has ever known and it rivets the attention of audiences wherever shown. The film will be presented to Peterborough audiences for the first time on Monday, November 20th at the Grand Opera House.

ARE YOU SATISFIED

To suffer day in and day out with lame back, rheumatism or kidney trouble with the prospect of these diseases becoming chronic, when you can secure a medicine at small cost that will cure you. Dr. Ilanta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are so reliable and satisfactory in the treatment of these diseases, that if you are a sufferer you will be well advised if you spend a box of them at once and give them a trial. We know what the result will be. They are sold and recommended at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, Peterborough.

THE USEFUL REINDEER.

In sub-Arctic countries the reindeer takes the place of ox, sheep and horses. It gives milk, meat and clothing, and is a good beast of burden.

From the milk the Laplander makes a cheese. It is true that those who have tasted it do not praise it; they say it is hard and rank of taste. But that may be due to bad cheese-making. At any rate, reindeer milk cheese is the Laplander's chief food during the long winters of the North. In the summer he lives on a frugal diet of curds and whey. He makes no butter, but the Finlanders do; it is of a very pale colour, nearly white.

At the end of the summer the reindeer becomes very fat and the flesh is excellent. It is regarded as the greatest delicacy by their owners, a delicacy to which they treat themselves only on rare occasions. The reindeer has the thickest skin of all northern animals, and the warmest for clothing.

As draught animals the reindeer are used not only for drawing the sleighs in winter, but for agricultural purposes during the short summer. As civilization pushes further and further north, the reindeer will become of great economic importance.

THE WAR'S NEW DISEASES ARE BEING INVESTIGATED

The horrors of war have been augmented by two new diseases—"trench fever" and "trench nephritis," the latter somewhat similar to Bright's disease—according to a report received at Harvard University from Dr. Hugh Cabot, who is in charge of the Fourth Harvard Surgical Unit at the front.

Both diseases are subject to investigation by commissions appointed by the British government.

Eight thousand wounded and sick soldiers cared for and only nineteen died, is the record of this unit during its three months of service at itssemi-base hospital "somewhere in France."

MORE WOUNDED THAN SICK.

The contingent, consisting of 34 physicians and surgeons, and 75 nurses, was established last June at the hospital, which was principally under canvas, though several corrugated iron "huts" were available for the most severe cases. The contingent was just in time to share in the work of caring for the wounded from the Somme region, which necessitated an increase of beds in the hospital from 1,340 to 2,380.

"A most striking feature of modern warfare," says the doctor, "is the high percentage of wounded as compared with sick. In most former wars the proportion of sick to wounded has been at least four or five to one, whereas during the summer in this war the proportion of sick to wounded is one to five or six, and in the winter one to one and one-half."

PROOF OF EFFECTIVE FIRE.

Speaking of the character of the wounds, the doctor says: "Rifle and machine gun bullets, on account of their steel jackets and high velocity, cause relatively clean wounds, and the same is true of shrapnel. Interestingly enough, during the early part of July, at the beginning of the Somme drive,' we had a large proportion of machine gun bullets, due to the fact that the German trenches were at least partially intact; were still in three well developed lines so arranged that one segment would enfilade the other. Thus a section of a battalion having entered a second line German trench on the 6th of July was literally wiped out by an enfilading machine gun fired from both sides. Later, after the three lines of permanent trenches had been blotted out by the extraordinarily accurate fire of the British heavy artillery, most of the wounds were produced by fragments of high explosive shells and mines, and were therefore ragged, tearing injuries, removing two or three inches of the great bones of the thigh or lower leg and producing most horrible wounds.

THE HELMENTS SAVE MANY.

The universal use of steel helments has much reduced the importance of wounds in the head. Though not an absolute protection they either deflect the course of the projectile so as to produce only a stunning injury, or break the force of the blow, with the production of a badly bruised or depressed wound, but often without fracturing the skull.

In abdominal wounds we saw nothing in the early stages, since if these injuries are to be successfully dealt with they must be operated upon within six hours. Special hospitals for the purpose have been established immediately behind the firing line. During the first year of the war these injuries were almost universally fatal. To-day between 40 and 50 per cent. of the cases operated upon recover.

"A most important part of the work of the unit has concerned itself with the management of the dreadful wounds of the face, involving mouth and jaws. This department is under the management of Dr. Kazanjian, whose work has been of such a high order that all the cases of this kind in the whole area are placed under his care. In this department, probably more than any other, the Harvard unit has contributed to the efficiency of the Royal Army Medical Corps.

NEARLY ALL WOUNDS INFECTED

"Practically all wounds are infected, but the most serious and important of these infections is the so-called gas gangrene, caused by a gas-producing bacillus. From eighty to ninety per cent. of the wounds are infected with this organism, in which, in rapidly developing cases, the tissues about the wound crackle under the fingers on account of the minute collections of gas under the skin. More important, however, are the collections of gas deep in the tissue, where it spreads rapidly to the soft parts, literally melting away in this neighborhood and thus producing the most startling and most serious complication, secondary hemorrhage."

Speaking of the work at a semi-base hospital, Dr. Cabot continues:

"Work is light or heavy in very direct relation to the activity of the fighting in that section of the front they are in. For this reason there were periods of relative calm during which it was possible to carry on more or less scientific investigations into the new problems presented by the war.

"SHELL SHOCK."

"One of the most interesting problems was the condition known as 'shell shock,' more closely allied to the so-called traumatic neuroses seen in civil practice than to any other condition with which we are familiar.

"Just as in civil life traumatic neuroses have been a cloak for deception, so in military operations 'shell shock' has become a potent source of malingering. In the most severe cases of 'shell shock' the men are deaf and dumb, show gross shakiness and tremors, and in some instances various grades of paralysis of the arms or legs. All the symptoms are easy to counterfeit, and when it became generally known that men with so-called 'shell shock' would be sent to the base the strain proved too much for a considerable number of men."

PROMINENT TORONTO CONTRACTOR TELLS HOW NEW HERBAL MEDICINE CURED HIM

Most Remarkable Statement of Results From Native Roots

Mr. Joseph Gillett, one of the most prominent and highly respected contracting painters and interior decorators of Toronto, who resides at 1499 Queen Street, West, has just had a most remarkable experience with Native-Roots (double strength), the new herbal medicine. For the benefit of others who may be afflicted the same as he was, Mr. Gillett has consented to make a public statement telling of his experience. This is what he says:

"I have suffered for a long time with a catchy pain across the small of my back. I got so bad that it often caused me a great deal of trouble to bend over and lace my boots. I did not sleep at all well, and almost every noon I would come home 'all in,' not having the strength or ambition to do a thing more.

"About three weeks ago I started to take the new herbal medicine Native-Roots, and I now feel like a different man. The pains across my back are gone and I can stoop over without the slightest trouble. My sleep is sound and restful, and I am ever so much stronger. Only last Sunday I took a twelve-mile walk, and came home at night as fresh as when I started. I certainly can strongly recommend Native-Roots."

Native-Roots is the medicine referred to by Mr. Gillett. Being a purely herbal medicine all persons can rely upon it to build up the system in a healthy manner. It does its work as Nature intended, as it contains no metallic salts or dangerous mineral drugs.

All persons suffering from loss of ambition, stomach, liver or kidney trouble should not wait another day before starting this Native-Roots treatment which cured Mr. Gillett. Hundreds of Toronto and Hamilton citizens are now rejoicing after regaining lost health through this treatment.

The pure Native-Roots (double strength) is dispensed in Peterborough by the Warne Drug Co., and by good druggists and chemists throughout Ontario.

FOUGHT EPIDEMICS IN GERMAN PRISON CAMP

PTE. HAZELL OF BRANTFORD, WAS RELEASED—IS BACK AT FRONT—GIVEN D.C.M.

Brantford, Nov. 15.—The Distinguished Conduct Medal has been awarded by the British War Office to Pte. A. Hazell, one of six men of the Royal Army Medical Corps, who while prisoners in Germany fought the cholera and the typhus epidemic which raged at the Gottingen Prison Camp, unchecked by the Germans. Hazell left Brantford with the first group of British reservists on August 17, 1914, and was captured during the early fighting. He was released as a non-combatant recently and is back with the Ambulance Corps in the firing line. He was day clerk at the Bodega Tavern here before his departure.

BILL JEFF, TWENTY THREE TIMES IN JAIL, GOES IN FOR A FIVE YEAR TERM

Montreal, November 15. — Bill Jeff, 62 years of age, 23 times arrested, and more familiar to the guards at Bordeaux Jail, than he is to any boarding housekeeper, had his trips to Bordeaux varied by a five year term in the St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary yesterday. Judge Basin, before whom he appeared for theft, was the factor in changing Bill's address for the next five years.

Seven times arrested for theft, and sixteen times for drunkenness, the old-timer had to be reminded of his lapses by the judge who had a long sheet in front of him containing his various offences. He got his five years for stealing a suit of clothes from his boarding mistress. Bill, it was proved, was a very generous man with his stolen goods. On his return to his boarding house at St. Antoine street his generosity held full away. To the boarding house keeper he gave what he could not pawn, and to her daughter, who acted as treasurer for her mother, the money to pay his board bill. Bill always said he was a hard worked and had uncertain hours.

"How many times have you been here?" asked Judge Basin.

"I don't know, but I've been here," he replied.

"Well I will help you to remember. Twenty-three times, and the wonder is that you have not been to the penitentiary."

"Your honour," said Bill, "you will notice that it has been a long time between arrests. That ought to count for something."

"It will count. The most of your life has been spent with the police looking for you. You can be found any time in the next five years at the penitentiary. That is your sentence."

FIRE RANGER RETURNS HOME

Lindsay, Nov. 15.—Mr. William Porteous passed through Lindsay yesterday on his way home to Nestleton. Mr. Porteous has been fire ranging many miles the other side of North Bay during the past summer, and returns looking hale and feeling like a new man.

"This is the life," he said, "the health-laden ozone breezes which fill the air in that country give one an appetite like a harvest horse, and a buoyant feeling like one feels about sundown."

He reports very few fires during the summer of 1916.

WOMEN WEARING MEN'S CLOTHES

Nobody now objects to women wearing men's clothes, just to prove that Germany can't man this war. Lots of the lassies are now wearing smocks and overalls and do a man's work in helping to make shells, and other jobs to aid the Allies. They glory in being able to do their "bit",—just as they glory in a good bargain. They have been 'in clover' the past week picking plums in the big orchard of bargains let loose by Mr. Fine's "Unloading Sale" on George street, opposite the Custom House. It doesn't seem to make men's clothes any dearer because women are wearing them—as Mr. Fine is offering men's clothing—as well as everything else in his store at a small fraction on the dollar, and smashing a big hole in prices, something like a submarine.

Doormats can be prevented from fraying and made to last much longer by buttonhole stitching all around the edges with a large packing needle and some medium sized string. The stitches should be about one inch apart and one inch deep.

SUNDAY DEFIES BOSTON.

City of Culture Enjoys Evangelist's Slangy Sermons.

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Billy Sunday carried Boston by storm Sunday in his first three sermons. More than 50,000 persons heard him in his tabernacle.

"I must not use slang in cultured Boston," said the revivalist in the morning sermon. Then he went on to paint in as vivid slang as was ever heard from a Boston pulpit or stage just what he would do with the man who divorced his wife for any reason except unfaithfulness. He said that the slang of yesterday was in to-day's dictionary. He mentioned "nothing doing," 'twenty-three for you," and "you lobster" with abandon, and cultured high-brow Boston seemed to enjoy it.

In his evening sermon Sunday brought the recent Presidential candidates to account for their silence regarding the liquor traffic.

"Last year," he said, "we spent two billion two hundred millions for liquor. The grain that was used for this liquor, if made into loaves, would have paved a street 1,800 miles long, 200 feet wide, with each loaf, weighing a pound. There was enough of it to feed Belgium, Serbia, Roumania and all other starving countries.

"Not one word was in Mr. Wilson's letters or in those of Mr. Hughes against the most damnable, vile, corrupt, cesspool, sewerage business that ever wiggled its corpse out of the pit of hell.

"I serve notice on the Democrats and Republicans that the anti-saloon element of Americans holds the balance of power, and that we're going to see who goes to Washington four years hence."

Her Own Idea.—A certain little boy was discovered by her mother engaged in a spirited encounter with a small friend who had got considerably worsted in the engagement. "Don't you know, dear," said the mother, "that it is very wicked to behave so? It was Satan that put into your head to pull Elsie's hair." "Well, perhaps it was," the child admitted, "but kicking her shins was entirely my own idea."

Effects Must Be Forwarded To Ottawa

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—It has been ordered that the personal effects of deceased soldiers are in future to be forwarded immediately to Major Ralph, officer in charge, Estate of Headquarters, Ottawa, and not sent to next of kin of the deceased.

Questioned as to the signaficance of the order, Major Ralph stated that it is necessary so that the legal question of heir and assignes may be properly considered. In several cases, he declares, paymasters have handed our personal effects to claimants who were not legally entitled to them.

Last Day For Shipping Parcels

Yesterday, the closing day for shipping parcels to our boys at the front, saw the Post Office thonged from early morning till late at night. Scores of people anxious that our boys should not be forgotten, some bringing as many as nineteen parcels, waited at the wicket for their chance for stamps and customs declarations. The actual number of parcels shipped cannot be estimated, but over 50 bags, each containing from 15 to 20 parcels, were sent. The receipts at the stamp office were $400 for stamps, for Wednesday alone; for Tuesday, $400, and for Monday $360. The train carrying mail would not hold all the mail which was posted yesterday.

Returned Soldiers' Meeting on Monday

A meeting of the Returned Soldiers' Club will be held in the Armouries on Monday night next at which it is expected that the membership will be further increased, and that all the local men who have returned from the front will be present. Mr.. F. H. Dobbin has been asked to give an address and will probably speak on a subject that the members will find helpful and informative. Whist and a short programme will complete the evening's entertainment.

It is understood that the Club has visions of securing quarters some time in the future when its finances have grown to a working sum.

Fascinating Fur Setts

EMPLOYERS ORGANIZE TO FIGHT LABOUR

National Industrial Conference Board Just Formed Represents a Capital of Eight Billion Dollars

WATCH LEGISLATION

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—Prospects of the greatest industrial struggle in history were increasing to-day.

The capital and labour situation arising from railroads' determination to fight the Adamson eight hour law was accentuated by the formation of a vast organization of employers to be known as the National Industrial Conference Board. The new body, representing eight billion capital and employing 7,000,000 persons, proposes that industrial legislation shall be watched more closely, that legislators shall be guided by public information, and that favouritism to labour shall be eliminated. It will fight such measures as the Adamson eight hour law; it believes that the election showed there is no labour vote and hence the legislators hereafter need not carry favour with labour leaders as they claim has been done in the past.

The Folly of Taking Digestive Pills

A Warning to Dyspeptics.

The habit of taking digestive pills after meals makes chronic dyspeptics of many thousands of men and women because artificial digestants, drugs and medicines have practically no influence upon the excessive acid condition of the stomach contents which is the cause of most forms of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The after dinner pill merely lessens the sensitiveness of the stomach nerves and thus gives a false sense of freedom from pain. If those who are subject to indigestion, gas, flatulence, belching, bloating, heartburn, etc. after eating would get about one ounce of pure bisurated magnesia from their druggist and take a teaspoonful in a little water after meals, there would be no further necessity for drugs or medicines because bisurated magnesia instantly neutralizes stomach acidity, stops food fermentation and thus insures normal, painless digestion by enabling the stomach to do its work without hindrance.

Y.M.C.A. members get a line on the fellows who should enroll in the Association during Contest Week, Nov. 20-30.

SUCCESS FOR THE RUSSIAN FORCES IN TRANSYLVANIA

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, November 14.—Russian forces advanced in Transylvania, capturing the fortified heights southeastward of Toldveah, according to an official statement to-day.

The forward movement came after the failure of an enemy offensive violently manifested in rifle and machine gun fire, and was the result of a stubborn battle. The Russians captured 180 prisoners and three machine guns.

In Dobrudja the Russian advance continued to progress southwards, the enemy retreating and setting fire to the villages.

Mail Ship Arabic Described As A Battle Transport

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 14.—A formal Admiralty statement to-day called attention to a Berlin official announcement regarding the sinking in the Mediterranean on November 4th "of a battle transport of 1,200 tons," as indicating beyond doubt that the mail ship Arabia was sunk without warning.

The Admiralty characterized this Berlin statement "As an obvious attempt to explain a way out of an outrageous inhuman act." The description, it was said, could only refer to the Arabia.

"Battleline Was Suddenly Framed In Khaki And Hand Grenades"

Examiner Special:

LONDON, November 14.—Latest accounts of the British success on the Ancre from special correspondents agree that it was the most complete and least costly victory General Sir Douglas Haig's troops have won since the battle of the Somme. Accounting for it, Percival Phillips, of the Daily Express, says: "Ludendorff's new division hardly knew the direction of the battle front until it was suddenly framed in khaki and hand grenades."

H. Perry Robinson of the Daily News, wires: "Tanks were used with good result at two points in the line. At one point north of the Ancre, a tank was of material service, helping to clear a German trench, and at another point south of the Ancre one went forward and got ahead of the infantry into a position which was very strongly held by the Germans, who wormed around and tried to blow it up with bombs. It stood them off until infantry came up to effect a big capture of prisoners."

LONDON, November 14.—King George has telegraphed General Haig congratulating him on the great success his troops have achieved during the past three days at the Ancre. His Majesty concludes with a declaration that "this further capture of the enemy's first line trenches redounds to the credit of all ranks."

To his Sovereign's congratulations, the British Commander-in-Chief replied with thanks expressed in words of Spartan-like brevity.

LEADERS ANNOUNCED FOR THE Y. M. C. A. MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Canvass Will Open on Monday Night—Business Men, Seniors, Intermediates and Boys Will All Compete, 150 Men and Boys Being Engaged in the Effort.

Plans for the Y.M.C.A. membership canvass which opens next Monday night, are now complete. There will be a contest between four divisions, namely, Business Men, Seniors, Intermediates and Boys. Captains and lieutenants of teams in each division are as follows:

Business Men's Teams—Team No. 1—Captain, Ross Dobbin; Lieutenant, Charles Parsons. Team No. 2—Captain, Edgar Walton. Lieutenant, J. E. Smith.

Senior Teams—Team No. 3—Captain, Bruce Hamilton; Lieutenant, William Greaves.

Intermediate Teams—Team No. 4—Captain, H. Taylor; Lieutenant, H. Adams.

Intermediate Teams—Team No. 5—Captain Reg. Brown; Lieutenant, James Pogue; Team No. 6—Captain, Harold Copp; Lieutenant, Stewart Henry.

Boys' Teams—Team No. 7—Captain, Will Mowat; Lieutenant, Stanley Anderson; Team No. 8—Captain, Herman Whitcroft, Lieutenant, George Richardson.

A preliminary meeting of the team leaders was held last evening at which the teams were completed. About one hundred and fifty men and boys will engage in the effort. On Friday evening at 8 o'clock there will be a meeting of the mothers, wives and sisters of the men and boys who are to have a part in the membership canvass, the purpose of this meeting being to arrange for three suppers to be held in connection with the effort. The campaign will open with a supper on Monday evening, November 20th at 6.30 o'clock and it is expected that a speaker from Toronto will give an account of the great effort recently held there when about five thousand members were secured.

Y.M.C.A. activities have opened on a larger scale this year than usual and a great effort will now will be made to increase the membership of the Association and as far as possible bring the benefits of this organization to every man and boy in Peterborough.

The following names have been added to the Y.M.C.A. honour roll, having been inadvertently omitted from the recently published list: Lieutenant J. A. Harstone, Lieutenant H. P. Smith, Fred Preston and Leslie Waters.

James Pogue and Charles Armstrong will give a report of the recent Toronto Boys' Conference at the High School Club supper Friday evening at 6.30 o'clock.

The meeting on Sunday at 4.15 p.m. will be for men and older boys. Interesting reports from the Toronto Conference will be given at this meeting. Every boy or worker among boys should attend this meeting.

MOTHER'S REMEDY FOR BRUISES

Children's Bumps, Sprains and Minor Hurts Quickly Relieved by Sloan's Liniment

It is the very nature of children to hurt themselves—to come crying to mother with little fingers bruised, with heads bumped, with sprained ankles and wrists.

They are painful hurts, too. But their pain and sting can't survive the gentle use of this liniment. A single application of Sloan's Liniment and the little fellow's bravely kept back tears give way to smiles. His hurt is relieved.

In every home where there are children a bottle of Sloan's Liniment is a necessity.

Aching muscles, rheumatism, lumbago, stiff neck, backache, chilblains, etc., can be effectively relieved with Sloan's Liniment. Cleaner than mussy ointments or plasters.

Sloan's Liniment can be obtained at all drug stores, 25c, 50c, and $1.00.

Ninety Cars Standing in Toronto Freight Yards to Be Loaded An Investigation

The Toronto World says:

Probability of an investigation by provincial government authorities and the likelihood of an embargo being placed on railway companies against carload consignments, were the developments yesterday in the situation involving the cars loaded with potatoes which are stationary in Toronto railway yards waiting to be unloaded.

There were 20 additional cars, making a total of 110 in the G.T.R. city terminals yesterday. The total number placed yesterday was 35, and the number unloaded 5. Three cars were reconsigned and 20 carloads are standing out waiting orders.

Refuting the theory that local potato dealers were responsible, charges were made yesterday that Toronto was the victim of a ring of speculators from eastern provinces. Some railway officials declared that the potato commissioners here were unloading their cars as fast as possible.

RAILWAY THREATENS EM BARGO.

Thomas Marshall, transportation director of the Board of trade, was notified by the G.T.R. Co., that if the congestion of the cars in the company's yards was not relieved, an embargo would be instituted. An official of the company denied that the G.T.R. was in any way to blame for the holding up of the cars.

David Spence, a potato dealer, declared that the dealers were innocent of any charges made against them, and said that speculators seeking to profit through an advance in price, were the responsible persons.

Acting under instructions from Mayor Church, a detective is making an investigation, keeping an account of the number of cars standing in the yards and sidings. The mayor, after a conference with the medical officer of health, and the commissioner of works, declared that Crown Attorney Corley would be asked by him to institute proceedings. He said the city was not empowered to take legal action, but that all evidence which came to him through investigations would be turned over to the crown.

EPWORTH LEAGUE RALLY IN MILLBROOK

MILLBROOK, Nov. 16.—The Methodist church Epworth League held their league rally on Monday evening. A large number of members and visitors were present. The programme consisted of choruses, solos, speeches etc., and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. During the session a letter of greeting from Miss Hawken of Toronto, to the Millbrook League was read by Miss Stella Hotherington. It was moved and unanimously carried that a copy of this letter and a box of candy be sent to the League members at the front.

How Any Woman Can Remove Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture.)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to visit a beauty specialist to have superfluous hairs removed, for, with the aid of a plain delatone paste she can, in the privacy of her own home, remove even a stubborn growth in a very few minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes removed and the skin washed, when it will be left clear and hairless. Be sure you buy real delatone.

The speculative following of a well-known financial organization is reported to be out of stocks and lending its efforts towards bringing about a decline in the general list. Its influence is powerful and its leaders are reported as sellers of the industrial list during all rallies in prices.

Considerable pool liquidation is reported from specialists quarters. It is noted in Steel, Crucible, Am. Loco., Union Pacific and Anaconda. Some of it is traced to pressure from banking interests, which are said to be preparing for end of year disbursements already.

Commission houses as a rule are pinning their bull faith and advice to buy to the copper list, which is reflecting more outside interest at the moment than any other group. The suggestions to buy these stocks on decline, especially the low priced list, come from many leading houses of high standing. Pool activities are more manifest on the long side in this group than elsewhere.

HALIBURTON CLERK PASSES AT MINDEN

Mr. J. H. Delamere Was Also Police Magistrate of the County

MINDEN, Nov. 16.—Mr. J. H. Delamere, Police Magistrate and County Clerk of Haliburton, died here yesterday after a long illness. He came here from Toronto thirty-seven years ago, and had held the position of County Clerk for that time. His position of Police Magistrate dates back some four years ago. He was a familiar figure at the Anglican Synod of Toronto, to which he was a lay delegate. Mr. Delamere was a Past Grand Master of the Provincial Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario. He was also prominent in the Royal Black Knights of Ireland. Lieut.-Col. J. M. Delamere, Toronto, is a brother. The widow and two daughters survive. The family residence is Cliff Cottage.

GROVE SCHOOL BOYS VISIT CITY

This morning some sixteen of the boys of the Grove School, Lakefield, came into the city to see how shells were made in the Canadian General Electric. THE WORLD OF SPORT

Indian Thorpe Greatest Star Of Gridiron Game

Eddie Mahan Says Redskin Was Most Wonderful Player of Them All.

"I have often smiled in silence when football enthusiasts grew warm debating who was the greatest player of them all," said Eddie Mahan of Harvard recently. "That possibly is the one point in the realm of football that coaches never discuss. They know. Name, Jim Thorpe, Indian." As if to impart emphasis to the answer the white enamel ball they utilize on California field for practice after sundown went hurtling from the Harvard man's good right hand through the gathering gloom in a mighty forward pass.

"The big chief stands alone in a class by himself, and will for a long time, I expect. No country is opulent in Thorpes.

"Probably the most extraordinary game ever played was Thorpe versus Harvard. One man beat eleven. One often sees that superlative statement in print regarding some player's performance, but on this occasion it is not football fiction. Thorpe kicked four goals from varying distances and at divers angles. He made most of the crucial tackles, and repeatedly smashed through the line like a battering ram.

"Perhaps his run against Pennsylvania was the most thrilling incident in the great Indian's career on the gridiron. It was at least eighty yards; every man on the Penn eleven had his hands on him. Yet Thorpe got by, giving the straight arm or shaking them off with a shrug of his muscles as some mighty lion would jackals. He went over the line in solitary grandeur upright, a veritable conqueror of a stricken football field.

"If they ever fashion football friezes of the heroes of the game for some great athletic stadium, the grim, not unnoble, features of Jim Thorpe, aboriginal American, will be the first carved."

Danny Maher Dead In England

LONDON, Nov. —Danny Maher, one of the most famous of American jockeys, died in a private hospital here yesterday of pulmonary pthisis.

Maher, although American-born, became a naturalised British subject in 1913 and bought a country estate near Nottingham, where he was breeding cattle and horses. His illness caused his retirement from the turf three years ago. Maher had the greatest record of any jockey on the English or American turf of recent years. He was a star performer on English race courses for nine years prior to his retirement. In this time he rode to victory in three Derbys, his mounts being Rock Sand, Cicero, and Spearmint. He also captured the Oaks in 1906 with Keystone II., the Doncaster St. Leger in 1903, with Rock Sand, and the same classic race in 1909 with Bagardo. He was reputed to be worth a large fortune as the result of his turf victories.

Own Story of Racing Career.

In 1909 he related the following story of his racing career in a breezy style in the columns of Fry's Magazine, published in England.

"My first ride in an actual race was in 1894 on Fagot, a horse belonging to my uncle. Most people on the course were, I believe, under the impression that I had just got there, but a man in the box—and, after all, he is in 999 cases out of a 1000, the best judge—placed me second, and in any case the race was a most exciting one, heads only separating the first three. However, it was not long before I 'broke my duck,' my first winning mount being on Phoebus at Providence, R.I.

"My first really satisfactory year as a jockey was in 1896, and at Brighton Beach I had an extraordinary good meeting, riding no fewer than sixty winners in thirty days. On one day, by the way, I was first past the stick in five races and finished second in the last event on the card.

"The American style of riding had been pretty generally adopted here when I got over, and races were run from end to end just as they were in America, although I have often heard since that this style of riding was quite a novelty, and for years and years the waiting behind and coming with a sharp burst at the finish method of racing was all the rage. There is, however, I think, little doubt that results work out much truer by coming right through with a horse than in the old-fashioned style.

"My First Mount."

"It is not altogether easy—in fact, it is uncommonly difficult — to draw a direct line between English and American form of horses, but I think all the same that, generally speaking the class of the English thoroughbred is better, while mares like Sceptre and Pretty Polly, and extra good horses like Ard Patrick, Spearmint, St. Frusquin, and Persimmon, would be anything from fourteen to twenty-one pounds in front of any American horse.

"My first mount in the Derby was on Mr. Lorillard's Tantalus the next on the late Duke of Devonshire's Cheero and in the following year, 1903, I won the Blue Riband of the turf for the first time on Sir James Miller's Rock Sand.

"Of that ride I shall always entertain most pleasant memories, for Rock Sand never caused me an uneasy moment, and indeed before we had gone half a mile I felt that I had the race won, and at no time had I to call on the son of Sainfoin for a serious effort. In the St. Leger, too, Rock Sand gave me another armchair ride, and at the finish cantered past the post the easiest of winners, so that, although racing experts declare that the three-year-olds of 1903 were a moderate lot, I do not consider that the Derby winner can be fairly classed in this category, as he was a long way in front of all his rivals at the same age. But there is a lot of luck about racing and Rock Sand undoubtedly was unlucky to run up against two such horses as Ard Patrick and Sceptre, which finished in front of him in the Eclipse Stakes.

"A curious trait in Rock Sand's disposition was his strong objection to the use of the whip, but the little horse was so game and always did his best that really I never had serious cause to resort to the flail, though in the Jockey Club Stakes, won by Sceptre, when that brilliant mare shot out I gave him one, but his effort was of no avail and, after all, failure to tackle such a mare successfully was no disgrace. No, Rock Sand was a real game little horse, and he could boast of one quality of inestimable value in a thoroughbred —he never shirked his work.

"Since that initial success in the greatest prize the turf has to offer it has been my good fortune to have been successful twice more—in 1906 on Lord Rosebery's Cicero, a son of Cyllene, and in the following year on Spearmint, a son of Carbine, and a stable companion of Pretty Polly. I have rarely, if ever, thrown a leg across a better or gamer horse than Spearmint, whose sire, Carbine, too, must have been a rare good plucked 'un.

"Among the many good horses I have been fortunate enough to steer past the post first, Bachelor's Button comes near the top, and, to my mind, S. B. Joel's horse was bang up in the first class, though in fairness to Major Eustace Loder's smashing mare, Pretty Polly, it must be said that the latter was not quite herself when beaten by Bachelor Button in the Gold Cup."

RUGBY.

Bert Sronach and Jock ("Rufus") Ryan, two of the greatest outside wings the Canadian Rugby game ever boasted of, are reported on the casualty list, although both will recover. They are not at all unaccustomed to getting their bumps, as every footballer knows. However, the brave lads probably know by now what it means to get hit and not have a chance to retaliate.—Hamilton Times.

CARRIER PIGEONS ARE WELL NIGH INVALUABLE.

Scattered along the German lines in France, but several miles to the rear, are a succession of "carrier pigeon stations" which form an effective link in the German scheme of defense and in times of extreme stress can become well nigh invaluable. Especially is this the case when all other means of communication from the front trenches with the rear are destroyed.

In the trenches are kept cages of trained birds. The birds are kept constantly in practice so that in times of emergency they will go without fail to some station to give word of disaster that might have been telephoned had not the telephone connection been shot away or otherwise destroyed.

The messages are written on tiny pieces of paper, enclosed in thimble-like aluminium containers which are attached to a leg of the bird, and the fliers are released. If longer messages must be written, or maps have to be transmitted, these are enclosed in a larger container which is attached to a sort of harness that can be put over the bird's head and fitted tight to its body.

Stoles are widening into shawls, and some have slits for arms, finished with boxplaited ribbon.

Man proposes—but not until woman has got him so tangled up and blindfolded that he can't see any other way out.

Premier Hughes Talks Of Vote On Conscription

Gross Misrepresentation Prevented Victory of Conscription in Australia

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Nov. 14.—Premier Hughes, referring for the first time to the referendum result said the Government bowed to the decision of the people. He said he was certain that the wish of the majority was that Australia should do her duty, but because of those who aimed at dishonouring and wrecking her would not be allowed to carry out their purpose.

There was now a majority against the Government proposals of less than 60,000 less than 3 per cent. In three states the majority of electors were in favour of the Government's proposals. Citizens of the Commonwealth, then, looked at as a whole, were divided into two camps, almost equal in size; while taking States as units, there were three on either side.

"The result of the referendum," he said, "settles one point and one only—that we may not have recourse to compulsion in order to provide reinforcements for Overseas services (the?te,cK wa ?—d JPcAa oif won way effect existing powers under the Defence Act.

"The people misled by gross misrepresentation, have declined to entrust the Government with the powers asked for. The decision of the people will profoundly affect the future, not only this young Commonwealth, but democratic Government generally. This refusal on that part of a free people to make a sacrifice to defend their freedom will be used as a proof of the unwisdom of submitting great national issues directly to the people.

"While we regret the decision, considering the odds against us we have no need to be discouraged. We must remember this is the first time in history that the whole of the people have ever been asked to make the many and great sacrifices which war entails.

When we recall the fact that practically one-half of the electors were prepared to make them, and that a considerable majority would surely have done so if they had not been deliberately deceived by false statements, we have no reason to say Australia as a nation has proved herself unworthy.

"There are few, if any, nations which would have come through such an ordeal with greater credit. We shall endeavor, despite the limitations imposed by the people's verdict, to enable Australia to play her part creditably on the field of battle."

BRITISH SENTIMENT FOR A HIGH TARIFF

U. S. Attache at London Says Americans May Be Forced to Build Plants in England

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—American manufacturers may be under the necessity of starting plants in England if they desire to retain their position in English markets after the war. This possibility was expressed yesterday by Pierce C. Williams, United States Commercial Attache at London, who is in this country on a leave of absence. Mr. Williams spent yesterday at New York offices of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, where he conferred with business men interested in trade with Great Britain.

"All indications point to the fact that a protective tariff will be in effect in the United Kingdom after the war," said Mr. Williams yesterday. "Sentiment in favour of a high tariff is growing all the time in England and has the backing of influential interests. One of the elements in the situation is the spirit, largely augmented by the war, to weld the British Empire into a stronger unit than heretofore.

"British labor seems rather favorably impressed with the idea of a tariff wall, the argument being that such a measure would lessen competition and very likely tend to maintain higher wages. In this connection many believe that thousands of women now engaged in work formerly performed by men will keep their places after peace returns. This would probably have the effect of keeping wages down. Accordingly, many workers favor a high tariff system, partly to help maintain wages and partly in the hope that competition in manufactured articles produced by other countries would be reduced. Still others argue that a protective tariff would bring in a revenue of imports, thereby reducing somewhat other forms of taxation.

"Should a high tariff be enacted in England, its probable effect would be to curtail the sale of American manufactured articles in that country. It would even seem that in certain lines American manufacturers might find it desirable to establish plants in England in order the better to meet British and foreign competition there. An alternative, of course, might be to build American plants in Canada, or enlarge existing ones there in order to get into the English market of favorable terms."

The Commercial Attache said that after the war England might enforce strictly the Patent Act, which would require foreign manufacturers of patented articles to manufacture such goods in England. He said that owing to the economies put into effect by the British Government in its reputation of trade, experts from the United States at this time were almost exclusively limited to war munitions and supplies needed in connection with the prosecution of the war.

"When the war ends," said Mr. Williams, "there is going to be a stiff three-cornered fight in South American for the trade of that continent, the participants being Great Britain, Germany, and the United States. The South American market is regarded in England as very desirable."

The Attache added that the determination of the British people to see the war through to a victorious finish was undiminished.

With each cow's record before him the dairy man is able to feed more intelligently. Meal in proportion to the milk is a good motto.

ABSENCE OF RATEPAYERS FROM HOMES AT NIGHT THE ONLY DIFFICULTY THE PATRIOTIC FUND PETITIONERS MEET

The progress of the Patriotic Fund petition bearers has been retarded by munition and other overtime work in the factories. Business men, for the most part, they naturally expected to find the ratepayers home o'nights, but their experience, in many cases, has been to find that father was adding a little overtime money to his pay roll. With this exception the petition lists are being largely signed and, to facilitate the work among mechanics and labourers it might be advisable to present the petitions in the factories or at the gates, if the manufacturers would permit it.

In the past some persons have attempted to excuse their deliberate refusals to contribute to patriotic funds of one kind or another, by asserting that the collectors themselves didn't give anything. This patent evasion deluded no one, not even the persons, themselves, apart altogether from the falsity of the statement, but on the present occasion no one will dare to utter a similar falsehood for the reason that this proposed collection by the tax method will reach every property holder and tenants, too.

One of the recent ex-Mayors of the city and an extensive builder, readily signed this petition recently.

The original plans of the Committee have been somewhat disturbed by the absence of taxpayers at night from their homes, but it is expected that with the end of the week the lists will be sufficiently complete to present to the Council.

CRIME DOGGED HIM 32 YEARS.

Stony Point, November 14.—Wm Reilly, who was released from Sing Sing recently, was ordered out of Highland Falls, near here, by the police when he came to the village today. An old resident recognized him as one of two burglars arrested in 1884, and sentenced for robbing the Highland Falls Post Office.

When Reilly was questioned by a New York Central Railway detective he explained that he had not been in the village since arrested and that curiosity prompted him to return and "look the place over." "That post office was my first temptation," he said.

Hockey Players Are In Khaki

Special to The Examiner:

KINGSTON, Nov. 16.—It looks as if Kingstone will not have much hockey this year, outside of Queen's University, which will enter a senior team in the O.H.A. The majority of city hockey players are now in khaki, many of them overseas, and the rest in training. Last night a meeting of Frontenac Hockey Club was called, but Secretary Stanley Trotter and four executive members alone put in appearance. This was the first time in the history of the club that the annual meeting has not brought out a record attendance, and it is all due to the war.

PRESENTING DEFENCE IN THE LOCKIE CASE

Mr. George Lockie's action against the municipality of North Monaghan for $1,000 damages and possession of a strip of land now used as a road, advanced to the defence this afternoon. Mr. Jas. Lattimer testified that the road was an advantage to the persons living on the 7th concession. It saved Mr. Lattimer three miles on the road to Peterborough and three miles back. It was also desirable for those who wished to reach the new wharf. With out this road the farmers on the 7th would have to drive west to the Gravel Road and come to Peterborough by that route. He related the early history of the road and its difficulties for traffic and stated that finally about three years ago the North Monaghan Council did some work on it.

18 DRUNKS SINCE SEPT. 16 AS COMPARED WITH 69 FOR SAME PERIOD LAST YEAR---FINES HEAVY

Chief Thompson's records of police court convictions reveal the immediate effects of the Ontario Temperance Act. During the two months since it went into operation there have been sixty-nine convictions under varied charges, and of these eighteen were "drunk-". During the corresponding two months, in 1915, there were 139 convictions, with 69 of them "drunks." It is significant that the total number of convictions of all kinds during the past two months was identical with the number of drunks (69), during the same months a year ago.

Fines Much Larger.

While the "business" of the Police Department shows a decline during the two months, the financial returns have been inversely proportionate.

Considering as "last year" the two months under discussion the police rolled up 139 convictions for $396 in fines, and $69.65. This year, under two months of the Temperance Act the fines have aggregated $1,171 and costs of $98.48. Of this latter fine money, $500 goes to the Government. This was the money paid by two south George Street storekeepers for having liquor on their business premises. But deducting that there remains nearly $675 in fines and close to $100 in costs and only 69 convictions. In other words, the cost of breaking the law is well up in the van of the high cost of living. These figures were obtained this afternoon from a compilation made by Sergt. Reid.

Convictions in 1915.

From Sept. 16th to Oct. 16th, 64, of which 33 were on drunk and disorderly charges. Fines, $187, and $41.35 costs.

From October 16th to Nov. 16th, 75, of which 36 were drunks. Fines, $209, and $26.30 costs.

Thus there were 139 convictions during those two months, with a total number of 69 drunks.

Convictions in 1916.

From September 16th to October 16th, 30, of which 11 were drunks, and two were convictions of keeping liquor in places of business. Fines, $933, costs $36.86.

October 16th to Nov. 16th (today) 30, of which 7 were drunks. Fines, $238, costs $61.63.

Hence, since the Temperance Act went into force there have been 18 "drunk in public place" convictions out of a total of 69 convictions, on varied charges, as compared with 69 drunks, out of 139 cases during the corresponding two months under the Liquor License Act

MILK VENDORS REPORT THEFTS OF MONEY PLACED OUT WITH BOTTLES

Petty thieving by boys of money placed out with milk bottles has been altogether too frequent of late, according to one milk vender, who reported this morning that he had already discovered three of such thefts this week. These instances created more or less trouble between the vendors and their customers. The latter put the money out with the bottles and naturally expect that the vendor will collect it. Not long ago a case was reported of a boy who was caught in the act of stealing eight cents from a verandah in the south end. The lady of the house gave chase and attracted the attention of other boys who rounded up the culprit in the cellar of the storage building of the Lundy Shovel factory. And this boy, who had come all the way from Ashburnham, had considerably more than the eight cents in his pockets. Several milk vendors have mentioned this matter and are anxious to make an example of some of the offenders.

WEDDING BELLS

O'BRIEN—HEFFERNAN.

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place Tuesday morning, Nov. 14, at St. Joseph's Church, Dacro, when Miss Irene Heffernan, daughter of Robert Heffernan, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Francis O'Brien, son of Michael O'Brien, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Father McGuire, in the presence of many friends of the bride and groom. The bride, who looked very pretty in her tailored suit of navy blue, with hat to match, was assisted by her sister, Bridgie, as bridesmaid, while the groom was supported by John McDonnel.

After the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served, only the immediate friends of the bride and groom being present. They received many beautiful and costly presents, including a cheque for one hundred dollars from the bride's father.

In the evening Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left for their new home in Otonabee, amidst the best wishes of a large circle of friends for a long and happy married life.

HALL—COX.

The Sherbourne Street Methodist Church, decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums, was the scene of a quiet wedding at 2 o'clock this afternoon, when the marriage was solemnized by the Pastor, the Rev. Dr. Brown, of Miss Lilian Cox, daughter of Mrs. Aaron A. Cox, and Harry Hall, B.A., Sc., son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hall, of Peterborough.

Mr. F. W. Cox brought his sister in and gave her away. She was wearing a travelling suit of chartreuse yellow velour, with brown hat, and Kilinsky stole and muff, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and sweetheart roses. Miss Emma Cox was her sister's bridesmaid, in a French model suit of pale blue broadcloth, with hat of gold lace and bouquet of pink roses.

Lieut. W. Hall, A.S.C., was best man.

Mrs. Cox held a reception after the ceremony at her home in Nanton Avenue, when she was wearing black and silver, with bouquet of violets and sweetheart roses.

Those present from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Hall of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Lundy of Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Johns and children of Cleveland, Miss Cavanah of Peterborough, Mrs. Pierce of Calgary.

After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hall will live in Oakwoods Avenue.—Toronto Star.

OBITUARY

MRS. WM. ZIMMERMAN

Lottie, beloved wife of Mr. William Zimmerman passed away at her home, Smithville, on Wednesday, November 14, 1916. Besides her husband, two children survive her, Mrs. J. A. Schnick of Peterborough and one son at home.

ISABELLE ARMOUR.

News of the death in New York city of Isabelle, daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Armour of Peterborough came as a shock to Mrs. Wm. Lyons, 310 Park Street, a sister of the deceased. Miss Armour, who had been visiting in Peterborough and Lindsay, returned to New York city only two weeks ago. She had been suffering for some time, but had shown such marked signs of improvement that her total recovery was hoped for. However, on Saturday, she had a relapse, and died yesterday at the home of Mr. Robert Hart, New York. She leaves to mourn her loss four brothers, Mr. George Armour, of Rubidge Street, Andrew of Utica, Alexander of New York, and William, residing in the United States.

The funeral will be held in New York.

CANADIAN RED CROSS GETTING FINE RECEPTION

The Canvassers Report Excellent Results For This Worthy Fund

The Committee in charge of the Canadian Red Cross Fund met last night and reported that the reception they were receiving was very hearty in almost every quarter.

The DeLaval employees have handed in a magnificent contribution of $500.00.

The Metal Products of close to $200, the Peterborough Lock Company, the Matthews-Blackwell employees and others that will be mentioned later are also making fine subscriptions.

The canvass, it is expected, will be complete this week, and if there are any cards out, the committee would deem it a favour if they were mailed in or telephone to Mr. G. H. Thompson, and they will be called for.

"PASQUALE"

At The Empire

Pasquale, a genial, honest grocer, is working hard to pay for his small business. For then he will ask Margarita to be his wife. Margarita, the orphan that he has raised, has eyes only for Charlie Larkins, a cheap small-town sport.

Martinelli the Italian banker, is one of Pasquale's best customers. Martinelli's beautiful wife, feeling neglected, allows Bob. Fulton, a young man-about-town to become quite infatuated with her.

Pasquale is too bashful to propose to Margarita and confides this to "Colombo," his faithful horse. The result is that on Margarita's birthday, Pasquale places his quaintly written proposal beneath her upturned dish.

A trifling incident changes the whole course of events and prevents her from finding the note until long afterwards. By then Pasquale is fighting desperately on the Austrian-Italian battlefield. Both Pasquale and Martinelli, who is also a reservist, are wounded in repulsing an attacking Zeppelin and return home.

There, most unexpected conditions await them and in a terrible automobile smash-up that brings events to a startling climax their future destinies are curiously interwoven.

This picture is at the Empire for the new three days. We believe you will be delighted with it if you see it.

Serbs and French Advance North of Monastir

Large Force of Turkish Troops Were Defeated by Russians

ALL THE CIVILIANS OF FRANCE MAY BE MOBILIZED DIRECTOR-GENERAL APPOINTED

Mass Mobilization of Civilians is Being Seriously Considered as a Counter Measure to that of Germany—Private Automobile is Considered as a Luxury—Appeal Made to All of the Forces Capable of Assisting in the Cause.

A CHECK ON SUPPLIES

PARIS, Nov. 23.—A mass mobilization of civilians is being seriously considered as a countermeasure to that of Germany, according to the Temps.

"A simultaneous effort on the part of the Allies must be the answer to Germany," the Temps says. "Germany must be beaten; there is no other question. The duty of each of us at this tragic hour, when the fate of the country and civilization is being decided, is to work entirety and without reserve for the national defence and the cause of liberty.

"No one has the right at this time to avoid responsibility or to dodge duty. It is the time to apply the decree of the national convention. 'Until the day the enemy is driven from the territory, all the French are in permanent requisition for the service of the armies.' France, in peril, has need more than ever to put into service all its moral and mental intelligence if the final decision is hastened.

"The appeal must be made, as at the time of the French Revolution, to all of the energies capable of contributing to the liberating. The entire nation must raise itself to the level of our admirable army and people of the interior must be worthy of the people of the trenches.'"

Reaching a Crisis.

The Journal des Debats says: "The war is reaching a crisis; and to win, a rapid increase in production, without hindering everyday life, is necessary. At the moment when the Germans are making their most dangerous effort, the French feel more than at any other time the need of being governed, to be set right and guided, and as needed constrained to order and work."

The appointment of a Director General of Transports and Importations for the whole of France has been officially announced. His powers will cover everything connected with traffic, whether by rail, river, or sea. In addition he will be in charge of all transport arrangements and decide as to their priority, both as regards exports and imports, and regulate the arrivals and departures of all vessels used in the public service in the military zone. He will act under the authority of the Commander in Chief, or the Minister of War.

The first holder of the office will be M. Calvelle, State Railway Director, who at present is Under Secretary for Munitions.

War Time Luxury.

The private automobile is a luxury which can be dispensed with in war time, in the opinion of the Economics Commission. Considering that in the present circumstances all of the resources of the country must be devoted exclusively to the national defence, the commission in a report made public to-day urges the Government to suppress, without delay, or reduce the number of all automobiles not strictly utilized in the public service or destined for industrial or commercial uses. The report also recommends that the military authorities use the railroads if possible instead of automobiles, and that a careful check be kept on the use of oil and gasoline.

NO DOUBT ABOUT THE CHARACTER OF THE BRITTANIC

Vessel Carried the Usual Hospital Emblems—Another Example of German "Frightfulness"

LARGEST SHIP AFLOAT

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 23.—With the new details of the sinking of the hospital ship Brittanic received, making it appear certain that the greatest ship afloat was a victim of a Teuton submarine, press and public alike to-day are united in bitter condemnation of what was termed another example of German "frightfulness." It was pointed out here to-day that there could be no mistaking the character of the Brittanic. No submarine commander could have failed to identify the ship, not only from the fact that she carried the usual hospital emblems, but because she was the biggest ship of her kind in the world, that the vessel was, therefore, a victim of deliberate attack, was the verdict here.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—It is rumoured here that United States doctors and nurses were aboard the Brittanic when it was sunk by a German submarine.

ATHENS, Nov. 23.—It is stated here that two submarines took part in the sinking of the Brittanic.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

RETAIL CHEESE, 30c.

When cheese touched 26 1-16c on Saturday's sale at Belleville it was natural to expect a retail advance and this week the local grocers raised their prices to 30c a pound. It was not a general action although it was warranted by the market conditions. Hence some of the grocers may still be selling at 25c but it is only among such grocers that the old price remains. Export demand continues firm with the British government the heaviest buyer. The new Zealand cheese arriving in England in December should relieve the market somewhat.

BUTTER CONTINUES FIRM.

Butter prices are firm even under the pressure of home churned receipts. Last Saturday the general price was 45c a pound and a few cents lower toward the end.

This condition may continue for a few weeks but after that butter is bound to soar.

The milk dealers raised the retail price to 9c a quart this week declaring that the farmers are demanding 6c a quart wholesale.

CREAM AT TORONTO.

After having guaranteed at least 44c per pound of butter fat, net to shippers, for churning cream for the first half of the month, the Toronto Creamery paid 45c. Sweet cream was more than 2c advanced over the previous quotation, selling at 47c per lb. of butter fat net to shipper. The supply of both continues to decrease. These prices are records for the butter trade.

EGGS ANY PRICE.

Guaranteed fresh laid eggs are easily worth 50c a dozen. They are worth that to the consumer whose first and only consideration is quality. Some of the wholesale prices are as follows: Toronto, 50c; Montreal, 55c; and New York, 70c.

In the retail trade even Hamilton reports prices of from 60c to 75c.

POTATOES AT TORONTO.

The potato situation continues to cause a lot of talk and raise considerable agitation, but without doing anything particular to the price at which they sell. E. J. Ryan quotes New Brunswick Delawarrs selling at $2.25 a bag in car lots, with some red varieties from Quebec being introduced at $2.10 per bag.

Ontario potatoes are being held at $1.80 to $1.90 in the country, according to the Toronto reports, but not many are available.

LOCAL POTATOES.

The farmers are buying potatoes in many cases or going without and with lucky holders asking $3.40 a bag, those who are mere consumers are drawing the line at luxury prices. Potato dealers have never been subjected to the suspicion of pirating that has been voiced frequently this fall.

CABBAGES A FEATURE.

Cabbage sells at Toronto this week at the record price of $40 per ton or $3.50 per barrel, says the Sun. The expression "a cabbage head," will soon be a compliment when applied to a man, at this rate. Never before have cabbages been worth so much money in the recollection of the trade. At New York cabbage is quoted at $30 to $35 per ton.

APPLES PRICES HIGH.

"You can't get many Snows, and if you could they would bring $7 per barrel for top quality," said Dawson & Elliott at Toronto, this week. The Snows bring anywhere from $3 up to that limit. Other prices are well maintained, with No. 2's selling from 50c to $1 below No. 1's which are quoted as follows: No. 1 Spies up to $6, with Greenings, Baldwins and Russets at $5; and Pewaukees, $4.50; No. 3's sell from $3.50 to $4.

PROFIT IN THE EXPORT TRADE.

A fruit grower was offered $2.50 for some No. 3 Snows this season. He sold them to a commision man at this price but then backed down on the deal and used them to fill out a shipment for export. On this shipment he netted $4.00 per barrel. They were extra good No. 3's and brought the price in England. Another man sent some nice Kings over and only netted a nice little $10 a barrel! These figures are vouched for says the Sun by a man of excellent veracity, but who declined to go further into details.

HOGS, $10.50

The local price of hogs is $10.50. Flour and sugar are both very firm.

Had Severe Cold
PAIN IN CHEST
SPASMODIC COUGHING

Many people when they contract a cold do not pay any attention to it, thinking perhaps it will pass away in a day or two. This is a mistake for before they know it, it has settled on the lungs.

Too much stress cannot be laid on the fact that on the first sign of a cough or cold it must be gotten rid of immediately, otherwise it may cause years of suffering from some serious lung trouble.

Mr. A. George, 30 Blevin's Place, Toronto, Ont., writes: "Having greatly benefitted from your remedy, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I take the liberty to write you a few words about the effect of that wonderful syrup. Two years ago I caught a severe cold followed by a spasmodic cough and pain in my chest. I was treated by many doctors but without any benefit, and also took many proprietory medicines which all failed to cure. One of my friends recommended Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after using three bottles I was completely cured. I recommend it to anyone as a God-send remedy."

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c and 50c.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

Paul's pale cheeks colored for an instant and something deep within him stirred in response to the trumpet-like confidence of the voice which spoke with such assurance of the absurdly impossible. Suddenly he awoke to the innate music of the inspired human tongue, and there was that in the face and the figure of the taller stripling which abashed him, as though he had intruded on a prophet in his moment of exaltation. Ham was listening to voices silent to other ears, and in his eyes glowed such resolve and invincible purpose as must have characterised the minute men when they steeled their hearts to meet and conquer the seemingly unconquerable.

"Out there behind them piled-up rocks and God-forsaken fields," swept on the other, "there's a real world, world where the tides are tides of gold, an' for me they are goin' to sweep in with a plunder of riches an' power that all hell can't stop! Out yonder there are cities where men are doin' things an' ships are livin' at the where the tides are tides of the ends of the earth—an' those ships are goin' to go an' come when an' where I tell them! They're goin' to carry cargoes at my biddin' an' my people are goin' to have what they want. Instead of a wheezy little bellows organ that acts like it had the asthma and cracked voices singin' hymns out of tune, you're goin' to listen to operas, an' Mary's goin' to have men that the world knows come courtin' her—in place of ignorant lumber-jacks." The young speaker paused for breath and when he spoke again it was in a voice that defied contradiction or doubt. "I'm goin' to make the name of Hamilton Montagu Burton the best known name in the United States of America!"

"How do you you know you can do all them things, Ham?" The question stole from lips that trembled excitedly under the hypnotic spell of the announcement and the answer came quickly, unfalteringly, gravely.

"I know it by something that tells me. It don't say 'maybe you can' it says 'there isn't power enough between heaven an' hell to stop you.'"

Paul's eyes were large but as his brother paused he timidly inquired. "Where did the Mantagu come from, Ham? I didn't know you had any middle name."

"I took it," announced Ham, imperiously. "I took it because it is the name of one of the biggest financiers the world ever knew, but not as big as I am goin' to be. I took it it because I'm a brother to men like that—but I'm going to go beyond 'em all, an' I'll carry the name further than it was ever carried before. I haven't ever talked about this to any livin' soul else. Folks wouldn't understand. First of all, I'm goin' to leave this country an' get out into the world."

"Will Pap let you go?"

Ham laughed again. "Pap can't stop me. Nobody can ever stop me. You can't hold a river back from the ocean. That's the difference between a river an' a pond. It's the difference between followin' a star of destiny an' just goin' on livin' the same as an animal in a God-forsaken country like this."

"This ain't such a bad country, Ham," argued Paul weakly, with the timid demurrer of one who sees only the difficulties. "There are some mighty-good people here, an' out there in the big cities a feller's got to fight mighty hard to get along, I guess."

"It's a mighty good country to come from," was the swift and contemptuous reply, "and a damn' poor one to stay in. They've got raw material here that's all right—like us—but you have got to take it away to finish it up. As for the hard fight that you talk about, Paul, that's what I'm huntin' for. No man ever lived that had it in him to be greater than me."

Upon Paul, with his measureless faith in his brother and his passion for dreams, the mad arrogance of the declaration was lost. The ecstasy with which Ham spoke tinged the promise with a fire of conviction—so that Paul wondered and believed.

CHAPTER III

In the Burton household that fall a leaven was working. Mary's mismatched eyes held a tranquility of quiet self-satisfaction. She had found somewhere a second fashion magazine, and often when she was alone in the little room under the eaves she sniped industriously away at the imaginary patterns of gorgeous gowns, or listened to the fervent pleadings of make-believe suitors.

But the secret was all her own of how something in her had awakened. This little girl would never again be precisely the same Mary Burton who had started out, that Saturday afternoon with a heart full of rebellion and who had come back appeased.

And Ham, his mother feared, was finding his burdens too heavy for his young shoulders. He had made no complaint but an expression of settled abstraction had come into his face, and at home he was always silent.

After the falling of the first heavy snow neither Paul nor Mary ventured out to school, but Ham's avid hunger for education lost no coveted day of the term. When his morning work was ended, wrapped in patched mackinaw and travelling on snowshoes, he made the trip across the white slopes, where only the pines were green and came back at the day's end for his evening chores. The trip was a bit shortened now because the lake was ice-bound and he could cross between the flag-marked holes of the pickerel-fishers. He had been afraid to speak of those things which were burning consumingly in his mind; afraid that if once he let slip the leash of restraint he would be carried away on a tide of passion. But some day he must speak, and strangely enough, the match that lighted the train of powder was the second coming of the young man who had met Mary on the road.

He came near nightfall, on snowshoes, and when he knocked it was the girl who opened the door. At first she did not recognise him because the mountain tan had given away to a pallor of recent illness and the face was very thin. But as soon as he smiled, the whimsical eyes proclaimed him.

"You—you haven't died yet," Mary Burton spoke instinctively, and stood holding the door open to the blustering of the sharp wind, quite forgetful that she was barring the way. But the young man who had come out of the thickening twilight laughed. He shook the snow off his mackinaw, for a fresh downfall was making the air almost as white as the drifts below.

"Not yet," he assured her, "but unless you let me come in out of the cold I shall probably perish on your doorstep."

Tom Burton, the father, sat gazing at the stove in the centre of the room. He was propped in a heavy chair with cushions about him, and he, too, had grown thinner and rawer of joint. He had been for some time thus silently staring ahead with a pipe long forgotten and dead of ash in his hand and an old newspaper—so old as to be no longer a newspaper—lying where it had dropped near his side. A painter might have seen in the pose a picture of the felled and beaten fighter; the burden-bearer chafing under enforced idleness and the imprisonment of an irritable convalescence.

"Yes, come in, or go out, whoever you are—and shut the door!" There was no hospitality in the irascible greeting of the manor's lord, and the face he half turned to inspect the stranger was devoid of welcome. It was mirthless from its deep eyes to the lips and chin that were hidden in a patriarchal spread of beard.

Mary for some reason flushed deeply as she stood aside and timidly smiled as though in amends of courtesy.

The young man went straight to the stove and began to loosen the collar of his heavy mackinaw. For a moment, without rising or taking any notice beyond a curt nod, old Tom Burton bent upon him eyes of incurious gravity.

"I take it you are Thomas S. Burton," began the young stranger. "My name is Edwardes and I have a shack back in the hills. The snowstorm has delayed me and I must throw myself on your hospitality for the night."

"Yes." Thomas Burton spoke slowly and dully, and this too was a result of his illness, for in past days his voice had rung stentorian above the blows of axes in the timber. "Yes; I've heard of you. You're the millionaire hobo. When a man's got plenty of money and chooses to live alone in a country that 'most everybody else is leavin', he's tolerably apt to be heard of."

The comment was not softened with the modification of banter, but rapped with a twang of suspicion as if the speaker expected to give offence—and did not care. Young Edwardes received it with a peal of laughter so infectious that the man in the chair looked up, surprised.

"So that's how they figure me out, is it?" inquired the traveller. "I suppose though," he added as if in answer to his own question, "no man knows what portrait public opinion paints for him. At all events I'm a harmless hobo and quite willing to pay when I put my fellow-man to any inconvenience. I live in the mountains by the sentence of my doctors."

"Lunger, eh?" Burton nodded his head comprehensively, but quite without sympathy; and the guest bowed his assent.

"Some folk turns lungers away," commented the host reflectively, "but that's only in the summertime when the vacation boarders kicks on 'em. As for me, I don't take in boarders summer nor winter, but when the snow drives a man in I don't drive him out."

"So they accept us in the winter, do they, and cast us out in the summer, when the ribbon clerks come?" Edwardes spoke musingly, yet amicably, and in his accustomed manner of self-communion. After all, men are very much alike everywhere, aren't they? The lepers must not walk the streets of Jerusalem, but they may sit in full concourse at the Jaffa and Damascus gates where their wrappings are brushed by every caravan that goes in or out."

Ham, who was just entering, stood on the kitchen threshold in time to hear a man whom he had never seen before, talking casually of the world beyond the seas. Perhaps, this man knew, too, the cities that brought conquerors as well as prophets into their own; perhaps to him the sepia-tinted monuments of Rome and the great tomb in the Place des Invalides were familiar spots! And the man was young himself—almost a boy. For an instant, Ham stood there while his eyes travelled around the room, contemptuously taking in the cheap lithographs and offensive ornaments which he knew so well and hated so sincerely. He straightened resolutely, and his hands clenched. There would be a time when the earth's greatest artists should contribute paintings for his walls, and palaces give up to him their bronzes and tapestries.

Dizziness
and Specks before the Eyes

Liver derangement is the cause behind these distressing conditions, and only restoration of perfect natural action can effect lasting cure. That is why Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief is so immeasurably superior to the old-fashioned cathartic liver pills and aperient salts. Such things can only give passing relief by forcing the liver to unnatural action, and have to be continued. Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief strengthens the liver, and so brings about natural action in a natural manner.

- Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, specks before the eyes, flatulence and windy spasms, acidity, heartburn, impure blood, and that dull, heavy feeling which is a sure indication of liver trouble.

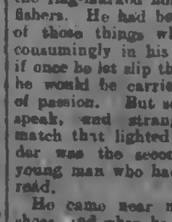
WOMAN AVOIDS OPERATION

Medicine Which Made Surgeon's Work Unnecessary.

Astoria, N. Y. — "For two years I was feeling ill and took all kinds of tonics. I was getting worse every day. I had chills, my head would ache, I was always tired. I could not walk straight because of the pain in my back and I had pains in my stomach. I went to a doctor and he said I must go under an operation, but I did not go. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and told my husband about it. I said 'I know nothing will help me but I will try this.' I found myself improving from the very first bottle, and in two weeks time I was able to sit down and eat a hearty breakfast with my husband, which I had not done for two years. I am now in the best of health and did not have the operation." — Mrs. Jessie A. Konnig, 508 Flushing Avenue, Astoria, N. Y.



Every one dreads the surgeon's knife and the operating table. Sometimes nothing else will do; but many times doctors say they are necessary when they are not. Letter after letter comes to the Pinkham Laboratory, telling how operations were advised and were not performed; or, if performed, did no good, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was used and good health followed.

If you want advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

FARM JOTS.

Even spotted apples from Virginia have sold up to 30s and 32s in Glasgow, Scotland.

Ben Davis and Baldwins each make up over one-eighth of the United States apple crop this year.

United States' apple crop is estimated at 67,769,000 barrels for 1916, as compared with 76,670,000 last year.

Less than 10 per cent. of the apples shipped from the Georgian Bay district up to September 22nd graded No. 1.

Particular care will have to be given to tramping in the silos this year, because so much of the corn has been partially dried by the frost.

At the sale of the Langwater Farm Guernseys, North Easton, Mass., last week, belonging to Mr. F. L. Ames, 74 head made the splendid average of over $1080. The highest price realised was $6150 for Langwater Dairymaid; other prices for females being $5000 for Langwater Generous and $4200 each for Langwater Easter Lily and Langwater Pearl. Langwater Foremost brought the highest price for bulls, $3000.

Quick Way to End Coughs, Colds and Croup

An Excellent, Inexpensive Home-Made Remedy that is Prompt and Sure.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, just try this pleasant tasting home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Thus prepared, you have 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy—one that can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief at all times.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is noted for its speed in overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds. Its millions of enthusiastic users have made it famous the world over.

There are many worthless imitations of this noted mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

NO PESSIMISM AT THE FRONT IN FRANCE

The Real Spirit of the Men in the Trenches—Mr. Hocking's Observations

Since my return I have been besieged with questions, says Joseph Hocking. "How are things looking? How does the situation strike you? What are our chances? Do the men at the front feel that we are getting near the end? Do they believe the Germans are beginning to crumble up? What is the real spirit of the men in the trenches?"

"Do you come into contact with the Germans at all?" I said to an officer; "that is, do you ever get a chance of knowing their feelings and hopes?"

German Deserters

"As it happens," was the reply, "I have up-to-date news to give you. Last night I was in the trenches, and some German deserters managed to get to me. They told me that there were numbers of Huns who only wanted the chance to escape, and they would come to us like birds. These poor fellows," he went on, "were in a terrible condition, shivering with the cold, and half-starved. They declared that hosts of the Germans were sick of the war; nervous because of the terrible bombardments, and eager to get to a place of safety."

Tommy's Confidence

Of course, this may mean but little, but it is a straw which shows which way the wind is blowing, and is significant of much. "But what of our own soldiers?" I asked. "What are their feelings?"

"Go and talk with them yourself," was his reply. "Go into the trenches, or meet them after they have come back from the firing line, and learn for yourself."

I did this, both in Belgium and in France; in the trenches and in the resting places I talked with scores, and everywhere only one spirit was manifested, only one desire was made known. Whatever pessimism there is in England, there is no pessimism at the front; our lads there are cheerful, brave, determined, firm.

"Lick 'em!" said the man to me all along the line. "Lick 'em! Of course we shall lick 'em; don't you trouble about that, gov-nor. You tell the people at home to do their bit, and you may depend upon it, we will do ours. We have got the upper hand of the Boches now, and we mean to keep it. It was terrible for us when we hadn't enough guns and explosives; but now, we have got 'em, we give it to 'em hot. Wait till the winter's over, and then you will know!"

Know Their Weakness

The reasons for the confidence of our soldiers, both officers and privates, may be summed up in this way: A long, long time ago the Germans were prepared and we were not; they had everything in readiness, and we had nothing. They outnumbered us in every way, and yet they couldn't beat us. Is it likely that, if they couldn't beat us then, they can do it now? We have plenty of guns and plenty of ammunition. We have learned all they can do. We know their weakness, and we know that from this standpoint we are masters.

British soldiers are better than German soldiers. We have proved it. Think of the battle of Ypres; they outnumbered us four to one, both in men and munitions, and yet we beat them. I don't say Tommy said this in so many words; but that was the drift of his conversation. They have the conviction—a conviction strengthened by facts—that they are better men than the Germans, and it has a tremendous effect upon everything that they do.

Huns' Doctrine

An extract from a certain Dr. W. Lacha says: "Educate to Hate! Educate to reverence Hate! Educate to love of Hate! Away with the false fear of brutality and fanaticism! We must not hesitate blasphemously to declare: 'And now abideth faith, hope and hate! But the greatest of these is hate.'" The German medical man is physician-in-chief to the Asylum for the Insane in Emmendingen (Bavaria) a circumstance which prompts Vorwarts to remark: "Pity his poor patients."

IMMIGRATION QUESTION AFTER THE WAR ENDS

Will Rush of People Be Back to Europe or From It?—Following Facts Help Prove Former

A Canadian writes: A question that is puzzling the authorities at the present time is that of immigration after the war. The consensus of opinion seems to be that there will be a great rush of people from all the warring nations to Canada on the cessation of hostilities. However, if one looks at the situation in a reasonable light, one must admit that the rush will be back to Europe rather than from it.

First, let us take the soldiers of British descent who will be released at the end of the war. They will be in the Old Country, and the Old Country will need just such men to fill the places of the fallen heroes, and take the thousand and one jobs that will be offered to young men of sound physique and undoubtedly good character, as our soldiers are.

Russia Needs Her Farmers

Belgium will claim all her sons to help in the work of rejuvenation that must take place after the war, and the numberless jobs for the skilled and unskilled laborer, the clerk, the farmer, to name but a few, will hold the people of this gallant little nation for many years to come. Russia, with her teeming millions of farmers, will want, may hold them all when the great war is over, to keep the nation in the running with the great powers, and to stand off the universal reaction that will assuredly take place after the war is over. The Imperial ukase of the Czar forbidding the use of vodka throughout the Empire will, according to a famous war correspondent at the front with the Russian forces, be prolonged indefinitely after the war. This will have an enormous effect on the Russian nation and will raise the standard of efficiency greatly and will correspondingly advance the common people, both socially and morally, and keep them at home.

Irish Will Emigrate

France, a nation of stay-at-homes at the best, will certainly need all her manhood after war's devastations to undo the work of the Huns and restore their country to its former glory. England with its terrible drain of manhood on land and sea, will need every mother's son at home, and may hold out inducements to young men overseas that will take them back to the Mother Country from the colonies. The only country is expected to see any number emigrate will be that nation of emigrants, Ireland, and with the unfortunate occurence there, the Irish, at least the disaffected part of them, will welcome the end of the war for no other reason than to flee the country and seek outlet in another.

SIR JAMES WATSON'S OPINION CONSIDERED MOST VALUABLE

You catch a little cold to-day, and by to-morrow it has reached the throat, next day the lungs are affected and you wish you had used "Catarrhozone" which kills colds in five minutes. In the first place Catarrhozone soothes the irritated membranes and relieves congestion,—then it cuts out the phlegm and destroys the germs. It enables the blood to retain a natural supply of oxygen, lung-food, and vitality. In any cough bronchitis or Catarrh, it's guaranteed to positively cure. Beware of dangerous substitutes offered under misleading names for genuine Catarrhozone which is sold everywhere, large size containing two months treatment costs $1.00, small size 50c; trial size 25c.

INDIA'S PRINCES LOYAL

Returned Viceroy Says the Halfs Educated Start Troubles

Returning to England Lord Hardinge was asked about the attitude of the ruling chiefs. "Nothing," he said, "could possibly exceed the loyalty of the Indian princes and chiefs, who have shown themselves ready to make great sacrifices for the sake of the Empire. They have contributed enormous sums of money and large numbers of Imperial service troops employed both abroad and in India, while in some cases they are fulfilling the services of British regulars.

"Most of the princes and chiefs offered themselves for service with the British colors, and many of them are actually serving. There hasn't been one single instance of disaffection or even of absence of patriotism on the part of princes and chiefs, whom I regard as pillars of the State. No doubt there was a good deal of perturbation on the littoral of India during the ravages of the Emden in Indian waters, but the people of India now realise the immunity they enjoy from the predominance of British sea power."

"Of course there is a certain amount though comparatively small, of disaffection and disloyalty in India. Among a population of over 300,000,000, comprising so many varieties of race and sect, and representing all degrees of political education and development, how could it be otherwise? But even so, this discontent is anarchistic rather than revolutionary. It has no constructive program; it represents a desire to tear down authority, not a plan to set up new authority. I wish to state most emphatically that the persons at the back of this movement, such as it is, are not the intellectuals of India; they are to be found among the half-educated. The Hindu part, so-called because of the paper of that name, which printed abroad and introduced secretly, is frankly anarchistic."

Rev. John Davidson, of Thurso, Que., writes:—"I have had considerable trouble with my throat, caused by public speaking in heated buildings and exposure to damp and chilly atmosphere. I find PEPs very effective in soothing the throat."

Rev. Edward G. Heaven, Marksville, Ont., writes:—"I have used PEPs and find they give considerable relief to the throat. I have also found them very beneficial for colds."

PEPs is the direct treatment for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, Laryngitis, and other ailments of the throat, chest, and lungs. As PEPs dissolve on the tongue, healing vapors are liberated which are breathed down direct to the sore places. Liquid cough mixtures, etc., cannot be inhaled, they go to the stomach not the lungs. PEPs get to the seat of the trouble direct.

PEPs are sold only in tin boxes. All druggists and stores 50c. box, 3 boxes $1.25.

Fighting For the French

CANNOT STAY REJECTED

Enlisted at Twenty-Third Attempt—Answer Motherland's Call

A well known Fleet Street newspaper man was prospecting near the Yukon, and, although middle-aged and married, he travelled post-haste back to England to enter the Flying Corps, and has since won his commission. Private E. Gard, one of General Botha's victorious army, is a wonderful example of patriotism to faint-hearted slackers. He gave up a post of manager in one of the biggest stores in South Africa, which was worth $10,000 a year, to join the army and receive a shilling a day.

An extraordinary case was that of Charles Davies, the younger son of Mr. Davies, the parish clerk at Bangor, who at the outbreak of the war enlisted in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers. He was discharged owing to a physical defect. Not to be daunted, he enlisted in the R.A.M.C., and was again discharged. Not discouraged, entered a Liverpool hospital and underwent a serious operation. After leaving the hospital, his legs were encased in plaster and irons for several weeks, but he ultimately succeeded in enlisting in the West Lancashire R.A.M.C.

Instances of this kind can be multiplied indefinitely. One man came over from South Africa who had lately been accepted after twenty-two attempts to join; another underwent a painful operation; a third went in for a course of physical training so that his chest measurement should be increased to the stipulated number of inches, which proves that the call to the old flag is irresistible to the men who form the backbone of the Empire.

CHILD-SAVING VITAL AFTER PRESENT WAR

Statistics Show How English Birth Rate Declines, While Best Are Killed Off

W. G. Faulkner writes in the London Weekly Despatch, as follows. Every year the war lacks the natural increase of the population is declining by 130,000—the babies who would have been but for the war. I wonder whether the people of this country have ever realized that in the ten years before the war 400,000 fewer babies were born in this country than in the previous ten years, that out of something like 670,000 babies born each year in England and Wales, 95,000 die before they reach the age of one year, and that 20,000 die every year almost immediately after they are born?

Out of every twenty children born eleven are boys. At the end of the year the proportion is almost reversed, and as the months and years go by it is completely reversed. The boys are more difficult to rear than the girls. The war is working in a hundred ways against infant life. The expectant mother, even if she has neither son nor husband at the front, cannot escape war-wearing anxiety which affects her health. The demand for female labor, here, there, everywhere, is exacting another toll from the mother, the mother to be, and from the children themselves.

Cost of Living High

In the long-suffering, uncomplaining classes who live on salaries instead of wages, there is a bitter struggle to provide the children with sufficient and nourishing food. Where a pound a week provided all that was necessary before the war thirty shillings will not do it to-day.

The war effects of 1915 increased the death roll of children under a year old by nearly 9,000. Every week that year 1,000 babies under one year of age died in the ninety-six great towns of the kingdom. And present signs point to an increase in the death roll. There must be something wrong where one baby dies to every two persons who die after passing the age of 65. It has been said that every baby born has a potential value to the State of $500. If, therefore, 50,000 die before they reach the age of one there is a prospective loss to the State of $25,000,000.

Must Look Ahead

In 1936 the boy babies born in one year who live till then, will be of military age. If all lived there would be 450,000 young men of military age, and 420,000 young women of marriageable age. The survival and marriage of even half this number should by 1936 increase the population by at least three-quarters of a million. The wastage of war in the field is the wastage of the flower of our manhood, physically, and spiritually, and is bound to have a bad effect on the physical and moral well-being of the next generation.

If the problem of saving the children is a great one now, it will become a greater one in the near future, not only because of a lowering of the standard of the physical fitness of the parents, but because we stand in need of more man power to make good the losses occasioned by war. We dare not, if we wish to hold our Empire, neglect the work of child-saving. We must not be misled by the huge German casualty lists. If war wastage in Germany is far greater than ours, her birth rate is also far greater.

Treasure Trove in Flanders

When some Canadians were digging a new line of trenches behind their line in France, a jar was found in which were 300 silver crowns. The coins, which were in a fine state of preservation, bore dates between 1745 and 1747, a period in which heavy fighting was taking place over the same ground in Flanders. Each member of the working party was given one of the coins, which are now worth $40 each. Some of the party, not knowing their value, parted with them for $1.25.

The Danger Zone

Those whose diet is deficient in body-building powers are living in the danger zone and fall to the first attacks of chills, colds and influenza.

Unless you nourish the body the body will fail as surely as an army cut off from its base of supply.

Bovril

just makes all the difference between your being nourished and your not being nourished by your food.

Bovril is the food the body-building powers of which have been proved by independent scientific investigation to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken.

Beatty Gets Bulldog

B. Oppenheimer, a well known London merchant of German origin, has presented the famous bulldog "Brindle Boy" as a mascot to Admiral Sir David Beatty's flagship "Lion" which took part in the two important naval engagements at Dogger Bank and Skaggerack. Mr. Oppenheimer paid the fancy price of $500 for the dog at the Caledonian Market Sale for the Wounded Allies Fund. The dog, which is a pedigreed animal, having a strain of the Rodney Stone blood in his veins, is being made much of by the sailors. Admiral Beatty wrote to Mr. Oppenheimer thanking him for the generous gift and saying "the officers and men of my flagship Lion are on the best of terms with their messmate, 'Brindle Boy.'"

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE

MILBURN'S

HEART and NERVE PILLS

Sleeplessness is caused by the nervous system becoming deranged.

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

TRIALS OF TRENCHES

Company Commander Has a Bad Time Getting His Breakfast

A subaltern writes: "If that cross-eyed batman of yours doesn't turn up pretty quick with that cake I shall make him sit on the parapet while I throw bombs at him in case the Boche misses him," said my company commander, in his delightful early morning manner. "There won't be much of him to throw bombs at," I replied, "if he strolls down Willow Road in ten minutes' time. There's a Boche 'Emma Gee' does a morning hate on Suicide Corner, as soon as it's light, with Teutonic precision." At this moment the object of our remarks appeared in sight about fifty yards down Willow Road which leads straight back from the front-line parapet. It is a part of the line too waterlogged at any time of the year to dig down more than a foot, so parapets take the place of trenches. It was unpleasantly clear that my servant bore no cake, and his general appearance was, if possible, more damp, depressed, and muddy than our own. I squelched along towards him that I might at least hear his tale before my company commander swallowed him whole. It was a sad tale. . . . "An' when I gets to the corner by Welsh Chapel one o' them watercarts comes round the corner, sir, at a 'and-gallop on the wrong side, bein' late in moving back before it's light, and knocks me into that blasted stream, beggin' your pardon, sir, an' the cake an' the cigars an' the tin o' peaches, wot the Mess Sergeant got in Bethune, an' six candles an' them French papers you told me to get is all at the bottom of the ditch." This was the appropriate opening for what proved a thoroughly unpleasant day.

Even With the Colonel

A certain trooper in an Australian cavalry contingent owned a large tract of land on which his present colonel had worked for $15 a week before the war. The trooper went before his C.O. for a small offence, and the penalty was fixed at a severe reprimand and two days' pay stopped. "I'm sorry," the colonel told his late employer in a friendly way afterwards. "But war is war, you know, and I cannot overlook things."

"All right," said the trooper. "I don't think I deserved it, so I have cabled to my foreman to stop the money out of your pay."

Had Chronic Indigestion Thought She Would Die

After Years of Suffering Attributes Cure to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Eating too much or using foods that do not agree are the usual causes of indigestion.

The trouble usually begins not in the stomach, but in the liver, since it devolves on this organ to filter the excess waste matter from the system.

Now, since Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the greatest of liver regulators, it naturally follows that they are unexcelled as a cure for chronic indigestion.

With the liver, kidneys and bowels active the poisonous waste matter is quickly removed from the system and there is nothing to interfere with the natural and healthful working of the organs of digestion. In this way only can lasting cure be effected.

Mrs. Rebecca Elliott, Magnetawan, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to write you in regard to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had gastritis of the stomach for three years, and could get nothing to stop it until I tried Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I would have an attack of this trouble with my stomach every three or four weeks, and was so bad at times that my friends thought I would surely die. Thanks to these pills, I have not had an attack for six months, and believe that the cure is thorough. My husband has had very satisfactory experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. He was much run down, and very pale and weak. I persuaded him to use the Nerve Food, and after having taken five boxes he looks and feels real well."

It is such experiences as these that have made a place for Dr. Chase's medicines in the great majority of homes. They do not fail, even in the most complicated cases. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S NINE GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

A stylish model in a skirt for practical or dressy wear, according to the material used in making. It is cut in nine gores, so arranged as to give panel front, adding to the grace of line. The closing is at the back, where five backward turning pleats are made in each half.

The vogue for pleated skirts is quite marked this season, the majority being pleated at the sides to give the panel front, as in the garment in the illustration. The pleated skirt is necessarily wider than the tailored garment, often measuring four yards around the bottom in medium size; the one pictured is 3½ yards wide in bell shape.

Due to a craving for individuality there is a wide variance for skirt lengths, but the tendency is for an addition of about two inches, the conservative model falling to about five inches from the floor.

Among the favored materials may be mentioned mohair, English check, serge, poplin and all wool poplin. You can readily make this model to look just as you see it in the picture.

The skirt pattern No. 7,976 is cut in sizes 24 to 32 waist measure. To make in size 24 will require 6⅛ yards 36 inch material, if with up and down; 5¼ yards without.

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 3 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Address—The Examiner Pattern Service, The Examiner, Peterborough.

WOMEN FARM WORKERS HAVE BIG APPETITES

Remarkable Success of Mobilization of Women is Graphically Illustrated by Personal Testimony

"Ten big loaves eaten at two meals" is a fair testimonial to the appetite given by farm work to the eight girls who are learning farm work at Mrs. Watson-Kennedy's farm at Cley, Norfolk. They are members of the Women's Land Council who sent them there and who are working to find and train an army of women for land work. One of the eight, Miss Lumley was present in her farming costume at a meeting in the Kensington Town Hall, promoted by the council, where she spoke about the charms of farm life and work and about the work learned.

Her short-skirted costume of sail-brown cloth, with cap to match, her leggings and solid brown boots, were quite attractive wear. Her pink cheeks and bright eyes bore out quite eloquently her statements about the healthiness of farm work and the appetite it gives. As to the attractions of the life she was full of enthusiasm.

Becoming Stronger

First she described her costume, adding the information that with suitable clothing such as hers, colds and illnesses did not visit the outdoor worker; she could brave all weathers. Then she described how strength developed in a woman after a few weeks' work. "At first," she said, "I found it impossible to lift a two-bushel basket. Now I can lift a full basket quite easily or a sack on my back. Churns and things I find quite easy to life when one has got used to it. One eats much more. Between eight of us we ate ten big loaves at two meals. Before doing this work we never had such appetites."

The daily programme of the eight girls begins at 5.45 a.m. The cow houses and stables and milking are the first duties. Then two girls go on the milk round. The others clean out the stables, carry out the refuse, and feed and water the animals. Ploughing and harrowing, loading up at the stacks, helping the farm carpenter, poultry, breaking in of young horses—all these tasks keep the girls busy in all weathers.

"Never Dull"

"Once the snow was so very bad," said Miss Lumley, "that it was suggested that we girls should not be sent out with the milk cart, but that some of the 'lads' should go. When this news reached us there was nearly a free fight among us as to which of us should be allowed to take the cart out. There is never a dull moment all day, and never a suggestion of slacking. But if you really want to know how jolly the life is you should go yourself."

Miss Broadhurst, the president of the league, mentioned that the league had found 3,000 women for the land, and Miss Farquharson added the information that they had trained 500 women in farm work to act as leaders or forewomen of gangs of women workers.

AIRMAN'S BUSY MORNING

Extracts From Nungesser, the French Airman's Diary

The Paris Journal relates how Nungesser brought down two aeroplanes and a captive balloon during the same morning. He started at 7 a.m., when he encountered his first victim, which he brought down. He then returned, and on his way met two comrades who had been unsuccessful in their attacks upon an observation balloon regulating the curtain fire against our troops.

Nungesser dived 600 yards and, despite incendiary shells which were fired at him, brought down the balloon. Then he returned and refilled his petrol tanks, leaving again for the British lines. Finding nothing on the way to attack, he replenished his petrol for the fourth time in the English lines to avoid loss of time. At 11 o'clock he perceived a squadron of six German aeroplanes engaged with four British machines.

He selected one as a victim, firing fourteen shots, and brought it down. The others fled. Nungesser remained in the air for seven hours. In addition to the above successes, he damaged a fourth German aeroplane, so that altogether he had a very busy morning.

GLIMPSES OF BATTLE

A Member of the Canadian Trench Mortar Battery Writes

This morning I passed an officer of this battalion on his way back to the front line. His tunic was covered with blood, a bandage was around his jaw, and his face was very dirty. Do you know why? An hour or so previously a shell killed a sergeant-major, who fell into this officers arms. A second shell immediately followed, and whizzed by just in front of the officer's face, cutting his chin. But he got it bandaged up and immediately went back into the line, to stick it out for another day.

The sergeant-major was a wonder. This morning he did wonders with the company—cleaned them up and held them together as few people could do. It was an awful stretch of line they were in—a mere excuse for a trench, and they were under a gruelling shell fire. The sergeant-major was the soul of the lot, they said. He held them together before he went, and he still held them after. "The finest soldier in the battalion," a sergeant told me. But they are all fine.

Bombing Feat

For a remarkable bombing feat, Lance-Corporal A. English of the Northumberland Fusiliers, has been awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal. When the Germans exploded a mine he threw 103 bombs at them from an exposed position. He also invented a new projectile on the spur of the moment. He threw six full boxes of bombs at the enemy, first taking the pin out of one of the bombs. The explosion of one bomb would blow the box to pieces and scatter the other bombs, which would explode a few seconds later. This feat earned the mine sweeper the Distinguished Conduct Medal.

STANDING ON PARAPET CANADIAN DEFIED ALI

Famous Canadian Pugilist, "Jersey" Baldwin, Fought Huns, Boers and Police—Champion's Death

"Killed in action—Infantry, 27,982, John Baldwin, kin at 374 Wellesley street, Toronto." So runs the last record of "Jersey" Baldwin, whose 32 years of life saw so much of battling, in uniform and out. There never was a time when "Jersey" was not willing to "take them all on," and he barred nobody. He fought in the South African War, in India, in France, in the squared circle of the boxer, and on the broad highway with a "cop" or two on the other side of the argument. He was not a scientific boxer, but an earnest one, and powerful, and a winner of several championships as an amateur before he undertook the more serious business of fighting the Hun.

Fists vs. Bullets

Even in France and Belgium he was eager to get at the German in close quarters, and military discipline was irksome when there was a chance of coming to grips. "Soldier Bill" Grant, who commanded his company in the early part of the war, told of more than one occasion when "Jersey" boldly climbed out of the trench, and, standing exposed on the parapet, defied any German, or any three of them, to come out into "No Man's Land" and tackle him hand-to-hand. More than once, too, he was fired on while proclaiming his challenge, but he never came down until he was pulled back into safety by his mates.

With Boys Against Police

One of "Jersey's" exploits was to whip a couple of policemen up Riverdale Park way in Toronto one afternoon, and for days he defied the resources of the constabulary as an "outlaw" in a place of shelter up the Don River there. All the lads of the neighborhood knew his hiding place, and he had no lack of supplies during his period of exile from his accustomed haunts, but the loyalty and admiration of the boys never admitted the possibility of his being overcome by the guardians of the law until he voluntarily abandoned his attempt to set up a kingdom of his own.

And then he laid down his life, cheerfully, one may be sure, just as he did all things, for his fighting instinct was grounded on willingness. He had been wounded before, and was in the hospital after the battle of St. Julien, but returned to service just as soon as he was allowed.

"Snowball" Marches

One successful method of recruiting in Australia has been that of organizing route marches. From districts hundreds of miles from the capitals small groups of men have set out to march to the cities for the purpose of enlisting, and by holding recruiting meetings en route the numbers are substantially augmented. In various states several parties have been simultaneously marching towards the cities. On one occasion a party of thirty started for Sydney, 320 miles distant, and reached the city over 200 strong. In another instance the numbers grew to such an extent that it was necessary to divide the party into two sections and to continue the march by different routes. Australians are taking the war seriously and doing their "bit."

Property damaged by mines driven ashore is covered by the Government policy in the British Isles.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

THE SINISTER SECOND

William II., King of the Huns, is said to be extremely superstitious, and to pay great heed to omens and signs. It may, therefore, interest his Majesty—and us—to note how extremely unlucky "II." is to kings. Harold II. was slain in battle, repelling invasion. William II. was murdered in the New Forest, whilst hunting. The one and only Wilhelm II. is fond of hunting!

Edward II was deposed and murdered. Richard II. was forced to abdicate, and then murdered. James II. lost his throne. Henry II.'s reign was very unhappy. Charles II. was plotted against, and nearly murdered. George II.'s reign was a miserable one.

In other countries, also, it is extraordinary to note how the "II." with very rare exceptions, was a far from lucky number for kings. Precedents cannot be sought in Germany, for the German Empire is only a modern creation. And as Wilhelm II. is the eldest son of the eldest child of the late Queen Victoria, and, according to his own opinion, ought to be King of England, he must, naturally, look for the omens of the sinister "II." in English history.

CAPTAIN MALCOLM BELL-IRVING

Grandson of the late Sir Henry Irving, actor, and aviator in the British army, who received the Military Cross for heroism in battle where he was severely wounded.

PATROLLING THE SEA

Life in a Trawler Rounding Up "Suspects"

Writing in the London Daily Mail, J. B. Chapman says: Our indicator points to "slow, ahead." We have begun our vigil, and for a week, our speed, unless the abnormal happens, will not exceed four knots. To all appearance, and especially in the dark, we are a small vessel crawling along in an aimless way. In reality we are as watchful as an old cat at a mouse hole. The crew above deck is divided into two, for the purposes of the watch, each watch being in charge of a second-hand. With him are three other members of the crew, one of whom takes the wheel for an hour, and the two others spend two hours on the lookout. Thus each of the trio has one hour steering, two on the lookout, and one on deck.

The lieutenant is never actually off duty and most of his repose is taken in the afternoon. At night, in the inky darkness—and darkness at sea is always intense—he generally shares the watch with the second-hands. Through the night glasses he searches here, there, and everywhere. With the naked eye the sailor can see an object long before the landsman, but aided by binoculars nothing escapes him. The night watch is a time of acute tension; huge vessels on our bows are going or coming like fast-moving shadows. Not only must we avoid them, but it is also imperative to ascertain who they are.

In this work we see the officers of the patrol service at their best. They know the jib and boom and hull of every merchant vessel worth knowing. Absolutely fearless, they round up all suspects and "go for" the enemy if he shows up. With our fires banked down when dusk appears, and the propeller only just revolving to keep "way on," we seemingly drift along. But let danger threaten, and a sudden signal galvanizes apparent apathy into fighting activity. How we should do it must be left unsaid. But let me say that two days after leaving our base we were told by wireless that another flotilla in an adjacent section had "bagged" a U-boat and sent it and the crew to the bottom.

CURE FOR SHELL SHOCK

Simple Invention For Wrecked Nerves Used by Canadians

Wounded soldiers suffering from shell shock and various nervous complaints are being cured at the Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington, Kent, by a novel treatment of baths with continuously flowing water. A soldier who went into the bath a raving maniac was held down by rubber bands, and emerged cured and able to walk out after eleven days' continuous treatment. The treatment is pleasant, judging from the blissful expression on the face of a patient sleeping in the bath. The patient lies on a sheet and pillow suspended in the bath with the water up to his chin. The water is regulated to the man's temperature, and flows with a rippling motion from head to foot.

"Trench" Violin

A returned Canadian soldier had with him a one-stringed "violin" manufactured by himself in the trenches from a scarred and twisted tin biscuit box. On this novel instrument he played with rare skill and feeling "Bonnie Mary o' Argyle" to his admiring friends.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

THE BRITISH MAKE SUCCESSFUL AIR RAID

UNEASINESS OVER THE ROUMANIA SITUATION

Grave Fears For The Safety of Roumanian Army in Wallachia

No Message From Bucharest Since Sunday and the Silence of the Roumania War Office is Causing Uneasiness in London--British Naval Aeroplanes Raid Enemy's Hydroplane and Submarine Base at Zeebrugge the Admiralty Announces.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 23.—Bucharest has not spoken since Sunday concerning the German claims of entire success of the Teuton enveloping movement in Wallachia. This silence created considerable uneasiness here to-day as to what had become of the Roumanian army which German statements, the only ones obtainable so far, have asserted is penned up in that section of Roumania, south of the Danube, between Orsova and Craiova.

New Ruler Means A Gain For Democracy

NEW YORK, November 23.—(By J. W. T. Mason) — Large gain to democracy in Austro-Hungary, with corresponding fallen power of Teuton militarists, may be the most important result of Archduke Carl's ascension to the Hapsburg throne. The new Emperor was not brought us as a probable ruler of the most aristocratic and precedent-governed court in Europe. In his youth there were several lives between him and the Imperial Crown. He attended public schools and imbibed a strong liking for democracy. He has the reputation of being the best "Mixer" Europe has known among her modern monarchs. For this reason the possibility of differences developing between the German and Austro-Hungarian thrones must be taken into consideration. Instead of the Kaiser dominating the new 29-year-old head of the Hapsburg's, it may be that the young man will exert a profound influence upon democratic tendencies in Germany as well as in Austria. If Austria-Hungary under her new Emperor, were to give greater power to the people in public affairs, it might be that the end of the war would be drawn nearer.

Two Attempts On Life Of The Russian Minister

PARIS, November 23.—The train on which Prince Demidoff, the Russian Minister to Athens, was going to Salonika was fired on by bands of Greek reservists. On the return journey the train was derailed by a criminal band but no one was hurt in either attempts.

Hotel Menus Renounced By Walter Runciman

LONDON, November 23.—Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, addressing a meeting of the leading London hotelkeepers, demanded an immediate curtailment of the menus. He criticised the proposed Christmas Day menus of the leading London hotels as scandalous. There must be, he said, one or two fishless and meatless days per week, or the Government would force them. Following the meeting the Savoy Hotel announced the cancellation of its special Christmas and New Years dinner.

German Artillery Fire Reported Heavy

LONDON, November 23.—General Sir Douglas Haig reported German artillery firing during the night on both sides of the Ancre, and also in the neighbourhood of Hebuterne, in to-day's statement.

Successful Air-Raid By British Aeroplanes

LONDON, November 23.—A successful air raid against German hydroplants and naval forces, at ZeeBrugge, was announced in an Admiralty statement to-day. Yesterday it was declared, naval aeroplanes dropped bombs over the seaplane sheds at the Belgian port, now held by the Germans, and also on German destroyers anchored alongside the Mole. A destroyer was hit and the sheds damaged by the bombs.

Lieut. Guynemer Bags His Twenty-Second 'Plane

PARIS, November 23.—Lieutenant Guynemer brought down his twenty-second German aeroplane in an aerial action reported in to-day's official statement. The night was calm along the entire front, the statement said.

Hospital Ship Had No Wounded On Board

LONDON, November 23.—In an additional statement to-day, the Admiralty asserted that the Britannic carried no wounded, and those aboard were only regular crew and hospital staff.

WAR VETERANS NOT EXEMPT FROM POLL TAX FOR SLACKERS

Municipal Act Provides For No Discrimination in Favour of Returned Soldiers Legal Committee Finds

REPLY TO C. W. STENSON

That the Council hadn't the authority to exempt returned soldiers from the poll tax and therefore could not grant the request of Mr. Chas. W. Stenson, secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Association, for exemption this year, was the decision of the Legal committee at last night's meeting. Early in the year the Council raised the poll tax from $1 to $5 for the special benefit of young men who have not enlisted. Mr. Stenson, one of the 2nd Battalion men, forwarded to the Council his poll tax notice on July 25th, accompanying his request for special consideration and the Council transferred it to the Legal committee for deliberation.

Ald. Stratton—Are we prepared to remit the poll tax on all men who return? We should first decide that point.

Ald. Dobbin—What do you mean by returned soldiers?

Ald. Stratton—Every man who volunteered and went overseas in any battalion.

Mayor Duffus—To be consistent we should include married men. They have to pay more taxes and have a greater stake in the community.

Ald. Langford —No, and I never it for one year.

Ald. Stratton—Have you got to run this year?

Ald. Langford— No, and I never think of anything like that anyway.

Ald. Duncan, laughing—I don't believe you do, William.

City Solicitor Gordon—I don't think that the Municipal Act provides for any discrimination.

Ald. Edgar—If the law precludes any action on our part we should write Mr. Stenson to that effect.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that a letter be written to Mr. Stenson informing him that the Council has no authority to grant his request and if there is any legal reason for the remittance of the tax the only tribunal for that purpose is the Court of Revision.

WAR TAX COLLECTIONS

Money is Coming in Fast and Estimate will be Exceeded.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.—War Tax collections are coming into the Dominion Exchequer in a most satisfactory manner, according to the officials of the Department of Finance. They state the business interests are paying up in the best spirit and without friction. Sir Thomas White's estimate of a revenue of thirty millions in three years from the war tax will probably be exceeded.

WELL KNOWN LOCAL HOCKEY PLAYER HAS DIED FOR EMPIRE

Gunner Jack Pethick, Star Defence Man of Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. Team Officially Reported Died of Wounds—Was at Front With the 40th Battery—Member of 93rd Battalion Band Home From England—Pte. Griffin's Condition is Improving—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

The hockey fans of the city and a host of other friends will hear with regret of the death in France of Gunner John L. Pethick the well known hockey player who has been at the front since early this year with the 40th (Sportsmen's) Battery. He is officially reported dead of wounds. Gunner Pethick came to Peterborough in the early summer of 1914 from Winnipeg and in the following winter was a member of the Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. team with Ack Hunter and Skid Janes forming the defence of the local squad. Pethick played fine hockey throughout the season and won a warm spot in the hearts of the fans by his clever playing and clean methods. His first game with the Petes was an exhibition game in Toronto against the Toronto Rowing Club. It is interesting to note that of the squad of nine players and trainer on that trip eight have since enlisted. The line up was Janes, goal; Pethick and Hunter defence; Halpin rover; Park, centre; Knapman and Cavanah wings, Morrow and Long, spares, Ed Dillon, trainer. Janes, Pethick, Park, Knapman, Cavanah, Morrow and Dillon all went overseas and Halpin was a member of the 118th Battalion but was discharged last spring. The death of Gunner Pethick is the first break in the squad. Gunner Cavanah was wounded a short time ago.

Gunner Pethick after living in Peterborough for a year went out to Cavan where he lived with his old team mate "Skid" Janes until last autumn when he made a brief visit to his parents in Winnipeg, intending to return to Peterborough for the winter. When he came back East in November he found that Janes had enlisted in the 40th Battery in Toronto and immediately followed his example. The two were members of the 40th Battery team in the senior O. H. A. last winter and gave a good account of themselves. Pethick starring in every game. In the middle of the hot race for the championship the 40th Battery was ordered overseas.

"John L" as he was affectionately known to his team mates was a fine specimen of Canadian manhood, a gentleman, on and off the ice, a clean player whose genial characteristics endeared him to all who knew him. The news of his death at the front fighting for the Empire will be a shock to every local fan.

He is survived by his parents, residing in Winnipeg and by three brothers, two of which are also overseas with the Canadian forces.

Official word has been received that Pte. Chas Griffin of the C.M.R. and formerly of the 93rd Battalion who was reported seriously ill a short time ago is improving in condition. He had gun shot wounds in the head and arm.

Major Campbell, the chief recruiting officer for this district, is in Peterborough to-day and had a long conference at the Armouries with Lt.-Col Ackerman and Capt. O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion in regard to recruiting matters.

Pte. Norman Patterson, a Peterborough boy overseas, writing of the Y.M.C.A. work to Mr. Jack Laing, says:

France, September 27th, 1916.

I am writing from the "Y" hut here, and it is the only place to write in the camp. The accommodation as far as size goes, is poor, but the people, especially the senior man, in charge is great.

The Y.M.C.A. secretary has a great opportunity in a job of this sort—just looking after the fellows in every way at a "Y" hut. There isn't a finer thing that a man can do to-day than to cheer up the boys when they are feeling home-sick. Of course it is hard work. It will be a long time before I will forget the man we have here. We have concerts every night of some sort, and we always look forward to them as the few moments in the day when we feel like really living. Some of the entertainers we have here are just as good, if not better, than any I ever heard. We have every sort too — singers, elocutionists, violinists, etc.

The Kingston Whig says: The figures of recruiting based on nationalities show that Canada is now supplying the bulk of the recruits to the colours. The nationalities of the 407 recruits enlisted in the last two weeks in this military district are:

Canadians	265
English	90
Scotch	20
Irish	11
Various	16

Mr. H. Irving Beers, the well-known Canadian actor-manager, who joined the 70th Battery of Field Artillery last June, and who has for the past few weeks been ill in the hospital with rheumatism, has recovered, and has been transferred to the Army Medical Corps for overseas service. Mr. Beers is well-known in Peterborough through the series of amateur plays he staged in this city a few years ago, at which the comedy, "All the Comforts of Home," was the most successful.

The following is from the Kingston Whig: The latest recruiting return issued at headquarters here shows that a grand total of 39,579 men have been enlisted in this military district since the war broke out. There exists in military circles the widest difference of opinion as to what this district's quota of Canada's 500,000 is, but the Whig's figures are being used freely, and generally accepted as being as nearly correct as possible. The figures

THREE VILLAGES ARE OCCUPIED BY SERBS

Heavy Losses Inflicted on the Enemy—Five Hundred Prisoners included a Number of German Officers—Hun Bombers Arrive on Scene.

FOE'S HEAVY CASUALTIES

SALONIKA, Nov. 22.— The official communication from Serbian headquarters issued to-day says:

"Our troops yesterday successfully followed up their attacks on the whole front. The village of Badimirtsa and the surrounding heights are in our possession. German bombers, recently arrived on the front, counter-attacked north of Sohodol, but were completely repulsed.

"Besides inflicting heavy losses on the enemy we captured five German officers and 181 men and 300 Bulgarians, including the colonel commanding the 90th Regiment.

"The Serbian and allied troops have captured the villages of Parulovo and Dobromir (north-east of Monastir)."

Late reports from Berlin concerning the fighting near Monastir claim that north-east of the town attacks by Entente troops against the German-Bulgar front failed. Paris had previously announced that the Germans and Bulgarians were offering strong resistance along their new line running from Snegovo, three miles north of Monastir, to Hill 1080, 18 miles north-east of the town, while a Serbian official communication credited the Serbs and their allies with the capture of the villages of Parulovo and Dobromir, north-east of Monastir.

On the extreme western flank of the Macedonia theatre, between Lakes Presba and Ochrida, the belligerent forces have come into contact. Paris records the capture by the Entente troops of the town of Leskovetz, on west bank of Lake Presba.

800 Prisoners.

Wednesday's French War Office report said:

"A very heavy fog in the region of Monastir has interfered with operations. The enemy is resisting energetically along the line of heights running from Snegovo, four kilometres (three miles) north of Monastir, to Hill 1,080, to the south-west of Makovo (13 miles north-east of Monastir).

"We have taken 500 new prisoners.

"On the west bank of Lake Presba French troops have occupied Leskovets, and are continuing their progress to the north."

The Berlin War Office reports: "Between Lake Ochrida and Lake Presba, and on the Monastir plains, vanguards of the Entente forces came within reach of the German and Bulgarian positions.

"East of Parulovo our rifles of the guard recaptured a height and maintained it against several strong attacks."

A despatch to the Chronicle from Athens, November 20, says: "The great victory at Monastir has had far-reaching results. The enemy is in disorderly retreat along the whole line, abandoning dead and wounded and enormous quantities of material. All reports agree that the enemy's losses must be enormous. For example, two regiments sent to reinforce the troops defending Hill 1,212 were in two hours slaughtered to a man.

Neutral Zone Established.

Reuter's Salonika correspondent, telegraphing under Tuesday's date, quotes the following issued by the Press Bureau of the Provisional Government. "French detachments yesterday occupied villages in the neutral zone recently established between the territory of the Athens' Government and that of the Provisional Government. The Royalist troops did not withdraw, asserting that they had not received the necessary orders from Athens. They were notified that they must leave the neutral zone on this evening."

PTE. ALEX SLOAN OF BANK OF TORONTO KILLED IN ACTION

Left Local Branch few Months Ago to Enlist in the Canadian Engineers and has Met Death at the Front.

HERE FOR FIVE YEARS

Word has been received of the death at the front of another Peterborough boy in the person of Pte. Alex. Sloan of the Canadian Engineers and for five years on the staff of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto. Pte Sloan left his position as teller of the Bank about six or seven months ago to do his bit as a member of the Canadian Engineers. During his five years' residence in Peterborough he made many friends by his amiable disposition and many good qualities and the news of his death will be a shock. Pte. Sloan's relatives live in Ayr, Scotland. The Ayrshire Post of November 3rd says:

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sloan, 6 Blackburn Road, Ayr, have received official intimation of the death of their second eldest son, Pte. Alexander Sloan, Machine Gun Section, Canadian Engineers. Pte. Sloan served his apprenticeship with the Bank of Scotland (Ayr branch) and then went to the Bank of Toronto, Peterborough, Canada, where he was for five years. Pte. Sloan came to England with his regiment but unfortunately did not get furlough to visit his home. Mr. and Mrs. Sloan have two other sons serving in the army. Capt. J. F. M. Sloan and Trooper Wm. Sloan.

While in Peterborough Pte. Sloan boarded at 300 Rubidge street.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THURSDAY, NOV. 23, 1916

PARTIZANSHIP ONLY.

Our esteemed evening contemporary devotes a large part of one of its leaded columns—broader, perhaps, in measure than in spirit—to a somewhat laboured discussion of Mr. Gordon's status as a member of the Board of Education. The concluding paragraph, of only a few lines, shows whither the organ is so much concerned over public interests as party interests. It "gives itself away" quite to assert that Mr. Gordon has different aspirations. There may be more truth than intended, in the concluding sentence of the article—"The only officers which he now fills are unduly stepping stones to higher political honours." The inference is illuminating—if Mr. Gordon were not a "Grit," the morality of his alleged dual office would not have been so deliberately questioned; or, if he were a Conservative, such a little peccadillo as holding two offices, would have been left gutterly alone. Partizanship, though it masquerades as solicitude for public interests is—only partizanship.

DOG NUISANCE AND SHEEP RAISING.

The complaint made by a farmer of the destruction of sheep by dogs, recorded in yesterday's news columns, has a meaning much more far-reaching than the destruction of property mentioned. Political and agricultural economists deplore the decay of the sheep raising industry. This falling off is held to be largely due to the fact that farmers are deterred from risking the risk of having their profits wiped out by the depredations of dogs. This reason has stronger application in the vicinity of cities, towns and villages. In almost every centre of population, there are large numbers of mongrel, ill-fed curs, which, allowed to roam at will, constantly supplement their scant bill of fare by feasting off farmers' sheep in the vicinity. We know this is the case in Peterborough, where there is an astonishing number of dogs allowed to roam abroad, without restraint whatever—and here is where our police are interested. Any one abroad at night or early in the morning can see dogs galore patrolling the streets, and in their starved condition, overturning garbage tins, and invading back-yards. And at nights, these baying hounds can be heard in the country, particularly on their way to make a meal on some farmer's sheep. A dog is, in the abstract is a noble animal, many of them with better instincts—principles—than some of their masters. But they should be kept in their place—and their place is at home securely tied up, so that they cannot become public nuisances, sheep murderers and a menace to a great industry. The government offers a bounty of $10 or $20 dollars for every wolf scalp, but it is safe to say that, taking the province over, more sheep are killed or worried by dogs than by wolves. It is probable that 10 or twenty of even $5 apiece would be paid for every vagrant cur roaming the streets of Peterborough, a good deal more than the amount of revenue would come into the city coffers from the tax on dogs. If our police have their other duties motoboats which they might find a good deal of spare time in scrubbing logboats with.

A NAVAL EXPERIMENT.

In responding to the call of the Admiralty, Canada will solve an essential problem. And it is one that will support promptly immediately the war is over. Our Empire is joined together by the sea, no land connects Britain with Australia. Each Dominion will strive in some way to maintain that silent, but immense power upon which, under the Providence of God, the security and welfare of that Empire doth chiefly depend. What will be Canada's contribution? That will be largely determined by two things, both relative rather to men than to ships. One is the number of those who now volunteer for service in the Royal Navy. How else can we test whether we are to be in fact a maritime nation? Shall we be willing to fight as well on the ocean as in Flanders? The second is the adaptability of our men to naval life and conditions. To have a body of from two thousand to five thousand men at the end of the war who have been trained in British dockyards, and fought in British ships will not only provide us with a personnel second to none, but will forever solve the question of interchange in training and service. Our men will have lived the life of a British Tar, will have realized the glorious traditions of the British Navy, and will have assimilated its jealously maintained standards of thoroughness and its incomparable qualities of handiness and good cheer. If we decide to have a Canadian navy we have the material at hand to man it. If we contribute ships we can also provide men to fight in them. And so, if our future lies, in any sense, upon the water, we shall forge ahead in the closest alliance both of heart and and hand, with the greatest factor in our Empire's greatness.

If Canada is to be a worthy member of the Imperial partnership known as the British Empire, she must be ready to take her proportionate part in all the essential elements, physical and moral, that constitute it and its greatness and its influence in the world. The furnishing of men for the Royal Navy, with all the advantages the above appeal presents, is only one part but a great part. There, however, may be no need to demonstrate by actual test that "we are to find a maritime nation." Reasoning not only by analogy but by fact, we may easily think we are a maritime nation. We are not a military nation; and the traditions of our comparatively young nationhood are not military. But we have shown that we have the "personnel," the physique, and the spirit of service and loyalty to the interests of national and imperial integrity that constitute the essentials of military efficiency. Our spirit has placed 375,000 raw levies under arms, and the way they have, in all ways, measured up to the standard of the highest military efficiency of any nation, shows that Canadians are, in the true sense, a military nation.

We have no doubt that Canadians would answer a similar test in naval matters. If the building and possession of a Canadian navy and the test of service give the opportunity. On day two coasts, where thousands of hardy fishermen are always in training in hardness, endurance, and courage; we have the raw material of the best naval force in the world, if they were linked into shape by technical naval-training.

While in this time of emergency the training of Canadians in the Royal navy constitutes a valuable present aid, the importance of this training gains its highest value with reference to the manning of a Canadian navy. Without a Canadian navy, manned by Canadian seamen, Canada can never take its proper place in a wide scheme of imperial maritime development, either in a militant naval, or commercial naval meaning. With a navy for defence, built by ourselves, Canada will have made a long step towards national development that will constitute the initiative of, and the impulse to, commercial shipbuilding, and the two conjoined will not only result in an attendant development of our resources applied to naval construction, but will equip us with the most important agency of the development of our natural resources and commercial success — transportation — and give us a felt sense of our essential autonomy, materially and commercially and politically, consistent with the closest integrity of the imperial tie. In free and rational diversity there will be the most effective unity.

MR. DEWART ON NICKEL.

Every one should read the report of the speech upon the nickel question delivered by Mr. Hartley H. Dewart, K.C., last Saturday night. We hope the speech may soon be printed in full in pamphlet form and be read by every man and woman in Canada.

Mr. Dewart makes out a case against the International Nickel Company which may well startle and alarm the Empire. He has proved, out of its own mouth, that that corporation is in alliance with the German metal trust; that its chief agent in Europe is a firm denounced as disloyal by the Solicitor-General of England, and that a steady stream of Canadian nickel flows through its refinery to the munition works of Germany. Read the record, read the correspondence and the conclusion is irresistible.

But most shocking and serious of all is the unchallenged fact that this German company, this conduit pipe from Canada to Germany, has friends in high places; has seats in Dominion and Provincial Cabinets, and dominates the Governments at Ottawa and Toronto. Hon. Frank Cochrane has close affiliations with the men who control the nickel trust and Mr. Hearst and Mr. Ferguson are his appointees.

Sir Robert Borden must act. The startling charges of Mr. Dewart must be probed to the bottom, and Hon. Wallace Nesbitt might well be called as the first witness. The flow of Canadian nickel to German munition works must be stopped, the men responsible for it must be punished, and all the nickel-plated Cabinet Ministers must be retired to private life.—Toronto World (Conservative).

SOMETHING ABOUT FRANCIS JOSEPH FOR SIXTY-EIGHT YEARS AN EMPEROR

In the personality of the late emperor of Austria, Francis Joseph, the world had lost interest. For some years prior to the war the old monarch had virtually handed over the reins of government to his nephew and heir, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who was assassinated, on June 28, 1914. Little has been published about him since the war started; the probability is that gradual senile decay made him a negligible force in the conduct of affairs in his ricketty empire.

His was a pathetic figure. In his old age he was left alone. His only son perished either by his own hand or by the hand of an assassin. His beautiful but erratic wife, the Empress Elizabeth, was assassinated just when it was believed she was about to be reconciled to him after a long period of separation. Other tragic events in the history of his family, with those mentioned, gave colour to the story that a curse rested upon him, a curse pronounced by a noble Hungarian lady whose son had been executed after Francis Joseph, then a young man, had refused to pardon him.

Francis Joseph became emperor in 1848, when he was a lad of 19. Then, and for many years afterwards, he was decidedly reactionary in his political principles. He was a typical autocrat, refused liberty to his Hungarian and Italian subjects, and ruthlessly suppressed their attempts at insurrection. Later on political and military reverses humbled his pride, and compelled him to recognize the expediency of winning the loyalty and affection of the numerous races which he governed. His policy became more liberal—but it was only through expediency. That he remained an autocrat at heart was proved by the forcible annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina in 1908 in violation of the treaty of Berlin.

He was a shrewd, good-natured, somewhat cynical, but not unkindly man, and was regarded with real affection by those of all ranks who were near to him. Personally, also, he was popular throughout the empire, even among his subjects who detested the sway of the Hapsburgs. Considerations of morality had very little influence with him. He was unmoral rather than immoral. For him, the seventh commandment was as if it did not exist, and throughout his long reign he was always more or less under the influence of some female favourite.

The passing of Francis Joseph is not likely to have much effect upon the conduct or outcome of the war. It is understood that his grand-nephew and successor, the young Archduke Charles, does not view with complacency the domination of Austro-Hungarian affairs, military and civil, which the German Government has assumed since the war began; but this domination is so firmly established that it would be in vain for the new emperor to challenge it. Besides, it is certain that without Germany's backing the Austrian empire would not fall to pieces.—Hamilton Herald.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I notice in your paper that the Council are again discussing the motor driven chemical and hose truck. I think when you consider the high price the city has to pay for horses, the short time they stand that kind of work, the expensive feed bills, shoeing, harness, etc., it would be cheaper and better for the city to own a motor driven truck. There is one thing certain the firemen could get to a fire much quicker, which would naturally be the means of saving a vast amount of property. Every citizen knows the quicker the firemen get to a fire, the easier it is to control it. Consequently the property loss is very much minimized. If any employer of labour engaged a man to run his business for him, he would be expected to run it and not be continually asking his employer how it should be conducted. I think the same thing applies to the City Council. The ratepayers placed the Council there to do their business and if they have gone into the motor truck problem thoroughly and find it as cheap (and we know it must be better), then buy it without asking the people to vote on it again.

Then again this foot bridge across the river is going to cost the city a tidy sum, I would judge too much for the benefits we would derive. The city is large enough to have a traffic bridge for all purposes near Dalhousie street. It need not be an expensive one. In fact the amount this foot bridge will cost when completed would go a long way towards building it. If a traffic bridge were built, I have no doubt the property owners must benefited would willingly contribute towards it.

While I am writing I wish to say a few words about the continual changing of lights on our street. By the report of the Light and Water committee Alderman Saunders said it was very dangerous at the C.P.R. crossing on Aylmer street and succeeded in getting an incandescent light on the north side of the tracks. The next minute the committee gave Alderman Evans power to move an arc light (which gives light) away from the south side of the tracks and replace it with an incandescent light. What inconsistency! Some bright minds representing us. I don't think. A great many of our incandescent lights are allowed to remain up so long without cleaning that spiders have woven a dark veil over them and after being up for some time the reflectors become so black they are useless.

Does it not appear ridiculous to give an Alderman power to change our lighting system, especially when the nature of this Alderman's business confines him to his shop a great part of the time. He could not be expected to be in touch with all the lighting requirements of the city.

As our industries are unable to get sufficient help, would it not be wise for the city to drop the sewer work, which is very costly at this late season and allow the men employed there to fill other positions, which I think are more urgent?

Yours,
RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I have the honour to request that you publish the following letter, as it may interest many of your readers in Lakefield, and the northern and southern part of the County, where I have taught school. Parties have orally published in these parts of the County that I was insane. This publication has done me much harm, and I have been at great financial loss through these statements. I wish to inform these people, that the last time these statements were made, that I was examined by two eminent physicians in different parts of the Province and found sane and in a good general state of health. Both certificates are in my possession at present. Shortly afterwards, at St. Catharines, in the Armoury, I sought enlistment to the unit guarding the Welland Canal. I was passed by the Medical Officer and told to report for duty the following morning. The Attestation papers were made out, but I refused to take the oath, because, they said the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and I could not go overseas. I asked that the papers be made for the Welland Canal, alone. This was refused, and I returned from St. Catharines to Paris, Ont. This was only a few days, after I left Lakefield. Whilst at Paris, I was shadowed by the Chief of Police of Paris, for some weeks. Why, I do not know. He told me that he could find no fault with me, in any way, that he would give me the highest moral character for that time. That my character was beyond reproach.

In July I joined the 238th Forestry Battalion, the Medical Officer declared that I was sound throughout. A copy of this attestation paper, I think, is on file in Battalion Headquarters. My name and number is certainly in the Daily Orders Book, as taken on strength. On August 16th I was discharged by the order of the Medical Board, not for insanity, but because I made application for discharge, as I found that the antagonism of the service caused illness, which had nothing to do with insanity. To sum up: eight doctors in all never questioned for a moment my sanity. And yet, in the County of Peterborough it has been questioned. As a former Principal of the Lakefield Continuation and Public School and many years ago a teacher in No. 4, Dummer, it is proper that the public may know, as there will be later developments in connection with the cancellation of my Public School Certificate, Number 19411, and my High School Certificates.

STILL PAYING 70 WAR DEBT.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The timeliness of the bill before the Chamber providing for the full indemnification of losses sustained from the invasion, is enhanced by the fact that a number of the villages and parishes have not yet been able to acquit themselves of war indemnities levied by the invaders of 1870 and other loans raised to repair the damages caused by the war of 46 years ago.

In the village of Haute-Marne, for instance, are two villages, four in the Aisne department, one in the Doubs, three in the Meuse, which have not yet been able to pay off the war levies exacted by the Germans in 1870. Some of these villages have paid part of their debt in installments, others have only been able to pay the interest to those who advance them the necessary funds to meet the Germans' exactions. Thus each one of the 425 inhabitants of a certain hamlet still pay 40 centimes a year war indemnity.

During the Germans' brief occupation of Amiens in 1914 the invaders exacted a war levy of 1,000,000 francs, regardless of the fact that the city has not yet finished paying off the 5,000,000 extorted by the previous generation of invaders in the last war. To meet the extortion, the city was obliged to raise a loan, of which less than half is paid off, and will not be free of the first war debt before 1921.

The Germans have often averred that they let France off too easily in 1871 as regards war indemnities. In view of the facts just stated it is not hard to imagine what would have happened had the invasion of 1914 succeeded.

TRAGEDY IN LIFE.

Not Revealed Until Man Went to Join Dead Wife.

When Harry Howland, newspaper reporter, ended his life at Los Angeles the other day after writing his own story of his suicide he went to join his little crippled wife who was buried with the doll they played was their baby, according to a story published in New York.

Howland's wife loved children, but none ever came into their home. Only a few friends knew that behind a locked door in their home in Kansas City they kept a life-sized doll. They pretended that the doll was their baby, and went ahead with plans for its future.

Howland was broken-hearted when his wife died a year ago. He buried the doll in the coffin beside her and disappeared, turning up later in Los Angeles. It was grief over his wife's death that caused his suicide.

Municipal Government Frequently Becomes a Farce And Disgrace Says Mr. Kerr

Present Generation Will See the Abandonment of the Mayor and Council Type of Municipal Government—"Do We Not Often Vote For the Man We Know Best Without Ever Giving His Capabilities Any Good Thought" Asks Mr. Kerr.

The appended address was given by Mr. F. E. Kerr, B.A., at a meeting of the Calebito Club of St. Andrew's church, held on Tuesday evening. Reference was made to the meeting in yesterday's issue.

Over what matters has the municipal government control? These include the maintenance of order; the care of the public health; sources and regulation of the water supply; protection from fire; intra-mural transportation; disposal of garbage and sewage and suppression of vice; dealing with the smoke, noise and bill board nuisances and overhead wires, paving, sewers, bridges, viaduct, etc., and the dangers from grade crossings; control of auctioneers, hucksters, peddlers and licensed dealers generally; parks and public playgrounds and their regulation and control; supervision of libraries, hospitals and, to some extent, public charities; public, private and co-operative services, such as lighting, heating, and telephones; and a whole multitude of other matters too numerous to mention. The main duty of the city council is to establish a proper environment in the city so that the citizens may reap all advantages, physically, morally, and intellectually. This is a very wide problem and the councillor must face problems far more important and intricate than the mere gravelling and grading of streets. As the city grows, so also do the difficulties and responsibilities of those who would attempt to govern it. What must be done with the slum districts? Are segregated districts of vice to be tolerated? How shall we deal with the foreigner who comes to us with low ideals in order to make of him a good, loyal, and deserving citizen? The councillor most valuable to the community is the one who labours to preserve and promote the virtue, intelligence, industrial capacity, and physical stamina of his fellow-citizen.

HEAVY RESPONSIBILITY.

When we are impressed with the heavy responsibility of those who govern, we naturally ask ourselves the question,—What standard have we individually in choosing the members for our council? On what grounds is a man's fitness based? Are men elected because they are good business men or because they are intellectual men or men of high moral standing? Do we not often vote for the man we know best without ever giving his capabilities any good thought? It is a fact worthy of note that very few professional men ever compose part of a council. The ordinary citizen seems to be vastly more concerned about the increase of his taxes than any other question that may arise. This may be the cause, but at any rate most councils are composed almost entirely of so-called business men. Unless such men are more broad-minded than the ordinary merchant, they are apt to look at matters from a more dollar and cent standpoint and with such a narrow outlook are liable to give the city legislation detrimental to its best interests from a moral and intellectual standpoint. It might be remarked just here that many of the councillors in most cities are mediocre in ability. The council board does not attract always the greatest men of the community for reasons which will become apparent as we proceed. The ordinary councillor has no particular training for his position and devotes only a small part of his time to the duties of his office. Of course, he deserves credit for what he does do since he receives no salary for his services but, with regular meetings held, perhaps once a month and with a few special meetings of the council or of committees, the councillor need not expect to much more than touch the fringe of his duties. The fact that the members of the council receive no special remuneration proves a temptation to them to recoup themselves in other ways. They become liable to pass legislation which will advance their own peculiar interests or the interests of their friends. They often in this way become the mere tools of others, who desire special favours for their own selfish ends. City government thus frequently becomes a farce and a disgrace. These evils have not been so apparent in Canada as in the United States but there does seem to be a moral degeneracy in the city councils as the cities advance in population.

INITIAL EFFORTS.

City government by commission was first started in United States. It was tried with a view to ending such evils as election frauds, bribery, betrayal of public trusts, bossism, and every form of corruption, associated with the so-called machine politics. To the consternation of good, old-fashioned citizens, men whose corruption had been proved beyond a doubt were repeatedly returned to city councils by constituencies. Reform movements were frequent, but usually not very permanent. In this confusion Des Moines and Galveston hit upon the plan of a government by a commission of members elected by the people, each of these members served as the head of an administrative department and together elected other city officers. The idea has spread so in United States that many believe that the present generation will see the abandonment of the mayor-and-council type of municipal government.

The Galveston plan had its origin in the great flood of 1900, a calamity which necessitated the protection of the city for a time by the military forces of the state. As the troops were withdrawn a commission of representative citizens was appointed by the governor to have charge of the rehabilitation of the stricken city. These gentlemen discharged their duties most efficiently and the result was that legislative authority was obtained to reorganize the city under a permanent commission of five members three to be appointed by the governor and two elected by the people. A new charter providing for the election of all the commissioners of popular vote was later adopted. The results were remarkable. The new governing body acted substantially as does the directorate of a bank or a manufacturing or a commercial corporation, despatching business on its merits without appeals to prejudice or resorts to the scheming and wire-pulling of conventional municipal politics.

DES MOINES' PLAN.

The Des Moines' plan went much further than the Galveston one. The results in the different cities which have adopted this method of government have been most satisfactory. Every city has its own story of deficits wiped out, business methods introduced, laws enforced, public work and public buildings much enforced and improved and all done more economically. There is no variation in the character of the reports—everywhere leaks have been stopped, system has taken the place of chaos, efficiency has been substituted for poor service, lower for higher tax lines or else better values have been received for public outlays. Optimism is brought back into municipal politics and greater faith and confidence are inspired into public life.

Under the Des Moines' plan of municipal government the business of the city is conducted by five administrative departments, designated by law as follows:—1. Department of Public Affairs; 2. Department of Accounts and Finance; 3. Department of Public Safety; 4. Department of Streets and Public Improvements; 5. Department of Parks and Public property. The mayor is ex-officio, a member and president of a council, composed of the heads of the five departments and has a vote but no veto. His salary is $3,500 per annum, while that of a commissioner is $3,000. The Mayor has supervision of the department of public affairs. The superintendents of the four co-ordinate departments are, in the first instance elected simply as councilmen or commissioners. They and the mayor, acting together as a council at the beginning of their two years' term of office, designate the department which each of the four shall superintend, and divide practically all the detail work of the municipality among the four departments; matters pertaining to the city as a whole are regarded by the whole council.

CHOICE IS MADE.

The five members of the council are elected by the people of the city, acting as one constituency, regardless of ward lines. The choice is made at a double election. At the primary election any citizen may become a candidate for mayor or councilman, but must present a petition signed by at least twenty-five qualified voters attesting his good moral character and fitness for the office. The names of all candidates go to the official ballot in alphabetical order. The two candidates receiving the highest number of votes for mayor and the eight candidates receiving the highest number for councilmen are declared to be the nominees; and these ten names, and no others, are printed on the ballot for the second or final election, held two weeks later, at which the mayor and four councilmen are elected.

As stated before the new council assigns the four unallotted councilmen to their several departments and defines the powers and duties of each subject, however, to any beneficial exchanges. The council by a majority vote elect a city clerk, solicitor, assessor, police judge, treasurer, auditor, civil engineer, chief of fire department, etc., etc. No officer or candidate for office is permitted to promise any person any position, benefit, or thing of value for the purpose of influencing his vote or obtaining his support. No officer or employee is permitted to be interested, directly or indirectly in any contract with the city or any public service corporation, or to accept any free services therefrom.

DETAILED STATEMENT

The council is required to print and effectively distribute in pamphlet form each month a detailed itemized statement of all receipts and expenditures and also a summary of its proceedings during the preceding month. At the end of each year the council must cause a full and complete examination of all the books and accounts of the city to be made by competent accountants and this report must be published in pamphlet form.

To enable the citizens to prevent the council from fastening objectionable legislation upon the city, provision is made whereby, upon protest of 25 per cent. of the number of electors, the council must either reconsider and repeal the ordinance objected to or submit it to a vote of the people for acceptance or rejection. Upon a 25 per cent. petition any mayor or councilman may be compelled to face a special election upon the question of his continuance in office. His name goes on a ballot and candidates against him must have a 10 per cent petition.

No man is so low but that he will have some friends and, if you narrow your constituency small enough, you give such a one a greater opportunity to offer himself as a candidate for municipal honours. At the same time such a person would never have ventured to offer himself as representative for the whole city. According to commission government the ward system has been entirely abolished. Every voter has a voice in the selection of every councilman, as well as of the mayor. It was found out by sad experience that some wards would invariably elect weak, vicious, or incompetent aldermen, who endeavored to work for the supposed interest of their division, and not for the general good of the community. The ward system is vicious in that it prevents the political education of the electors and encourages a local selfishness destructive of the general interest. No city can be well governed or its business competently administered whose governing body does not consider the city as a unit and its general interests paramount to local and private selfishness. The city is physically, socially and economically a unit. There is, too, at every moment, a dominant public sentiment on every question pending in the community—not always unanimous, but usually well defined, and, most fortunately, usually sound morally and right, intellectually. The highest ideals are not always recognized and accepted, but that which is decent and honest and of good report is almost always upheld. Public sentiment once fully aroused and united has an electric quality which sweeps all before it. Divided into many petty currents, it is wasted and defeated; gathered in one grand stream, it becomes irresistible.

CITY AT LARGE.

Election by the city at large acts favourably on both the candidate and the voter. The former to command the attention and hold the support of a large constituency must have certain conspicuous personal qualities. He must be a man of good repute and of fair abilities. He must have much personal force of some kind, otherwise he cannot impress himself upon a large number. He has to bear comparison with all other candidates and thus the weak and notoriously unworthy candidates are subject to elimination. It might be remarked here that there is no man so low down but has a few friends and, if you narrow your constituency small it is small enough, you afford such a person a greater opportunity to offer himself as a candidate. At the same time he would never think of presenting himself as such to the general public. Election by the city at large benefits the elector also as he has to take a larger view of his duty as a voter. He is relieved from the button-holing of the petty local magnate who wishes to project himself upon the electors. The councilman must look to the whole electorate for approval and not to a few cliques. Every concession he makes to local and private selfishness reacts and brings down upon himself the condemnation of the larger public to which he must look for approval. The old system made it easier to sacrifice the general interest, the new one renders it easier to act on the lines of the larger public good. The citizen who desires any favour, must go to the persons elected by the whole community and must necessarily be compelled to see how his request will fit in with the welfare of the whole city. Thus there is a widening in the outlook of the ordinary citizen and this promotes a higher standard of citizenship. The city which develops in its official and private citizens alike the habit of considering always and uppermost the good of the whole community cannot fail to evolve more and more of that broad vital public spirit which attracts population and insures prosperity.

ANOTHER ADVANTAGE.

Another advantage claimed for commission government is that it does away with the party boss. We are not much worried by such persons in this city, but they are quite too common in United States. The argument is that the election of a man is not necessarily dependent upon any one particular class so that the party boss wields less real influence than he did under the ward system. Then again any citizen may become a candidate for mayor or councilman by presenting a petition signed by twenty-five citizens attesting his good character and fitness. Party affiliations are thus quite unnecessary to secure candidates. The primary election weeds out the least worthy aspirants. Partisanship cannot be worked into the contest. There is no party ticket, straight or otherwise.

Direct responsibility for certain departments has a salutary effect upon the councilman. The ward alderman used to devote most of his time to private business and has been often little more than a go-between for the citizen of his ward, seeking service from a city government. What is everybody's business is nobody's business. Under the old municipal system it was difficult to attach responsibility upon any one person and often it was difficult to get business done for that reason. This carelessness also extended to the employees of the council as they were responsible to the whole council rather than to an individual. The result was a greater tendency towards negligence and indifference. When the duties are divided into departments with a proper head for each, each of these heads has a natural ambition to make his department the most efficient as well as the most economical, and, as responsibility can be fixed, a failure in any department brings its head into disrepute. This desire for efficiency must thus spread to all the employees of each separate department. Proper supervision becomes the rule not the exception and produces good service.

BETTER REMUNERATION.

The new system attracts able men into the service of the city because of the better salaries paid and greater opportunities to render good service. By reason of the direct and undivided responsibility vastly better service is obtained from men of the same calibre as were in the municipal councils. Of course, it is understood already that the commissioners devote all their time, exclusively to public business. Direct responsibility sobers and steadies them and a well-digested system and proper organization increase efficiency.

The Des Moines' charter called for great publicity of all the acts of the commissioners. They must publish itemized statements of their campaign expenses and the sources from which the money was obtained. Every motion, resolution and ordinance must be reduced to writing and the yea and nay vote upon it recorded. Every ordinance or resolution appropriating money or making or authorizing any contract or granting any franchise or right to occupy or use the streets, highways, bridges, or public places of the city for any purpose must be held open for public inspection in its final and complete form at least one week before its adoption; monthly statements of receipts and expenses must be published and at the end of the year there must be a full and complete examination of all the books and accounts of the city by competent accountants and the results must be published.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

Some of the effects in Des Moines might profitably be mentioned. There was a great improvement in the methods and results of street cleaning; while the alleys which had been receptacles for garbage and filth, were for the first time kept clean. The placing of signs, naming the streets at every crossing, a convenience clamored for for years in vain, was accomplished without delay. A firm, wise, and moderate policy was initiated regarding sidewalks, signs, depositing of mercantile wares and building materials on sidewalks, and scores of like matters. Open gambling was no longer permitted and a red-light district owned and controlled by a "social evil trust" of appalling cruelty, greed and wickedness was turned into a respectable neighborhood by the vigor and vigilance of a well-directed police force. The officers of the city were filled with clean and competent men. The city was never so well served by its employees and yet the city paid several thousands of dollars less per year for this improved service.

In business affairs of magnitude economy need not be looked for in gratuitous or half-paid service. No more should it be looked for or expected in public affairs. If you want the best you must pay for it. The evils of inefficiency, wastefulness, extravagance, dishonesty and jobbery under city councils, increase as population and wealth increase. Municipal affairs become more complex, requiring patient, continuous and intelligent study to master them. The Aldermen instead of asking, "What can I do for the city?" too frequently ask,

British Plantation Rubber Is Saving Canada Millions

Low Prices of Rubbers and Overshoes Due to Britain's Control of Situation

Here in Canada many of us have fallen into the truly Anglo-Saxon habit of considering the "Mother of Parliaments" slow and a bit behind the times. The present price of rubber, when its cause is revealed, affords one of the many proofs that such an opinion is away off the mark.

Thanks to great rubber plantations established, in the face of criticism and ridicule, many years before in her tropical Dominions, Great Britain at the outbreak of the war held a firm and tightening grip on the world's supply of raw rubber—a grip reinforced by her dominating navy. From 60% in 1914, the production of these plantations has grown this year to 75% of the whole world's output, leaving only about half the requirements of the United States alone to come from all other sources.

The result has been that the needs of the Allies, enormous though they are, have been plentifully supplied, while Germany has been reduced to registered mails and the "Deutschland" in desperate attempts to mitigate her rubber famine. Neutrals have been allowed all the rubber they want, at prices actually lower than before the war, so long as they prevent any of it from reaching the enemy, while Canada and other parts of the Empire have an abundant supply at equally favorable Government-regulated prices.

In this foresight and generosity of the British Government lies the reason why rubber alone, of all the great staples, has not gone up in price—why rubbers and overshoes, in spite of increased cost of fabric, chemicals and labor, are as inexpensive as ever, while shoes are costing several dollars a pair more. Wearing rubbers or overshoes through this winter to protect these expensive shoes is more than practical thrift—it is grateful patriotism, for in thus saving leather we make it easier for the Government to secure the absolutely necessary supplies of this alarmingly scarce material for our soldiers.

Both Thrift and Patriotism Point to Rubbers!

Lame for 20 Years From Rheumatism

This Well-known Toronto Contractor Discovers Medicine That Cures Him

Mr. William Murphy, whose place of business is at 259 Victoria street, and who resides at 146 Shuter street, is probably one of the best known and prominent contractors and builders in Toronto. He has an interesting story to tell and there is no doubt that hundreds of men and women of this section will find it absorbing reading. Mr. Murphy has been prevailed upon to make this public statement for the benefit of others who may be suffering as he did for 20 years before he found a medicine that cured him. This is what he says:

"For 20 years I have suffered agonies from rheumatism. I have taken medicines galore used liniment after liniment tried faith cures etc. in fact I tried everything that was ever suggested to me without relief. It was very impossible for me to stay on the job for eight hours unless I sat down most of the time. The pains have been so severe that many a time in the middle of the night I have had to get up and rub my ankle with liniment in order to get to sleep.

"After 20 years of this I made up my mind that there was no help for me, and the best I could do was to grin and bear it the best I could.

"It was almost with a feeling of despair that a few weeks ago I bought a bottle of Nature-Roots (double strength) and if I had known at that time it was going to give me the relief that it did I would gladly have paid $50 for it.

"I have always been lame (as my friends well know) but now I walk with only the slightest hitch and I expect even that to be gone very soon. I am getting better every day. I also can turn my ankle for the first time in years without pain.

"This may seem like a pretty strong statement to those who have had rheumatism for a few days as a time only, but remember that I have suffered agonies day after day for years and this is the first time I have anywhere been free from pain.

"As Nature-Roots has done so much for me right from the start I cannot say enough for it, and to prove my confidence in this wonderful medicine I would gladly buy a bottle for anyone suffering from rheumatism, and if it does not help them they need not pay me for it. It seems unnecessary for me to say that my general health has been improved too."

Nature-Roots (double strength) can be secured in Peterborough at Warne Drug Co.'s store or from leading druggists and chemists throughout Ontario. As a general builder of good health it is unequalled. All druggists are authorized to sell it on the strict basis that it must prove marked benefit in your case or your money back. Ask your dealer to-day for it.

Inspector Ward's Report of His Work as Dairy Instructor At Dairymen's Convention Yesterday

Inspector R. W. Ward's report of the past season's dairy work in this district, was presented as follows, at yesterday's District Dairymen's Convention, held in the Council Chamber:

The report was as follows:

Gentlemen: With your pleasure I will now give a short report of conditions, requirements and work done this season.

This report will not contain as much statistical information as last year on account of the early date of this meeting, and not having returns from the factories of amount of milk, cheese, money, etc.

The season has been very favourable for the producer of milk from a monetary point of view.

The highest prices have been realised for milk, cream, butter and cheese this season in the history of dairying in this country, coupled with a very good quantity of milk on the whole for the season.

The season until the fore part of July was extremely wet and cool, resulting in an abundance of nice succulent green food (grass everywhere), also ideal weather for milk reaching the factories in nice cool condition; also nice weather for making and curing the cheese, resulting in an extremely good yield of cheese of fine quality per 100 lbs. of milk.

In the fore part of July the weather changed to dry, with extreme heat day and night, and very long continued. The conditions and weather that make us think and long for milk producing foods, ice on the farms, and cool curing rooms at the factories. In the last half of the season a lot of my time has been taken up treating milk for butter fat.

Each patron's milk in all the factories that pay by the pooling system has been tested, and a copy of the test set opposite the patron's name left at the factory.

This work no doubt has been done for demonstration and educational purposes, on account of the act passed at the last sitting of the Ontario Legislature, and becomes operative on March 31, 1917.

This Act is called the Dairy Standards Act, and provides that all milk sent to cheese factories shall be paid for by the butter fat test.

These tests that have been made in the individual factory should convince the most skeptical that milk has different values per 100 lbs.

In my work of testing I have found a range in legal milk all the way from 2.8 to 6 per cent. of butter fat.

An average of difference has been from about 3.3 to 4.8 per cent. of fat.

These tests have disclosed a great deal of adulteration of milk in eastern Ontario, another strong argument in favour of the Act and the paying for milk according to quality.

My work of testing in these two sections has revealed some indications of adulteration, but in only two cases sufficient to warrant an investigation.

I was pleased to be informed by the Public Prosecutor for the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario that there had been less prosecutions in these sections than in any of the twenty-odd sections in eastern Ontario.

I have left in each factory for each patron a copy of the Dairy Standards Act, also containing the speeches of the Hon. Jas. S. Duff, the two chief dairy instructors, Mr. Publow and Mr. Herns, and discussions by the committee re this Act, before being made law.

I trust due consideration will be their copy and familiarize themselves with the same, for I believe it is one of the most important steps that has ever been made for the improvement and the placing of the dairying industry on a fair, right and equitable basis for everyone engaged in the business.

I have 37 factories in my sections. This year 26 paid by pooling and 11 by butter fat test.

The world war has produced unusual conditions which in most cases has been very favourable to the producer, but are pressing pretty hard on the consumer and your makers.

I trust due conside ration will be given to this question when re-engaging your makers for next season.

To my mind the inspection of cheese has been lax, as is usual in all commodities when we have an abnormal demand and price.

But when this war is over and conditions drop back to normal and we have an increased export trade you will find inspection will be more critical, probably more so than ever, so it behooves each of us to try and maintain the quality of our butter and cheese at the highest standard possible.

The first requisite to accomplish this is clean, cool, sweet cream and milk of first quality, which is the raw material, and the finished product cannot be better than the raw material in whatever line of manufacture you may engage.

I think we all understand how to have milk and cream of finest quality if we make use of present-day light and knowledge. Clean and cool pretty near covers it all.

I would advise a strong effort being made for an earlier delivery of milk to the factories. The earlier the delivery the better condition the milk will be in, which means more money to the patrons and a better and more satisfactory job for the makers.

Please do not forget that the patrons' and makers' interests are mutual: What benefits the one must benefit the other.

The factories are mostly in very good condition, but they all can be improved by careful overhauling, and the use of some lime and substantial improvements in order to be able to comply with the sanitary law, which I advise being done before opening next season.

Have everything ready to perfection before the first pound of milk reaches your receiving door.

Makers, I think, will be well advised to thoroughly familiarise themselves with the testing of milk and the using of the Babcock test, and if at all possible take at least a short course at one of the dairy schools.

I will again urge the patrons of the different factories to make it obligatory by resolution passed at their annual meetings, that every patron must cool and deliver his milk at a certain temperature.

If you realised as your maker and I do the loss you are sustaining by reason of the few careless ones you would act at once.

The manufacture of cheese is carried on on the co-operative plan and the time has arrived when our best patrons have the right to say that all the milk shall be delivered in right condition and stop this unnecessary waste and loss.

If the few careless ones had to pay the loss caused by their carelessness individually we would soon have no careless patrons.

If all milk was delivered as good as the best it would be quite satisfactory.

The outlook for dairying next season I would consider good. Stock has gone into winter quarters in good condition, and the outlook for your dairy products re prices would seem to be excellent.

Cheese have reached record prices, but when you consider the value of their food content as compared with other foods and prices, they could still go higher.

According to analysis, one pound of cheese has more food value than two pounds of beef steak.

In closing, I thank everyone that has assisted me in carrying out my work, which I have done with the one object in view of improving our great national industry—dairying.

Young men save your money to pay on a Y.M.C.A. membership during the ten-day contest Nov. 20-30. It will be your best investment of the year. 12d-115

DAIRYMEN OPPOSED TO THE IMPORTATION OF OLEOMARGARINE

Resolution Asking the Government to Retain the Present Prohibitive Legislation, Was Passed at a District Meeting Held in This City Yesterday Afternoon—The Pasture Lands.

The District dairy meeting, held yesterday afternoon, in the City Council chamber, endorsed a resolution asking the Government to retain the present legislation respecting oleomargarin. The latter, which is used as a substitute for butter, cannot be imported or manufactured in Canada. For some time past representations have been made to the Government with a view to amending the present law in a way that wold facilitate the sale of this particular product in Canada. A resolution opposing any change in the law, was moved by Mr. Wm. Shields of Smith Township, and seconded by Mr. John Riddell of this city. It was unanimously adopted by the meeting. Mr. Henry Glendenning of Manilla, said that the cold storage and packing house interests were concerned in an effort to remove the existing laws respecting this product. He claimed that letters were appearing in the daily press, signed by "Householder," etc., that might more truthfully represent the opinion of the "big interests." He said it was up to the dairymen of this country to see that these men did not get what they were after.

Genuine Product.

Hon. George E. Foster had been credited with saying that the restrictions on the importation of oleomargarin would be removed. Mr. Glendinning did no think Mr. Foster was familiar with the situation. "You do not find the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, advocating that," said Mr. Glendinning. The speaker suggested that the meeting pass a resolution urging the Government to keep the present restrictions on oleomargarin. "We want the genuine product," said Mr. John Riddell in seconding the motion, which was unanimously endorsed by the meeting.

Pasture Lands.

The matter of rejuvenating old pastures and creating new ones, also came in for some consideration at the hands of Mr. Glendinning. The latter said that more milk could be realised from pasture than from any other form of food. Pasture lands in the Old Country are much better than they are here. Some have been in existence for over two thousand years, which tends to disprove the theory that an old pasture is of no use. There is any amount of land in Peterborough County adaptable to pasture. Poor land is of little use for pasture purposes. The most general way of seeding down a field was to use a mixture of timothy and clover seed. Take off a couple of hay crops and then let it run for pasture for a few years. The result is that the pasture is largely made up of timothy, which is very inferior for feeding purposes. Timothy is the poorest kind of grass seed to produce milk. One hundred pounds of timothy hay contains 2.6 pounds of protein; Red Clover, 6.8; White Clover, 11.5; and Alfalfa 11 pounds. These figures show that alfalfa rates high, according to the amount of protein, which is the most desirable of all the elements to be found in the various food products. Some complain that alfalfa is hard to grow. That is the fault of the farmer, said Mr. Glendinning. The latter had about seventy-two acres last year.

Old pastures can be rejuvenated by running a harrow over them in the fall. This removes a lot of the weeds, such as moss and also loosens up the roots and prevents the grass becoming rootbound. In conclusion, Mr. Glendinning urged the farmers to stay with Alfalfa and give it a fair trial.

At the close of the meeting a resolution of confidence and appreciation of the good services rendered to the country by the late Hon. James Duff, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, was passed, on motion of Mr. G. W. Mann of Bridgenorth, and Mr. S. Armstrong of Otonabee.

FREIGHT HANDLERS MAY LOSE PENSIONS

One Result of the Recent Difficulty in Toronto.

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 23. —Such of the freight handlers as are being reinstated by the C.P.R, after the recent "walkout" at Toronto must put up with the loss of their pensions, according to the statuory rules under which the C.P.R. pension fund is governed. General Superintendent Purvis who has been arranging the terms of settlement with Mayor Church, made it clear that those taken back into such vacancies as remained could only come back unconditionally and though generous terms will no doubt be made by the Company, the men have lost their pensions through their precipitate action. An interesting feature of the recent negotiations is that the C.P.R. offered to accept the arbitration of any editor of a Toronto daily paper, but the men refused even this tempting offer and went on strike.

WEAK, NERVOUS CHILDREN QUICKLY GAIN STRENGTH UNDER FOLLOWING PLAN

Nervousness, just like weakness, is a family predisposition. We inherit tendencies to disease just as we inherit physical resemblances. The strain of study, social duties, work at home — these all tend to make nervous troubles among children. No wonder that St. Vitus Dance, Epilepsy, and constant headaches have become alarmingly common. Pale, nervous, listless young people are met everywhere.

It is nothing short of criminal for parents to neglect signs of weakness in their children. By ignoring the slightest symptom of nervous or mental strain, you may condemn your child to life-long invalidism. If any member of your family complains of headaches, fear of going into dark places, give them that wonderful tonic, "Ferrozone." Strength of body and mind, hardy nerves, ability to study with comfort, all the attributes of health quickly follow the use of Ferrozone. It establishes strength, colour, endurance, vim — does this by filling the whole system with nourishment and tissue-forming materials.

It's because we know the enormous good that Ferrozone will do, because we are sure every child and even grown folks, will be permanently benefitted, that we urge you to give it a trial. All dealers sell Ferrozone -in 50c. boxes, six for $2.50, or direct by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

Twas Under the Table.—Christmas dinner was nearly over. The turkey and pudding had been done full justice to and now the Robinson family were languidly eating nuts and almonds and raisins. "Oh, mummy," said Clara suddenly, "daddy and you can't guess what I've got under the table!" Feeling very amiable and happy Mr. and Mrs. Robinson tried to please their youngest by making all sorts of wild guesses at the answer. But at last they had to confess—"We give it up. What is it?" Clara screwed her little face into a grimace, and replied sadly —"A stomach ache!"

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

"what can the city do for me?" Business men of ability are likely to be burdened by their own affairs. Already overworked in these, they have no time to master the details of city government; tricky members are likely to circumvent them. They find the task a thankless one; their only compensation is criticism and abuse, and when their terms are ended they show little ambition for another term. Other business men are warned and decline to make the experiment. It might be remarked here that you cannot have much system unless there is a certain continuing of office. If men are sure of holding office for some time, they will seek to organize their departments so as to promote economy in the working out of their duties; but where there is a continual changing in the personnel of a body of men, no one is so likely to try to organize and thus things are done in a more haphazard style.

FEW PERSONS

The question is asked,—"Can people trust so much power in the hands of five men as is done in Government by Commission? Will they not set up a local obgarchy? Will not corporations or other selfish private interests find it easier to control or corrupt a small body than a large one?" To answer these questions we might refer to the directorate of a bank. It is composed of few persons and the responsibilities they have in expenditure are many times greater than those of a municipal corporation. Yet this is found to be the most advantageous plan for the benefit of the bank. Strange as it may seem, it is easier to sinister, anti-public influences to control a large body than a small one. The sense of responsibility rests lightly upon each of a large number of men, but increases as the number upon whom it rests diminishes. It is the feeling of responsibility, which rests upon each councilman, individually that tends to make him careful and judicious in his behaviour.

Examples of other cities that have tested Commission Government might be given, but it seems scarcely necessary. The system has stood the practical tests and these are a sufficient guarantee of its value.

Perhaps a very brief summary might be in order. The faults of the present system are largely the following:—

(a) Men do not feel responsibility enough; (b) The best men will not take office; (c) There is no stimulus to good effort since the chief rewards are criticism and fault-finding; (d) The opportunities for an individual to make a huge success of some one thing are very few; (e) temptations to recoup one's self for loss of time and effort are frequent and strong. The chief advantage of Government by Commission are:—(a) Every man is responsible for a department and the success or failure of that department must be attributed to him; (b) The employees give better service since they are responsible to one had and not to several; (c) The double election and method of nominating candidates weeds out the unworthy and hinders the progress of those who would dominate or control the council; (d) The noxious ward system is done away with; (e) The great publicity of all the doings of the council promotes purity of administration; (f) This system has proved itself more economical since cities under it have had better service with less expenditure.

Note—This article is based largely upon J. J. Hamilton's book—"Government by Commission".

Cottage Prayer Meetings

Non-Denominational

"The night cometh, when no man can work," Jno. 9, 4.

Go, labour on, spend and be spent;
Thy joy to do the Master's will;
It is the way the Master went.
Should not the servant tread it still?

Are there not many homes that need help even in Peterborough. We can get close to such cases in these cottage prayer meetings.

Prayer services will be held as below, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock:

Tuesday, Nov. 21, evening, at the home of Mr. J. H. Bettes, No. 1 Hunter Street, East.

Thursday evening, Nov. 23, at the home of Mr. Oates, 236 Rubidge street, next to Dunsford's grocery.

On Friday evening, Nov. 24, at Mr. Truesdell's, 177 Edinburgh street.

Buried Three Times Before Shrapnel Bit Pierced His Helmet

Mrs. H. G. Rumary, 87 Smith street, has received the following letter from her husband, Pte. H. G. Rumary of the 5th Canadian Mounted Rifles:—

My Dear Wife and Children,—Just a line to let you know that I am getting along fine. I have had an operation and a piece of shrapnel taken out of my head. It went right through my steel helmet. You told me to keep my head below the trenches, but I do not know how one would do that unless one stood on his head. I was buried twice the day I was wounded. It was nice to get into a bed again after the trenches. Still Fritze is getting the worst of it and that is all we want. Remember me to Mr. —— and tell him there is plenty of room and that he need not be afraid of the Germans, for when they see us they hold up their hands and say "mercy camarade", but it is the whizburg and shrapnel that is the worst. We do not mind how many Germans there are. We can fix them. I can tell you it is nice to be away from the noise and the holes in the ground. It is just like coming out of Hell into Heaven. I was a lucky fellow to get out of it like I did, but tell Mrs. Hicks, that poor Will Rowe was killed instantly and a lot of the 93rd boys were wounded. I can lay in bed and watch the sea all day. It is a bit rough to-day, as a high wind is blowing. I expect you will soon be having the cold weather and snow. Well dear I must close now. Remember me to all at home. Kiss the little ones for me. I remain,

Your loving husband,
BERT.

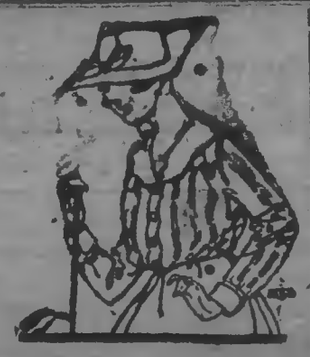
A Word About Christmas and Our Second Floor



A BLOUSE should be included many times in the Christmas Gift List and especially so this season when the separate skirt is enjoying such popularity. You will find nothing so acceptable or so charming as the numbers among our new arrivals.

BLOUSES are arriving constantly, in soft dainty georgette crepes, silk crepe de chenes, messalines and taffetas. Many show alluring little garnitures of embroidery—some worked on white georgette in delicate mauves, pinks and blues, others are on stronger grounds of green, brown, etc. You should see them and the other innumerable models. You will surely be enthused.

A Multitude of Kimonas

Handsome silk crepe de chene with hand embroidered fronts, in colours of rose, copen, and pink. A more suitable gift could not be imagined. Price.....$8.75 and $16.50

The GRESSMAN Company Limited

War Conditions Affected Both Parties in a Deal in Nails and Rope From Which Court Action Arose

At 9.30 o'clock last night of the action and counter action of the Canadian Hood Haggie Co. of Peterborough vs. the Dominion Supply Co. of Kingston was commenced by Hon. Mr. Justice Kelly immediately upon the conclusion of Mr. F. D. R[illegible], detailed presentation of the argument for the defensive in the Woodbeck-Waller suit, in which His Lordship reserved judgment.

The Canadian Hood Haggie Co., of which Mr. E. F. Fowler is manager, claim $1,066.30 from F. V. Samwell, of the Dominion Supply Co., Kingston ,for breach of contract in failing to deliver a quantity of nails. The defendants counter-claimed that the local company failed to deliver a quantity of rope according to an agreement, and ask for $1,500.

Mr. J. A. Macintosh of Toronto, assisted by Lieut. J. r. Strickland of Bennet & Goodwill, are counsel for the plaintiffs and Mr. W. F. Nickle, K.C., and Mr. J. M. Farrell of Kingston, are the defendant's solicitors.

Mr. Fowler Called.

Mr E. B. Fowler was the first witness called by Mr. Macintosh. The Canadian Wood Haggie Co., he said, was a partnership of Mr. Torrance, Jack and himself, agents for R. Wood Haggie & Sons Limited of Newcastle-on-the-Tyne, England, manufacturers of all kinds of rope.

From 9.30 until the adjournment at 11 o'clock, Mr. Macintosh as a necessary preliminary, reviewed the voluminous and interesting correspondence between the two parties and their solicitors from the beginning of the action until Sept. 2nd, 1916 when Nickle, Farrell & Day wrote Bennett & Goodwill that they were prepared to accept service of a writ when the two companies failed to reach a settlement of their counter-claims.

On December 22nd, 1915, Mr. Samwell wrote the Canadian Hood Haggie Co., asking them to consider an offer to sell wire nails and suggesting that the Haggie Company travellers might begin inquiries to feel out prospective buyers. Mr. Fowler replied asking for the best price. Mr. Samwell could not quote on 1,000 kegs. The first price mentioned on December 27 was $2.60 a keg f.o.b. Toronto. During January, February and March correspondence was interchanged almost daily. On February 11th Mr. Samwell's price had advanced to $2.70 base, net 30 days f.o.b. Toronto, delivery up to May 1st. He stated that he could obtain nails from the Dominion Steel Co. at a better price than the jobbers. Owing to the conditions in the steel market prices were moving upward. Mr. Torrance Jack, meanwhile, had secured a number of prospective customers ,but freight details could not be satisfactorily arranged.

From February 22nd to March 14, Mr. Samwell acknowledged orders and forwarded them to the manufacturers which the Hood Haggie Co. had secured, including two cars of nails from Thos. Ramsay of Hamilton at $2.80 a keg, and an order from McDermid and Kyle of Stratford. The possibility of difficulty at the mills was first mentioned about the end of February. Mr. Samwell wrote that there might be a little delay, but deliveries had been prompt up to that time.

March 17— Mr. Fowler asked Mr. Samwell to get definite information from the mills of the probable date of shipment of the Ramsay order.

March 18—Mr. Samwell replied that they were special nails and would require about three weeks before they were ready.

March 22—An order for a car of 300 kegs for McDermid & Kyle was confirmed by Mr. Fowler.

During April plaintiff wrote urgently for definite information regarding shipments.

April 24— Mr. Samwell wrote that shipments were assessed him by May 10 at latest.

May 19—Mr. Fowler telephoned Mr. Samwell that Ramsay threatened a law suit if his order was not shipped at once.

June 6—Mr. Fowler wrote that something must be done regarding the orders. Stratford had telephoned about their car.

On June 15th he told Mr. Samwell he would have to go into the open market against claims that would undoubtedly be made.

June 21—Mr. Fowler wrote that unless delivery were made before 23rd he would have to go into the open market and fill the orders.

June 22nd—Defendant wrote that he was asking for quotations from other mills. Then he asked for the first time for a bankers guarantee to accept Dominion Supply Co. drafts on the various companys who had ordered nails. Mr. Fowler replied that this request was impossible.

Cancel's Contract.

June 27—Mr. Samwell wrote that he cancelled the transaction. He refused to ship to people he didn't know. It was Mr. Fowler's own fault, he said, for not sending the banker's guarantee of those customers.

June 30—Mr. Fowler replied that he couldn't understand Mr. Samwell's position. The latter had ample opportunity to investigate the credit standing of the firms for whom the orders had been given. The time to question their credit was when the order was accepted. Mr. Fowler reported that he had filled the Ramsay order in the open market at $3.70, and looked to the Dominion Supply Co. to reimburse him for his loss.

Mr. Samwell, in reply, said he had litigation with Robinson Company of Hamilton, and had included $1 a keg for the Wood Haggie Co. orders.

July 5—Mr. Fowler forwarded a draft to Samwell, covering the nail deal, and for rope the latter had bought.

July 7—Mr. Samwell wrote that his responsibility ended when he did not receive the banker's guarantee as requested. A retailer could have got a better price for a single keg than for the total amount bought for Ramsay.

July 7—Messrs. Nickle, Farrell & Day wrote that the Dominion Supply Co. was perfectly good and would settle.

July 26—Bennett & Goodwill forwarded the Hood Haggie Company's statement of loss of $1,066.30 through Samwell's failure to deliver the nail orders through him.

Correspondence now between the parties' solicitors was frequent.

Aug. 7—Bennett and Goodwill forwarded certified copies of the Ramsay purchases, claiming $540 loss on that deal, 90 cents per keg on 600 kegs, the difference between $2.80 and $3.70.

Aug. 21—Mr. Nickle wrote that Mr. Samwell couldn't justify the price of $3.70 paid for the Ramsay order when the market price was $3.40.

Mr. Samwell, he said, would have to buy rope in the open market due to Hood Haggie's failure to ship the balance of a rope contract.

That was practically where the negotiations were severed.

Mr. Ramsay.

Mr. Thos. Ramsay, of Hamilton, corroborated the correspondence relating to his purchase of nails at $3.70. There was never any question of the credit of his company, he said.

Mr. Torrance Jack, of the Canadian Hood Haggie Co., said that in buying for the Ramsay order, he had obtained prices from a number of companies. Mr. Ramsay's order was for immediate shipment, because his customers were passing him. Hence $3.70 a keg was paid. Later, the orders for McDermid and Kyle and other companies were filled at $3.40 a keg. Mr. Jack stated that the credit of his customers was beyond question.

Mr. Samwell.

While Mr. Fowler had recited his troubles in filling nail orders accepted by Mr. Samwell, the latter, in presenting his defence, had a somewhat similar tale of woe to the effect that the Wood Haggie Co. had fallen down on rope shipments to him. Each party was selling a commodity for which there was a vast demand, and, as a result, prices, shipments, and other phases of the business were kept seething in a flux that swept the traders along with it.

Mr. Samwell stated that on September 20, 1915, he had contracted for 50 or 60 tons of rope from the Hood Haggie Co., and claimed that 10 tons 381 lbs. remained to be supplied. He admitted to Mr. Macintosh that his first letter demanding this balance was when his nail order failure had reached a crisis. Correspondance showed that Hood Haggie rope shipments had been held up by shipping difficulties, and the commandeering of output by the British Government. In the meantime Mr. Samwell was being pressed for rope deliveries, and was confronted by the prospect of buying in the open market. He claimed that there was a difference of about 6½c a pound between the price at the time he had contracted and the price when business relations ceased.

Mr. Fowler, for the defence in this counter action, testified that an order for 10 tons of rope which Mr. Samwell said had not been delivered had been filled. Mr. Samwell, he said, had changed the order, requisitioning different size of rope, instead of an entire order of one size, and Mr. Fowler presented a cablegram he had sent the Glasgow company to that effect.

An adjournment was made until 2.30, during which the correspondence relating to these orders was to be checked up.

Mr. Macintosh stated that his client did not claim to have supplied 60 tons, but slightly over 50 tons, but that he had filled all the orders he had received.

WONDERFUL WORK OF THE Y.M.C.A. AT FRONT

Peterborough Boy Capt. H. A. Pearson Was Until a Short Time Ago the Senior Representative of the Y. M. C. A. in France.

NOW ON FURLOUGH

CAPT. H. A. PEARSON

Captain Pearson, an old Peterborough boy, who is at present in furlough in Canada was, until his departure from France, senior representative of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. staff. He went to France November 20th, 1914, and worked for three months with the British Y.M.C.A., acting as their military representative (they had no one in uniform). The duties at first were to take supplies from London to the newly organized branches in France, and at that time each shipment had to be personally conducted. Up to the beginning of 1915 a trunk full of stationary, ink, paper, etc., weighing about two hundred and fifty pounds) would last the Association in France about a week, and an instance of how the work has grown is shown by the fact that at the time the Poperinghe building was hit they had on hand one million eight thousand sheets of paper, which was the supply needed for free distribution by the Canadians alone for one month. The first shipment of canteen supplies to France was fifty cases of slab cake, some of which spoiled before it could be used, but now the Canadians alone use an average of three hundred cases of supplies a day. The first Canadian Division arrived in France without Association equipment, but by the time the Second Division arrived they had buildings and tents worth a thousand pounds, and a great deal of equipment.

At first the Association officers were looked upon as being unnecessary, and great difficulty was experienced in getting even a place to sleep. But in a few months Association officers both in England and France demonstrated the fact that they could make a big contribution to the efficiency of the soldiers, and to-day the Association in France has more requests from Officers Commanding for Y.M.C.A. officers and tents than it can fill.

Services at first were held without the assistance of books or music, and in old barns or any place that they could get rent free, but to-day each brigade in the Canadian Corps has a well equipped Association tent or hut, and some brigades have three or four smaller branches. They own 18 pianos and have ordered ten more, eighty-four Grafonolas and over a thousand records, all the hymn books and testaments they can use, and a very valuable assortment of athletic equipment.

STREET RAILWAY NOTICE

Owing to the increase in passenger traffic, the management of the Peterborough Radial Railway deem it advisable, in the interests of the public, to discontinue stopping at the white poles in the centre of the blocks on George street, as it is found impossible, during the busy hours, to give the public a ten minute service and make so many stops. After the date of this notice the cars will stop only at the regular street corners. Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. Central Ontario System. 5d-119

PEGGY HYLAND

In Saints and Sinners, at the Empire Theatre.

(Review).

The picturization of Henry Arthur Jones' world-famous drama, "Saints and Sinners," produced by the Famous Players Film Company, will undoubtedly be considered a notable screen achievement. The great distinction and success that this powerful play has attained on the stages of every English-speaking country of the globe, added to its unusual pictorial possibilities, make this subject an unique photoplay offering. But, besides these details of more than ordinary interest, added importance attaches to the production because the noted British star, Peggy Hyland, appears on the screen in the role of Letty, the central character, about whom the absorbing and thrilling plot revolves. Miss Hyland's charm and dramatic talents combine to make the characterization one to be long remembered. Altogether, the extraordinary conjunction of star and play contributes to make this photo-drama one of the most important ever offered by the Famous Players Film Company on the Paramount programme.

TRESPASS CASE AGAINST FARMERS

Escaping Cost of Stabling Horses While in Peterboro.

Chief Thompson has a little item on his diary for Saturday morning when a farmer will be charged with trespassing in the yard to which entrance is gained off Simcoe street through the King George hotel lane. This open space is at the rear of George street stores and has been used by farmers who thereby escape paying stable yard rent at the local hotels. It is stated that every Saturday finds farmers' waggons packed into this yard, which is private property, and Saturday's case may serve as an example to all those who have been getting something for nothing in the form of free yard room.

20,000 ORIENTALS WORK ON FRENCH MUNITIONS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—France and Russia, the American Government has learned, is importing thousands of Chinese and Indo-Chinese to work in munition factories and arsenals to free their native workmen for military duty. The number already put to work in French plants is estimated at 20,000, with 30,000 more under contract by permission of the Chinese Government for four years' service in France. Russia has contracted for 20,000, of whom 5,500 have reached the country.

Most of the Orientals are trained artisans, drawing wages in some instances as high as five dollars a day. Specially chartered ships are moving them to France, while Russia is transporting them by way of the Siberian Railway.

The Indo-Chinese are being distributed largely among the munition plants in the south of France. Already more than 3,000 are at St. Medard, 700 are working at Bassens, 500 at the Toulouse Arsenal, 300 in the Toulouse Powder Mills, 200 in the Tarbes Arsenal and several thousand of Chinese and Indo-Chinese in the smaller plants and agricultural pursuits. Some of the more highly skilled men are in airplane factories.

99 MILLION BUSHELS WHEAT FOR EXPORT

OTTAWA, Nov. 23.— Canada's exportable surplus of wheat this year is estimated at 99,495,700 bushels, as compared with 264,473,000 bushels last year.

A Government report issued to-day places the total wheat crop this year at 180,000,000 bushels, as compared with 376,000,000 bushels last year.

The amount of last year's crop still left in Canada is estimated at 270,000,000 bushels. Seed requirements for 1917 are placed at 21,000,000 bushels, and the loss in cleaning and for grain not of merchantable quality is placed at 16,000,000 bushels.

For food requirements in Canada it is estimated 50,000,000 bushels will be required. This leaves for export therefore approximately 160,000,000 bushels.

No Tax on Soldiers' Wills.

MONTREAL, Nov. 23.—The Provincial Government has issued an order that no stamp fees shall be charged for probating soldiers' wills hereafter.

Rheims Cathedral Liable to Collapse

RHEIMS, Nov. 21.—On the first day of November the thousandth German shell struck the Cathedral of Rheims Ever since the recent French drive at Verdun salvos of shell have been poured daily into Rheims, many striking the cathedral. Four of the flying buttresses supporting the roof of the nave have been demolished and several others hit. As the weight of the stone roof, which is sixty centemeters in thickness, is borne almost entirely by these flying buttresses, the danger of its fall has become imminent.

Other parts of the beautiful architecture and the statuary have suffered irreparable damage, and this increases daily, but as their destruction does not affect the stability of the building their loss is felt only from the viewpoint of art.

The fears of the authorities have been increased by the unusually severe rainy season, which this year has been uninterrupted for many weeks. The timber and leaden roofs of the Cathedral having been destroyed early in the bombardment, the rain falls directly into the building through the shell holes in the stone roof and washes away layer after layer of the stone of the interior, leaving muddy puddles on the floor, and gradually percolating through to the crypt and foundations.

Endeavours were made at first to deal with this peril to the Cathedral by employing men to clear away the water and at the same time to prop up parts of the building in danger of falling. The Germans, however, who keep very close observation on all that is going on within the town, fired on the working parties and the effort had to be abandoned.

Strict orders have been issued against visitors being permitted to enter the building, and these are departed from only with the express consent of the military authorities.

The Associated Press correspondent, who at the beginning of the war was one of the first to be allowed to witness the destruction caused by the German shells, was again granted permission to view the interior. Inside every particle of woodwork except a few splintered stalls and the pulpit has been removed in order to avert danger from fire. The bare cathedral could thus be seen in all its beautiful architectural lines. The unique rose window above the front portal, whose stained glass was considered as the finest specimen of that art, is in a sad state of destruction. Most of the panes have disappeared, and those which remain hang to the leaden frames only awaiting an extra shock of vibration to fall. The bells in the belfry are held in their places by ropes, for shells have destroyed their supports. Fragments of statuary strew the floor.

Outside the main portals are now protected by sandbags, but all their stone ornamentation disappeared during the first bombardment. All around the roof the delicate stone colonnades show signs of toppling over. The bishop's house by the side of the cathedral has almost disappeared, and every house in the direct line of the fire from the German batteries is a mere shell.

The population, which before the war was considerably more than 100,000 has been reduced to approximately 18,000. Stores still keep open in some of the streets, but whenever the arrival of a salvo of shells from a German battery announces that the town is to submit to a new bombardment these are closed and their proprietors as well as the other inhabitants retreat to their cellars. Some of those, however, who have remained in the town since the Germans evacuated it have become so accustomed to the danger that they decline to leave their work unless the shelling becomes unusually severe. For this reason scarcely ever does a bombardment occur without causing some casualties among the civil population.

LINDSAY CLAIM CUP

Gordon Trophy is Withheld by Executive When Belleville Defaults.

LINDSAY, Nov. 23.—An unsatisfactory condition of affairs has developed in connection with the newly-organized Intercollegiate Institute Football Union, comprising Lindsay, Peterborough, and Belleville.

The gridiron gladiators of the Lindsay school succeeded in defeating the Peterborough team in the round recently played. They were then drawn against Belleville, but the latter defaulted on short notice, Lindsay is, therefore, entitled to the D. M. Gordon Cup, but it is understood that the Union Executive declined to turn the trophy over to the winners owing to the failure of Lindsay and Belleville to play their round.

The Lindsay players have shelved their football armour for the season, but are determined to repeat their successes when the gridirons are chalked out next season.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

St. Luke: 14th Chap. 17th Verse:

Come for all things are now ready.

Jesus was at dinner at the home of a rich Pharisee on the Sabbath day and among the company was a man afflicted with the dropsy, Jesus healed him and let him go, the Pharisees murmered and Jesus asked them if it was lawful to heal on the Sabbath day but they held their peace, because they were ashamed, then he taught them a lesson on humility by parable, then he spoke the parable of the great supper, showing how the worldly minded men who contemn the word of God shall be shut out of Heaven. In this parable we see the free grace and mercy of God shining in the gospel of Christ, in Jesus and his gospel there is grace which will be food for the soul of man that is hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and for the soul of a sinner that knows its own necessities and miseries. Here is a general invitation given. He bade many, he invited the Jewish nation and people to accept the benefits of the gospel, there is room for all who will come when the spirit was poured out and the gospel church planted those who before were invited were more closely pressed to come in without delay; now all things are ready the full discovery of the gospel, mystory is now made; the Holy Ghost is now given; the call is now given to us: all things are now ready, now is the accepted time. It is now in this dispensation of grace that will soon be over, therefore accept the invitation and come without delay, the grace of God has appeared to all men, bringing salvation, yet men easly reject it, as those invited guests did; sinners when offered salvation put up excuses of all kinds, just as those mentioned did, in this parable they were all of the same mind, to put off and neglect Christ's kind invitation. Here were two that were purchasers, who were in great haste to see their purchases, they could not find time to go to the supper, their hearts were in the world, no room for Jesus and his love, they preferred the things of time, rather than those of eternity. It is hard when the things of the world bar us out of Heaven. We cannot serve two masters, God and mammon, we must make our choice now, we cannot be neutral. Here was one newly married, our affections to friends and relations often proves a hindrance of our duty to God. He might have gone to the supper and taken his newly wedded wife with him, they both would have been made welcome, the excuses of those who neglect the gospel will be their condemnation. The Master was angry, the ingratitude of those who slight the gospel offers, and put contempt upon the God of Heaven, will bring down the judgment of God, if not repented of, it is the wisest and best thing for young married people to do when starting out in life to take Christ into partnership with them, then they will have a pilot who will guide their bark to the harbour in safety. So said the Master to the servants into the streets and lanes, invite those that will be glad to come, bring in hither the poor and the maimed, the halt and the blind, those who are outside the church, the tables are spread for them, they are my guests, there is yet more room, bring in the publicans and the sinners, go outside the city on to the highways look under the hedges, visit the slums, pick up the vagrants do not leave them until you have prevailed with them to come in—the provision that has been made is ample for the salvation of every precious soul in the gospel of Christ and it shall appear not to have been made in vain, the very poor and low in the world, shall be as welcome to Christ as the rich and the great, God gives you a special invitation, you that labour under wordly disadvantages and bodily infirmities, invite them with reason and love, although a multitude, that no man can number have been brought into the Kingdom of God, yet there is room for more. The benefits and blessings of Christ's gospel are freely offered to all, none are excluded, but those that exclude themselves from Christ's House shall at last be filled. Men love their souls for worldly advantages and by gross sins perish, alas, that men should be so alive to their little worldly interests and yet so careless where eternal happiness or misery are at stake. May the Lord inspire us with zeal and love make us earnest and affectionate in calling those whom Jesus loves, with an undying affection to come to him now for all things are ready and say with the following lines:

I love the Lord because he first loved me,
Because his precious blood on Calvery poured,
That sinners lost, through him might ransomed be,
To live again for this I love the Lord.
I love the Lord for all his mercies sure,
For blessings that his love and grace afford,
For hope that cheers and strength that keeps me pure,
For peace from cares of earth I love the Lord.

Yours sincerely,

British Gold Store In Canadian Capital

New York, — It is learned here upon unimpeachable authority that the British Government has now on hand at Ottawa several hundred millions of dollars in gold which can be delivered in New York within 24 hours if the need for it arises.

What the exact amount of the gold holdings in the bankers would not state although they have been provided with the exact figures. At Ottawa the gold counts as part of the reserve of the Bank of England. How it reached there is a mystery though it is supposed that it was brought to Canada by battleships.

It was said that the gold was not transferred to the Canadian capital as a threat of what the United States might expect if foreign loans did not provide funds here as needed to pay the Allies' war bills, but as a necessary business precaution. At any moment that Great Britain finds herself unable to meet her obligations at New York through receipts from loans or sales of American securities the deficiency will be made up by gold shipments from Canada.

The $300,000,000 provided here recently through the sale of United Kingdom 5 1-2 per cent. notes, is reported to suffice for payments into December, but at the rate at which supplies are going forward they will not last to the end of the year. To keep up the supply of funds the sale to the banking institutions of British Exchequer 4 1-2 per cent. notes will shortly begin.

The first offering of these notes, new to American finance, may be ready at the close of next week, but is more likely to come in the first week in December. The initial issue will not be large, as financial operations for the Allies go, but it will be followed before long by other issues until the total reaches very substantial figures.

It was explained yesterday that it was the hope, both of the bankers here and of the British treasury authorities, that the Exchequer bills may become part of a continuing transaction. They will be issued for different maturities, ranging from 30 days up to six months, and as one issue is paid off it is expected that the proceeds will be reinvested in another. However, there will be on hand at all times enough gold at Ottawa, or cash in New York, to take up all of the obligations, so that they may be retired as they fall due if money is provided through long term bonds.

Leading financiers of the United States are seriously disturbed at the prospect of a resumption of the gold import movement. They say that it is proving difficult now to prevent inflation and that the receipt of a few hundred millions more, each dollar available for the creation of several dollars in additional credit, might lead to grave consequences when the war ends and Europe begins to call back gold. For this reason economists are urging the purchase of foreign securities which will serve as a bulwark when peace is restored.

COMBINED RESERVE FOR ALLIES URGED

Such an Army Could Force a Decision Where Needed, Says Italian Writer.

NOW NEEDED IN BALKANS.

Germany, He Says, Has Been Able to Gain Successes by This Means.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The advisability of creating what is termed "une armee de manoeuvre" by the combined Allies has been put forward by several writers in the Paris press. The idea was first exposed by Signor Luigi Campolonghi, Paris correspondent of the Secolo, and has met with favourable response from such a military critic as Lieut. Col. Rousset.

The suggestion is that the principal allied powers, France, Great Britain, Italy, and Russia, should constitute a reserve force to act independently of the different fronts, according as the supreme allied command thinks fit. It is pointed out that Russia, Italy, and Great Britain especially have large supplies of men and material, of which a part could be brought into play as an active factor in the struggle wherever the need was most felt. It is argued, for instance, that such a manoeuvring army, if it existed at present, would be of the greatest value in the Balkans in going to the support of the Rumanians.

It is said that, thanks to such an "armee de manoeuvre" Germany has been able to deal effective blows again and again, as latterly in the case of the Dobrudja and in Transylvania. The system has worked very smoothly with the Central Empires, where there exists a single supreme command, which draws on the resources of its allies, whether Austrian, Bulgar, or Turk, as military necessity dictates.

In the case of the Entente Powers, whenever a crisis arises, the process of constituting an expeditionary force—as in the case of the Salonika expedition—is to political and national expedinated to political and national exigencies.

The advantage of the new "manoeuvring army" would be its readiness to strike and move swiftly whenever required. Its composition would necessarily vary in accordance with the resources of the powers which contribute to its creation as regards men and material.

Signor Campolonghi points out that by the combined attack on the various fronts, the Allies are preventing the Germans from resorting to their favourite and so often successful tactics of shifting troops quickly from point to point. But it is not sufficient to hinder the enemy using this arm, says the writer; the Allies should use it in turn. The "manoeuvring army" which he advocates, could, in fact, be transported at will and would furnish the weapon for giving the finishing stroke wherever the already existing and increasing pressure of the allied fronts was wearing down the enemy.

It would of course not be necessary to transport the entire "armee de manoeuvre," which would be more in the nature of a common source on which to draw on. This plan, if adopted, would also have the advantage of equalising the sacrifices made by the various Allies for the common cause and would become essential if the lately advocated plan of a joint Supreme Council of War for the allied fronts be adopted.

C.M.B.A. PROPOSE TO ADMIT LADIES

C. J. Foy, K. C. New Grand Legal Adviser and Dr. Mugan Medical Adviser

KINGSTON, Nov. 22.—The meeting of the Trustees of the C.M.B.A., which terminated at the headquarters here, Tuesday, was featured by the appointment of two new officials, the determination to devise arrangements by which women will be admitted to membership in the Association, the giving of another opportunity to old members who withdrew from membership owing to the high rates, to renew their certificates, and the limiting of the office expenditure at Montreal to $800 a year.

Publicity Agent.

The Board also considered the appointment of a publicity agent, and made arrangements whereby the services of the Grand Deputies in each section will be available for the needs of the Association in advancing its interests. A new policy which would terminate at seventy years was also discussed. At the time of the regular annual valuation of policies, there will also be a valuation of the sick benefit section, and the necessary data will be secured in time for this work to be accomplished. Several other routine matters were up for discussion.

New Officials.

The new officials are Grand Legal Adviser C. J. Foy, K.C., of Perth, who succeeds George Lynch-Staunton K.C., of Hamilton, and Dr. P. J. Mugan of London, Ont., Grand Supervising Medical Examiner, who succeeds Dr. Edward Ryan who is at present overseas. These appointments were unanimous.

COLD STORAGE PLANTS FULL.

Chicago, Nov. 21. — Two hundred commission merchants, storage house managers and retail grocers are to be summoned as witnesses before the Federal grand jury, sworn in here yesterday, to fix the responsibility for the soaring food prices.

Department of Justice agents are expected to submit evidence showing that while merchants of this section complain of the shortage of food products, cold storage plants are so crowded that eastern shippers who recently attempted to enter the Chicago market with surplus food stocks, were told that there was no space to store their shipments.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

PETERBOROUGH HOCKEY PLAYERS ARE NOBLY DOING THEIR PART IN THE WAR

Gunner Jack Pethick, Second Local O.H.A. Player to Die For Empire—Three Local League Players Have Also Met Death at Front—Others Have Been Wounded—Mercantile League Player Has Won the D. C. M.—Veteran Trainers Are Also Overseas.

ARE IN ALL BRANCHES OF THE SERVICE

The death at the front of Gunner J. L. Pethick, the well-known Peterborough hockey player, the particulars of which are given elsewhere in this issue, brings home to the citizens of Peterborough that the hockey players of this city are doing their bit in the world struggle. He is the second Peterborough O. H. A. player to give his life for the Empire, the other being Lieut. Harold S. Matthews.

A host of local puck-chasers are now playing the bigger game at the front. Two have been killed and three or four others wounded.

Major Dick Watt, Lieut. Frank Bradburn, Pte. Hubert McBain, Bomb. Ed. Graham and Sapper Bill Crowley, are representatives overseas, of the players of a number of seasons ago. Among the teams of more recent years there is a fine showing. Of the intermediate squads of a couple of seasons ago—Jack Pethick has fallen at the front, Maurice Park is in the flying corps, "Skid" Janes is a driver with the 40th Battery, and Cyril Giroux is operating a machine gun in the Borden Armoured Battery. Among the Peterborough Junior O. H. A. players in Canada's fighting forces Lieut. Harold Matthews has given his life for the Empire, Sergt. Orme Cavanah has been wounded, and Sergt. Fred Denison has also been hit, while Pte. Walter Flowers, the goal-keeper of the juniors a couple of seasons back was shell-shocked at Zillebeke. Pte. Harold Morrow of the Juniors, is in France with the Canadian Veterinary Corps, and Sergt. Harold Knapman is with the Canadian Field Artillery. Stan. Wade, an old Junior player, went overseas with the 39th Battalion. Len. Dobson, another well-known Junior and Intermediate player, is at the front with the Canadian Engineers. Lieut. Angus Richardson of the 93rd Battalion, Driver Harold Meldrum of the Borden Armoured Battery, Capt. Masold Wallis, Canadian Infantry, and Flight Sub-Lieut. Norman Geale of the Royal Naval Air Service, were all members of the Collegiate Institute Junior O. H. A. team a few seasons ago.

All the members of the 93rd Intermediate O. H. A. team of last season are overseas with the exception of Montgomery, who was discharged last spring, while Claude Montgomery, goal-keeper of the Junior Electrics, is with the 39th Battalion, and Gunner W. B. Aitken, of the 69nd Battry, and Pte. Edgar Smythe of the Queen's Field Ambulance, who were with the Junior squad last year as spares, are both overseas.

Of the City, Mercantile and Church League teams there are numerous representatives at the front. Pte. J. H. Rogers of the 21st Battalion, who was a member of the Boston Exploits, was killed in action, Gunner Alex. Butcher, another Boston Exploit player, was wounded, and Pte. Geo. Butcher of the St. Luke's team, is a prisoner in Germany. Lieut. Barney Quinn of the 247th Battalion, home after many months in the trenches, was a member of the Y. M. C. A. City League team, as was Lieut. R. Stevenson, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. Other local league players overseas include, Bombardier Jack O'Dette and Bombardier Alf. Hagerman, of the 33rd Battery, and Pte. Nick Carter of the Engineers. Sergt. Dicky Boone, who was a member of the C. G. E. Test team in the Mercantile League, was killed in action as a member of the 4th Battery, while Sergt. MacDougall, a member of the same team and afterwards a member of the same battery, has won the Distinguished Conduct Medal at the front. Pte. Geo. Minorgan, killed at St. Julien, was a member of several Church and Mercantile League teams, while Pte. E. B. Boswell, also killed in the same battle, turned out with the Peterborough Intermediates a couple of seasons ago, and played goal for one game. Pte. Wm. Rew of the Brintons Mercantile League team, was wounded this summer. "Jiddy" Miller, who graduated from the local City League into the Peterborough Senior O. H. A. club, and thence into the N. H. A., went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. Gunner Bill Clarke, a Mercantile League player, was seriously wounded while serving with the 4th Battery. These are some of Peterborough's hockey player who heard the call of duty. The hockey trainers too are doing their bit. Ed. Dillon and Billy Breen, who have handled Peterborough hockey teams since the game was invented, are both overseas, the former with the 93rd, and the latter with the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion.

Quartermaster-Sergt. Sam Thomas, who used to train the Strathconas, has been at the front for many months. So has Driver Mart Kenneally, of the Army Service Corps, who until 1915, was the mascot of all Peterborough Hockey clubs.

Peterborough hockey players are in every branche of the service, holding the trenches with the infantry, manning the guns, operating trench mortars, working in the famous "tanks," carrying out bombing raids, driving Army Service Corps trucks, in the Flying Corps, even in the Navy, where Peterborough hockey is represented by Vince Corkery, a Bank League graduate. Some are officers and some are privates, but all of them nobly playing the big game overseas, and probably playing it a little better because of the training they have had in the grand old game of hockey.

published a few weeks ago in the Whig were supplied by Lieut.-Col. Mulloy, who secured them in Ottawa at the first recruiting conference there some months ago.

Premier Borden, on New Year's day asked for 500,000 men from the Dominion of Canada. That works out as thirteen per cent. of the Dominion's population of 3,821,007 males, which is the figure of the last Dominion census. There were 230,000 males in this military district at the same time. Thirteen per cent of that number makes this district's total 29,250.

Less than 1,000 men must come forward before that number will be reached here, but it is variously estimated that between 3,000 and 5,000 men have left this district to enlist in units in Toronto, Montreal, and other centres outside.

This subject has aroused a great amount of interest and more accurate figures are needed, but there seems to be no way of securing them until the national registration is taken during this winter.

Word has been received from "Mac" Wright, formerly of the Bank of Montreal staff in this city, that he has been sent with a draft to Salonika.

Driver Harold J. Devey writes from Somewhere in France, Oct. 31: I received a letter from Mrs. Manson Comstock, stating that she was sending me a parcel of socks from the 18th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire for distribution to the Peterborough boys around, and am expecting them any time now. That sure was bad news of Billy Morris. Art did not know about it when I saw him last, but they had some talk together about the end of August. I never dreamed he would be killed. By the way I met Orm Cavanah the other day. He is with the 16th C.F.A., and has had six months at the guns. He has been in hospital with a bad face from a shell burst, and says he is a lot better than he was. Vic Thorndyke yelled at me the other day from the back of a motor lorry. I've seen quite a bunch of the boys from home lately, Bill Hardill, O'Toole and Asa White from Lakefield was in one day to see Phil Patrick. That "Sterno" heater is just great, after a wet cold spell. Toronto for Christmas, eh! Well I'll be there for Christmas, but 1917 I guess. I'm not worrying much, believe me. It's only a matter of time now till I'm home again. Everything is going on fine around here. The sun is shining as it should do to-day.

Mrs. H. W. Nicoll, 320 Maitland Avenue, whose brother, Pte. B. M. Lillie of the 70th Battalion, C.E.F., and formerly of Norwood was wounded a short time ago, has received the following letter from Major J. C. Davidson:

Ontario Military Hospital,
Orpington, Kent, England.
November 7, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Nicoll,—To-day, while going through Ward 4, I happened to come across your brother, Pte. B. M. Lillie, who arrived here a few days ago. We were both delighted to meet, knowing Norwood and Peterborough. He was, you know, wounded on Oct. 6th, and has been in two or three hospitals. He has a very small wound on his cheek, which will soon be well. That on the head (side of the forehead) was the worst, but is quite healed now. He had paralysis on the right side from the head wound, but is steadily getting better and can move his hand well. He is bright and cheerful.

You have no cause for worry. He will not probably be sent back, certainly not for a long time, to the front.

There is also another Peterborough boy here, Lightheart, 221 Rink street, and I must get them to meet.

This is a very large and splendid hospital with twenty wards and 1,100 beds. It is a bright, cheerful place, with a home-like atmosphere.

Your brother could not be in a better place. With friendly greetings,

Faithfully yours,
J. C. Davidson,
Chaplain.

Rector St. John's, Peterborough.

Although the 93rd Battalion Band has not yet reached home, at least one member of it is here, in the person of Pte. J. Blaker, the Indian trombone player of the band, who has been sent home to Canada for treatment on account of an ailment of the eyes. Pte. Blaker will undergo treatment at Kingston and hopes to recover in time to rejoin the band when it arrives home.

C. G. E. Gives Wage Bonus

Has Arranged to Compensate Its Employees For Loss They Experienced When Wages Were Reduced Following Outbreak of War

LOYALTY IS REWARDED

The Canadian General Electric Co. has just arranged to compensate its employes for the loss they experienced when wages were reduced following the outbreak of the war— an action that is not unlikely to influence many other concerns who were similarly forced to reduce wages. Mr. Frederic Nicholls, the president of the company, has written the following circular letter to the members of the staff of the Canadian General Electric Company, Limited:

"Immediately after the outbreak of the war all branches of business suffered so materially that your executive were confronted with two alternatives, either to discharge a large proportion of the staff or to retain as many as possible in the employment of the company, the staff themselves co-operating by accepting a reduction of 20 per cent. on their salaries until such time as conditions improved.

"After the lapse of twelve months, conditions having slightly improved, 10 per cent. of the 20 per cent. reduced salaries was reinstated and the remaining 10 per cent. four months later.

"Since that date the company has experienced the benefit of improved business, and with a view to recognizing the loyalty of the staff it has been decided to make up this loss to those still in the employ of the company by the payment of a bonus equal to the total amount deducted during the time the deduction was in force, and cheques therefore will be issued as promptly as possible.

"The sum involved is about one hundred and thirty thousand dollars ($130,000.00) and I am sure the staff will appreciate the action of the directors in adopting this policy.

Overland in First Position at Show

The Willys-Overland Company, of Toledo and Toronto, has for the fourth consecutive year been awarded the position of honour at the New York and Chicago automobile shows, in January, by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

The space allotments at these shows are based on the volume of business handled by the exhibitors, which includes all but one of the prominent companies in the United States, and the Overland Company has sold more cars than its competitors.

BOWLING

The Grocers and Left Overs will meet to-night in a City Bowling League game at the Water Street alleys. The Left Overs will line up as follows: W. D. Thompson, Joe. Hughes, A. Ross, N. Boutley, J. J. Solomon.

W. D. Bishop is high man for this week's prize, rolling a score of 208, 231, 180, a total of 617.

The De Laval and C. G. E. teams meet to-morrow night.

By the use of stork pens, into which bones and "waste" meat and vegetables are placed, at the huge camps in France, our soldiers are ensured a constant supply of hot soup every night.

Brittanic Case Is Another For The U. S.

WASHINGTON, November 23.—The destruction of the great British hospital ship Britannic seriously threatened to-day to enter into the tangle of submarine complications between the United States and Germany. The reported presence of American torpedoes aboard the vessel made the case one for serious reflection and possibly serious action.

LONDON, November 23.—The Roumanian official statement, issued today, after two days' silence at Bucharest, in the face of sweeping German claims of "bottling up" the Roumanian army, served to increase the hope here that the forces of the Balkan kingdom in Jiul Valley at least had ducked from under the encircling arms of General von Falkenhayn's advance.

LONDON, November 23.—A special despatch from Baku, Asiatic Russia, via Petrograd, declares the Turks have massacred between five thousand and six thousand Armenians at Sivas, Turkey.

Archdeaconry Conference Has Been Concluded

Scholarly Papers Were Given at Yesterday's Sessions in St. John's

Yesterday the closing day of the Archidiaconal Conference at St. John's was one of great interest. The day was begun by Matins at 9:30, the service conducted by the Rev. Chas. Carpenter and the Rev. T. McKim. The Conference opened at 10 a.m., when two papers of great interest were read. The Doctrine of Redemption by Rev. T. A. Hind. Discussion led by Rev. N. H. Noble and "Can our Clergy do anything regarding Public Schools" by the Rev. F. J. Sawers—Discussion led by Rev. T. McKim. Luncheon was held at 1 p.m. by the ladies of St. Luke's.

At 2:30 the Conference reopened with a paper read by Rev. E. W. Pickford, entitled "A clear statement of difficulties to be overcome before church union"—Discussion led by H. G. Kingstone. The paper by Rev. T. A. Hind, on the Doctrine of Redemption was very comprehensive and helpful, showing clear thought and a deep insight. The Conference was concluded by a general summing up of all the papers read by the Ven. Archdeacon Warren.

BENCH AND BAR PAY TRIBUTE TO LATE CHANCELLOR

At the opening of the local sessions of the Supreme Court this afternoon the presiding judge, Hon. Mr. Justice Kelly, paused for a few moments to refer to the death of Chancellor Sir John Boyd, in Toronto, this morning. Both the bench and the bar joined in an expression of regret upon the passing of the "Dean of the judiciary of this Province." His Honour Judge Hoyeke joined Mr. Justice Kelly on the bench, and assembled in Court were the following members of the local bar: Messrs. D. W. Dumble, E. A. Peck, G. N. Gordon, B. D. Hall, V. J. McElderry, E. L. Goodwill, F. D. Kerr, Jos. Wearing, J. F. Strickland, Geo. Sherry and Mr. J. A. Macintosh of Toronto, and Messrs. W. F. Nickle, K. C., and Mr. J. H. Farrell of Kingston. No lawyer who has known the late Chancellor Sir John Boyd, needs be told what his death means to the administration of justice in this Province.

Mr. Justice Kelly said:

Born in 1837, he was elevated to the bench in 1881, which he relinquished only in death. A generation of lawyers has passed away during those years. He brought down to our time the best traditions of that body of men who conducted the law courts in the early days of this Province. His great desire was that he might be privileged to continue and work to the end. And his wish seems to have been granted. Only last week he was at his work as cheerfully and efficiently as usual. He refused the privilege of retiring from the bench some years ago. It is not necessary to say how great is the loss the legal profession and the public at large have sustained in the death of Sir John Boyd.

Quantity of Meat Was Confiscated

Case Will Be Dealt With in Police Court

This morning, Sanitary Inspector Cooper, accompanied by Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, made a seizure of meat in East City. The seizure was made on the information of a farmer in Villiers, who telephoned the Inspector to the effect that an animal said to be suffering from tuberculosis had been disposed of to a Peterborough butcher. An expert examination will be made of the beef and the report submitted to the Police Magistrate who will deal with the case.

HOCKEY

The Kingston Standard says: The local enthusiasts are hoping that Kingston will be grouped with Belleville, Port Hope and Peterborough, as they think that such a series would create unlimited interest and go a long way towards bringing the sport back to the position it formerly occupied here.

North Monaghan Council Meeting

At a meeting of the North Monaghan Council in Mr. W. H. Bradburn's office on Monday, all members were present and Reeve McIntosh presided. Minutes of two previous meetings were read and confirmed.

Applications for the position of tax collector were received from W. B. Anderson, $175; J. H. Forster, $150; Norman Moncrief $125. On motion of Messrs. Robson and Dobbin, Norman Moncrief was appointed.

The Clerk was authorized to instruct the township solicitor to collect the sum of $10, being a license fee due from the Agricultural Society since 1914, together with costs.

The following bills presented for payment were ordered to be paid on motion of Messrs. Robson and Rye:

Jas. O'Keefe, pay sheet Park street bridge, $87.67; Jas. O'Keefe, sdne, $68.39; McDonald Estate, lumber, $4.52; Dr. E. E. Harvey, services charity, $7.75; McDonald Estate, lumber, $2.40, $26.25, $5.76; Herbert Dolz, burying horses, $5.50; Peterborough Hardware Co., 20 bbls. cement, $33.00; Kingan Hardware Co., $3.60.

On motion of Messrs. Bell and Rye, Messrs. Robson and Rye were appointed a committee to meet a committee from Cavan township re the Cavan boundary at Long Swamp, concession 13, Cavan, concession 12, Monaghan.

FARMER'S HORSE IS KILLED ON SIMCOE ST.

Mr. A. A. Preston, of North Monaghan, residing on the Gravel Road, lost a valuable horse this morning in a runaway on Simcoe street when it crashed into an oil tank belonging to the gas company at the east end of the street. Mr. Preston was unloading grain at the Peterborough Cereal Co. mill when the team took fright at something and broke away. The tank was on part of the roadway.

"DOING HIS BIT"

I am twenty-three, unmarried, free;
And physically fit;
And for my King and Country, too,
Am doing, sure, my bit.

Like galley slave, I toil at shells,
Ten weary hours each day,
Without either thanks, or glory,
Though, of course, it's not bad pay.

Through rain, or snow, to work I go
On bicycle or car;
My only comfort, in the cold,
A pipe, or good cigar.

I am sure I merit just as well
A brilliant D. S. O.,
As those grand heroes who enlist
Just for the pomp and show.

Then every day, some crank will say,
Why don't you volunteer,
And leave to women folk and boys
The soft snap, you have here?

They'll talk about conscription, too;
Hint that I'll lose my "slit."
But conscription's for the slackers,
Who refuse to do their bit.

The girls, bless'e the soldier boys
Who fight beyond the sea;
But they haven't even one pleasant word,
Or smile, these times, for me.

I'm as loyal as the best of them;
But will not rashly stake
My life and limb, when if I did,
My mother's heart would break.

For, so tender is her loving soul,
That far rather would she see
Some other fellow go and fight,
And die, than part with me.

O, this wretched talk, and toil to stand,
Requires a lot of grit,
But, while the pay is six dollars a day,
I'll try to do my bit.

Jack Canuck.

A SAFE TRIP.

Colonel Roosevelt's determination to round out his long and interesting career with a sojourn in the Fiji Islands will surprise no one familiar with his many previous activities.

The Islanders have no terrors for him. Accustomed as they are to a diet of plump evangelists, they will turn with indifference from a haunch whose every muscle has been toughened by years of fierce struggle in the arena of American politics. Not even at a table d'hote in the Fiji Bohemian quarter could such a toothtrying dish as roast Police Commissioner be served with impunity.

It is quite possible, too, that Colonel Roosevelt's well-known views on the subject of race suicide have long since won for him the esteem of a nation that regards a babe in the house as a wellspring of gustatory joys—a nation that loves infants tenderly, the tenderer the bones

Legal Committee Demands Less Accidents From City Neglect

City Engineer Parsons and Street Commissioners Evans and Fitzgerald appeared before the Legal Committee last night, Ald. Doblin, as chairman acting as inquisitor in a little conference on the subject of preventing accidents for which the city subsequently pays damages. The members of the Council feel that there should be more carefulness exercised by the city's employees; in other words, that they should take a page from Chief Howard's book of fire prevention ideas.

Ald. Stratton moved, seconded by Ald. Edgar, that the Utilities Commission be requested to place stop-cock boxes inside or outside the sidewalk when they are moving them, in future; and where possible, moved easily from the sidewalk.

Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Duncan, that Chief Thompson be asked to inform the City Engineer and City Solicitor immediately upon receipt of information regarding an accident.

Mayor Duffus moved, seconded by Ald. Stratton, that the City Engineer present a report of dangerous places with a recommendation as to how the danger may be removed.

MOST UNUSUAL BRIGHT SATEEN AND FINE SILKOLINE PETTICOATS ALMOST ANY SHADE 98c

Unusual from many standpoints: unusual because an unusual good quality of material has been used in the making: because the petticoats are made unusually well and because 98c is an unusually low price for a petticoat of this nature. A moment's inspection by any woman who needs a petticoat will induce her to buy several.

A Special Display of Flannelette Night Robes at 98c

Any woman who has slept in a soft, fleecy, well-made flannel night robe, has come to realize the comfort and warmth of these practical garments. These night robes at 98c are made from a good quality of soft white material daintily trimmed.

Trimmed Hats Greatly Reduced, Priced $1.98 to $3.50 Reduced From $3.50 to $8.00

Unquestionably the lowest priced desirable trimmed hats that have been offered this season. In many cases the prices are less than the value of the trimming or shape.

Our millinery department is being crowded for the display of other merchandise. The variety of shapes is broad enough to meet any woman's preference.

Another Lot of New Style Separate Skirts

The popular demand for separate skirts continues and is it any wonder, when so many attractive, smart designs are being shown? Materials vary from plain serge to beautiful silks. Prices range from

Stockings

Are getting Scarcer and will soon be at a high premium.

In the meantime we have a full and complete stock, how long they will last we cannot tell. We thought that we had enough to last for about two years, but at the way they are going the end will be soon, and then prices will have to take a vaulting jump, for in many cases we are now selling stockings and underwear at much lower prices than we can get them for in thousand lots. We have at present a full stock of warm, all wool worsted stockings, soft cashmere hose of good quality. For your own sakes do not delay attending to your hose and underwear wants.

Forty-five millions of men are wearing out clothing and are not producing anything. Think this over!

Driver Manley Was Killed By Shell Fire

His Parents Receive Particulars in a Letter From His Officers

Mrs. J. D. Manley has received the following letter in regard to the death of her son.

Headquarters,
1st Canadian Artillery Brigade,
B. E. F.
November 5th.

Dear Mrs. Manley, — Though you will receive official notice ere this letter reaches you, of the death of your son, Driver C. W. Manley, of the 4th Battery, yet I thought that you might like to have such particulars as I can give.

Your boy was killed instantly by shell fire on the afternoon of November 4th, while on duty at the guns. The wound was in the head and so there was no pain. We buried him in a quiet spot near to where he fell, after nightfall. Most of the officers and men attended the funeral. The grave has been nicely attended to, and a cross will be erected in a day or two. Such personal effects as he had (they were very few, indeed) have been through the usual channel and should reach you in due course. Other officers who are writing will tell you far better than I can, how well your son did his duty as an efficient soldier. Though this must be a sad blow to you, yet please remember that your boy has given his life for a high ideal, the cause of right, and in the hour of his country's need. Our Heavenly Father is not unmindful of such sacrifice which touches on "the greater love" so highly commended by our Lord.

Please be assured of our deepest sympathy.

J. Shives.

Good Team For 247th Battalion

The 247th Battalion will be on the map this winter with a good hockey team from present indication. The club is to be organised at once. A number of good players are already members of the battalion and others are expected to join in a short time so that the soldier boys will have an outfit that will give the fans a good brand of Intermediate O.H.A. hockey.

OBITUARY

MARY E. McGURN

This morning Miss Mary E. McGurn, daughter of the late John McGurn passed away, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Denis Donohue, 33 Sophia street, after a brief illness. Miss McGurn who was seventy nine years of age was born at Marysville where she resided before coming to Peterborough six years ago.

Funeral announcement later.

MRS. J. O'KEEFE.

The death occurred this morning at 6 o'clock of Mrs. John O'Keefe, formerly of Lindsay, who passed away at the home of her sister-in-law, Mrs. John McEwtee, 641 Reid Street. The deceased had been a resident of Peterborough for two years. She is survived by one brother, Thos. McEntee, in Dayton, Ohio.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at 6.30 o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral, and thence to the 8.30 train for Lindsay, where interment will take place.

JAS. MELVILLE CAMPBELL.

The death occurred on Friday, Nov. 22 of Jas. Melville Campbell, one of Peterborough's most esteemed and respected citizens. Mr. Campbell, who was 62 years of age, was the son of the late Mr. Jas. Campbell, and was a life-long resident of Peterborough. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, formerly Miss Ida McIntyre, three sisters, Mrs. Garrett of Tweed, Miss Hattie of Toronto, and Miss Kate of Peterborough, and one brother, Mr. Thomas Campbell. The funeral will be held from the family residence, 265 Charlotte street, on Friday, Nov. 24 at 2.15 p.m. and will proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

Mr. Campbell had been for fourteen years mechanical superintendent for Messrs. Turner & Sons.

The funeral will be under the auspices of the Peterborough Order of Foresters.

Ecclesiastical Discrimination.

The Mayor of a tough borden town is about to engage a preacher for the new church.

"Parson, you aren't by any chance a Baptist, are you?"

"Why, no, not necessarily. Why?"

"Well, I was just again' to say we have to haul our water twelve miles."

PRICES HIGH BECAUSE SUPPLIES ARE SCARCE SAYS FARMER'S SUN

While High Prices May Be Realized in Many Lines the Reason is Not Hard to Seek—This Has Been One of the Most Disastrous Years on Record

(Farmer's Sun.)

Fall Wheat the best cereal;
Spring wheat was light;
Barley and Oats below average;
Peas a poor crop;
New fall wheat late, small top, just four-fifths of a crop;
Shelled corn suffered most;
Beans had a poor season;
Potatoes less than half an average crop;
Roots late and small.
Pastures poor;
Cattle thin;
Turkeys scarce; and
Apples rather poor.

The above just about summarizes the situation so far as Ontario's crops are concerned this year, as shown by the latest crop report, which verifies previous ones. The report runs as follows:

Fall Wheat.—The quality of fall wheat, while not up to the Ontario standard, is nearer the mark than any of the other cereals except rye. The yield is practically an average one. The straw is of good length and quality, and the crop was well harvested.

Spring Wheat.—Reports concerning spring wheat are not so favorable as those received in August, complaints being made as to the light weight of the grain. The crop is not now a popular one in this province.

Barley. — The crop is below the average in yield per acre and some of the grain is reported to be light in weight, although as a rule it is of good color.

Oats.—There has been an unusually small yield per acre of oats, and much of it measures very light to the bushel. Some rust is complained of. Much of the crop was harvested very late but the weather was favorable.

Rye. — Comparatively little rye is now grown for grain—chiefly for soiling. On the whole it has been a good crop, both as to yield and quality.

Peas.—The dry, hot weather prevailing during the summer, especially at the time of filling, told against the crop, which is generally described as a poor one. Complaints are also made of the peas splitting at threshing. Very little injury is reported from the weevil.

The New Fall Wheat.—Owing to the drought in August most of the new fall wheat was put in later than usual. The seed bed in most instances was very dry and hard, and in many instances germination was slow and uneven. Owing to so much late sowing the young fall wheat fields have not so large a top as usual, although late rains have brought the crop forward more encouragingly. On account of the late harvest and the rush of farm work generally, because of the lack of labor, the acreage sown is about one-fifth less than that of the 1915 crop. Very little injury was reported from the Hessian fly or other insects.

Corn.—The corn crop is the first poor one for many years. Planting was much delayed owing to the rainy weather, and a long period of drouth and intense heat followed. As a consequence the general yield is a light one, there are more nubbins than usual and first class seed corn is likely to be scarce. Although the silage varieties have done better than those grown for husking, many silos will be only partly filled this fall. Some corn was nipped by the frost but the bulk of it was got in uninjured.

Tobacco.—Some tobacco was caught by frost, owing to planting being delayed by rains. The bulk of the plants, however, escaped uninjured, and the crop is said to be promising both as to yield and general conditions.

Beans.—This crop experienced a rather poor season. While wet ground made planting late the weather turned very hot and dry at the period of filling and some of the pods did not fully mature. A portion of the crop was also caught by the frost. The harvesting season, however, was favorable.

Buckwheat.—Buckwheat did not do so well as usual. Like other crops it had a late start owing to rainy weather, and much of it was caught by the frost before cutting. The great heat and drouth at the time of blossoming also kept the grain from filling in the best conditions. The yield is variously described as from one half to fair.

Potatoes.—The season was too dry for potatoes. The average yield is a comparatively light one, and the size of the tubers is below the standard, although of good quality. In some localities there will not be enough potatoes for general use. The crop was stored under favorable conditions.

Turnips.—This crop is generally described as being late, and small as to both yield and size. The drouth of July and August hindered growth, and complaints were also received of injury from aphis or louse. About half the crop had been harvested by the first of November, but as the weather then was open, a good portion of the remaining crop was left in the ground for further growth.

Mangels.—Mangels may be characterised as light in yield, small in size, but sound and of fair quality. Like the other roots, they suffered considerably from the drouth.

Carrots.—Field carrots are not now much grown. They also suffered from the drouth and are described as being from fair to good.

Sugar Beets.—This crop is no exception to the comparatively poor showing of roots. They are small in size and light in yield as a rule, although some more favorable reports have been received.

Clover Seed.—The season has been a relatively good one for clover seed. The fields kept for seed were, as a rule, well headed, although the plants were rather short in stand. In too many instances, however, clover fields set by for seed had to be pastured owing to the scarcity of fodder. The midge was complained of in only a few localities.

Pastures and Live Stock.—Fall pastures have been rather thin owing to the prolonged summer drouth. Cattle as a rule are rather thin but are healthy. Owing to the price of beef, and the scarcity and dearness of feed, a large number of cattle have been sold in an unfinished state, and too many calves have been vealed. Some old, dry cows, however, have been sold as canners at three and four cents a pound. Sheep are doing well, and are in strong demand. They have been finished chiefly on rape while ordinary pastures were practically bare. High prices for pork, and the scarcity of feed have tempted some of the farmers to part with more sows than is prudent, and to turn off two many animals under weight. The prospects are that there will be a scarcity of all classes of live stock by the spring. Considerable progress has been made in silo building.

Dairying.—Dairying has flourished this season, prices for butter and cheese having reached record heights. Advocates of each of these branches claim pre-eminence in favor. Where in operation the milk condenseries also have been pressing both cheese and butter factories for popularity, while some correspondents boldly aver that sending milk and cream to the cities pays best of all. The flow of milk in the fall was hardly as free as usual but the high prices offered fro

THE STORY OF REGINA TRENCH AND HOW THE CANADIANS WENT OVER

Graphic Description of the Preparations and Launching of Big Attack—Had Orders Two Days Ahead—Work of Artillery Was Magnificent.

A Canadian officer in France, writing to a friend in Toronto under date of November 2, tells as follows of his experience on the famous Regina trench engagements:

At 9 in the morning the O.C. had his orders, and an hour later we were bunched about him in his dug-out, listening as he unfolded to us the plan for the attack two days later. There was the colonel in his sweater coat, sucking on a dead issue cigarette, the senior major sitting on a petrol can on the floor, the adjutant trying to brighten up the fire with the O.C.'s stick and keep an ear in the conversation at the same time, the four company commanders, the medical officer (filling the little room with smoke from his execrable pipe), the scout officer, signalling officer, machine gun officer, and myself.

The O. C. had his maps laid out on an improvised table before him, and many reams of orders tucked under his arm.

"We relieve the —st Battalion tonight," he commenced. "Gimme a match, Mike," he interrupted himself, and was silently accommodated with a vesta. The colonel refit his stub of cigarette and resumed.

"To-morrow we get the lay of the land, and the next morning some time we 'hop over.'" He straightened his map out, selected some papers from the bundle, and slowly, carefully, and clearly outlined the duties of everybody in the coming action.

For the next two hours we studied the maps and got our tasks firmly down in our minds, while the colonel dealt with us, one by one, giving us our personal orders.

II.

Three o'clock in the afternoon saw us starting off in small groups, moving slowly, and well loaded down. Just at dusk we headed off the shell-battered road and dropped into a communication trench, which led us, by a tortuous route, through the ragged fields where a few weeks before our steadily moving waves rolled over the poor resistance put up by the Boche. Another hour and my guide stopped. "Here we are, sir."

A tall figure loomed up out of the darkness. "Ah! D—, glad to see you," it said, and I felt then that whoever "it" was that "it" meant it. "My name's Gray—bombing officer." He led me along the trench to where he had improvised his headquarters, a half-smashed-in German dug-out. He lit a candle, supplied me with a cigarette and then drew a little rough map of the front he was looking after. My sergeant in the meantime was conducting the relief outside, and occasionally we could hear odd bits of conversation from the men.

My batman was getting 'the dope' from Gray's man, and I suppose at the same time our O. C. and the colonel of the relieved regiment were swapping news.

"Relief's complete, sir," came voice from the top of the stairs.

"Good," answered Gray. 'Take the men along to the communication trench and I'll be along in a minute or two, sergeant."

He then slung on his water bottle, haversack, and binoculars, wished me all the good luck in the world, gripped my hand, and was gone. He left me, by the way, three tins of beans, a tin of Macconochie's, half a bottle of beef tea extract, and a tin of jam—a mighty nice gift, too.

The night passed as nights do in the trenches, slowly, like a lame horse walking down a long street. My men got themselves settled in the irregular funk holes that previous occupants had dug, pulled their great coats and rubber sheets closely around them and waited for morning.

III.

Just about five o'clock my sergeant, who was watching the grey start to take the place of black night over the parapet, thought he saw a figure crawling slowly over the ground, about forty yards in front. "Our patrols are in," he mused to himself. "That must be some poor, lost Boche," he decided, and, accordingly reached for his rifle, lying beside him on the parapet. He took a long, careful aim, and even had the first pull on his trigger, so he told me afterward, when the thing struck him suddenly as being too brutal, and he lowered his rifle again.

The Boche, for the sergeant could plainly see his outline now, was creeping steadily toward the trench. The sergeant passed the word down both ways for sentries not to fire on the figure out in front.

The creeping object had the sergeant sore puzzled, and he waited until the man was only a few yards away before he challenged. Immediately the man stood up, flung both arms high above his head, and cried: "Mercy, kameread — mercy, mercy, kameread," and flung himself prostrate on the ground, where he lay quite still.

Hearing the sergeant's challenge I had hurried down the trench, and arrived just as the poor Boche was being carried in. The poor fellow was quite unconscious, probably from fright. We poured him out a big tot of rum; which revived him a great deal, and he then started giving us his story.

He had been out on patrol three nights previous, and two of their number had been hit by our machine gun fire. The officer in charge of the patrol then hurried back to his own trench, leaving the poor devil and

Wheat Markets Continue Strong

Flour Advanced Thirty Cents—The Cattle Market—Hogs Firm

Manitoba flours were advanced 30c yesterday, thus going 10c higher than the last previous high before the 20c decline of a few days ago. The present advance follows upon Wednesday's strong Winnipeg wheat market, though the wheat markets had a slightly weaker tone yesterday, Chicago going off 2 1-4c on the December option. Winnipeg November was 3-8c lower than Wednesday and December 1-4c higher. Argentine reports are still bullish, but some talk of a possible embargo from Washington on United States exports of foodstuffs tended to depress their markets.

If Your Hair Is Coming Out Read This

Thousands of people suffer from baldness and falling hair who, have tried nearly every advertised hair-tonic and hair-grower without results, have removed themselves to baldness and its attendant discomfort. Yet their case is not hopeless; the following simple home prescription has made hair grow after years of baldness, and is also unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color, stopping hair from falling out and destroying the dandruff germ. It will not make the hair greasy, and can be put up by any druggist; bay rum, 6 ounces; Lavena de Composee, 2 ounces; Menthol Crystals, one-half drachm. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. This preparation is highly recommended by Physicians and specialists and is absolutely harmless, as it contains none of the poisonous wood alcohol so frequently found in hair tonics. Ladies should be careful not to apply to face or where hair is not desired.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

When a half hour later Ham Burton was alone with the stranger he found himself asking and answering many questions. He had not meant to impart his secret of discontent, but just as Mary had confided her troubles at the roadside, so Ham told his as he sat on the edge of the bed in the chilly attic-room of the farmhouse. Perhaps it was because this man had actually seen the things that existed beyond the skyline and had walked through the veil of mystery, which the boy himself so burned to penetrate. At all events it transpired. Ham had shown his little store of greedily conned books and had bared to the gaze of the other his naked and scorching torture of ambition. The lad knew something of the men who had made themselves masters of the world and wished to know more. Edwardes had not even laughed when Ham declared with naive conviction: "None of them men ever did anything I couldn't do, if I got the chance." It was impossible to laugh, though listening to such boundless egotism, in the face of so deep a sincerity and such an implicit self-belief as shone from those young eyes.

"Sometimes the great man knows his greatness in advance," said the visitor gravely. "Sometimes it surprises himself. But most of the mightiest made their own chance."

"I know that. I'm goin' to make mine. Power is what I want an' it's what I'm going to have. But I've got to get away from here. Julius Cæsar couldn't do nothin' here."

When Jefferson Edwardes came down stairs Mary, who had slipped timidly away, edged into her room, bashful and adorned. She had put on her best dress, and her lustrous hair was braided and coiled on her head, after the instruction of one of her fashion plates. As the visitor saw her he once more checked his inclination to laugh, for the marvellous mismated eyes were fixed on his face and they held an almost passionate anxiety to be approved by the man who had prophesied her beauty. The thin child with her hair so inappropriately dressed in the style of her fashionable elders—or what she fondly believed to be their style—would have been a ludicrous little figure had she not been, in her eagerness, too serious for humor. The one detail in which she thought she could follow the dictates of Fashion's decree, was this arrangement of her hair, and that she had attempted. Now she stood first on one foot and then on the other watching in suspense to see if she had succeeded.

So the stranger slipped over unobserved and with a courtier's smile raised a tiny hand to his lips.

"I am a good prophet," he assured her, and now he let the suppressed merriment dance at will in his pupils—"but don't forget that a queen's queenliness necessity is—kindness."

And so, while Mrs. Burton and the elderly aunt busied themselves over the stove and the father napped restlessly, the sleeping thing that had not heretofore given warning, was ripening for its outburst.

When the evening meal was finished and the family sat listening to the stranger's talk, Thomas Burton suddenly demanded: "Are they still quittin' over your way?"

Young Edwardes nodded.

"Except for one or two shiftless fellows like myself," he responded, "my immediate section is deserted. A half dozen families moved out this fall. The general verdict seems to be that the fight's not worth while."

Tom Burton growled deeply. "The country mayn't be much," he grudgingly admitted, "but how are these fellows who are leavin' all that they own behind 'em expect to better themselves? Ain't a few rocky acres better than none at all? That's what I asks 'em and they aint' got no answer to give me. Ain't a little bit better than nothin' whatsoever?"

The visitor did not reply immediately. He seemed to be reflecting, and when his answer came, Ham straightened himself in his seat and sat rigid as if struggling to fix a seat on his own line and remain a silent listener.

"Perhaps so, and perhaps not," suggested Edwardes, "The open sea does not offer much prospect in a storm but it may be better than a sinking ship."

Tom Burton's eyes lighted with the same stubborn glint that had given his Pilgrim forefathers kinship with the granite of their shores.

"My ancestors have lived here since they ran the Indians out," he said quietly. "They're buried here, an' they fought for this country an' won it. I guess what they bled for is worth holdin'."

"Your forefathers fought for the whole land, not only this section of it," suggested Edwardes quite mildly. "Right here the acres are stony and unproductive. You can't hope to compete with the farmer whose crops grow near the arteries of transportation."

"All we need is roads—an' aqueducts—an' some day they'll come."

"Perhaps," admitted the younger man. "The question is how many can hold out till then?"

Tom Burton looked up for an instant and his eyes blazed. "Well, for one, I can! By God, I don't mean to be run away from my home by a panicky notion of hard times. I can stay here an' fight to a finish—an' when I am licked, my boys can go on fightin'."

His eldest son rose and paced the floor with the restlessness of a caged leopard. At the black window he halted to gaze out on the bitterness of the night. The ultimatum of his father's obstinacy galled him beyond endurance. He heard himself pledged to the emptiness and the futility of a life sentence which he loathed; from which he was seeking escape and his soul clamoured to rise in its vehement repudiation. Yet he felt that just now his heart was in too hot a conflagration to make speech safe. If he spoke as the moment he must speak in violent passion and bitter denunciation, and so with his hands tently clutched at his back he held his counsel and paced the floor. Old Tom Burton's unaccustomed hours in the confinement of convalescence had left him petulant. The courtesy of the stranger's argument was lost upon him. All he saw was that it was argument and that he was in a condition to be irritated by little things.

For a while he watched the restless wanderings of the son from window to stove and from stove back to window, then his voice spoke out sharply in dictatorial provocation.

"What ails you, boy?" he demanded. "Have you got St. Vitus' dance? Sit down an' quit frettin' people with your eternal trampin' about."

Even then, though his face was white with suppressed feeling, Ham held hard to the curb of silence, and took a chair, apart, where he sat rigid.

"It's them that sticks to their guns that wins out," declared the bearded man, looking around if if challenging contradiction, and when none came, frowning on in silence. Then suddenly his eyes fell on the figure of little Mary, who sat behind the table with her thin face resting in her hands and her eyes burning with thoughts of that great wonder-world which their visitor knew so well. His presence in the room seemed to the child to bring its marvels almost within touch. For the first time the father recognized the ludicrous massing of coils on the top of the little head instead of the simple braids that should be falling over her shoulders, and in his mood of irritation, the affectation of grown up adornment angered him inordinately.

"What damned foolishness is that?" he demanded. "What started you to putting on a lot of new airs all of a sudden? Do you think you're the Queen of Sheba?"

The girl shrank back into the shadows at the edge of the room, and, as young Edwardes glanced that way, he heard a muffled sob and knew that she had fled up the stairs in chagrin, a pitiful little would be princess whose dream splendor had been shattered with a reprimand. His intuition told him that she already lay curled up on her bed, sobbing bitterly against the pillow where the coiled hair—now unruly torn down from its burnished coronal—lay heaped and tangled about her head.

"I'm afraid," volunteered the guest with deep embarrassment, "that I'm to blame. I met Mary on the roadside once as I went down to the city, and she told me how the children had been teasing her because she was not pretty; I tried to comfort her with a prophecy that her wonderful eyes and hair would establish her claims to beauty."

"So it was you, was it?" demanded Tom Burton shortly, 'that set her thoughts upon vanity—well, I don't thank you."

The boy, sitting with every nerve under painful control, felt his breath come quick and deep until his chest heaved, and words leaped to his lips which with a supreme effort he bit back. This whole intolerable fallacy of outgrown and hard-shelled narrowmindedness was spurring him to outbreak, yet for a moment more he held himself in check.

"But to the father the incident of Mary's offending was closed; his mind was already back upon his problem, and his next words were a stubborn reiteration: "Yes, sir, me an' my boys will fight it out here where we belong."

Suddenly spots of orange and red swam before Ham's eyes. Deep in his being something snapped, and as a fuse spark reaches and ignites its charge, so something fired the eruption that broke volcanically in each nerve.

He rose sullenly and stood before his father, and his words came with the molten heat of overflowing lava.

"An' when you've fought yourself to death an' I've fought myself to death, an' we're both licked, what in the dickens have we been fightin' for?"

The passionate question fell with the sudden violence of a bursting bomb, and the father's jaw stiffened. For an instant, amazement stood out large writ in every feature. Ham had thought much but in his home he had fevered restlessness.

"We're fightin' for our rights. We are fightin' for what the men that came in the Mayflower fought for, said Tom Burton gravely. "Our homes an' our rightful claim to live by the soil we till." Strangely enough for the moment, the older man's voice held no excitement.

When the Back is Lame
IT IS A SIGN OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed.

Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble. The danger lies in delay. You can cure the lame, aching back by curing the aching kidneys beneath—for it is really the kidneys aching and not the back.

Doan's Kidney Pills are a special remedy in kidney and bladder troubles only, they are not a "cure all."

Mrs. Wm. Traverse, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to your Doan's Kidney Pills. I have been using them for kidney trouble which used to affect my back so I could hardly bend down, nor could I lift anything. I learned about your pills from your B.B.B. Almanac, so I began using them, and in no time I was completely cured. I give all the praise in the world to Doan's Kidney Pills and always recommend them to my friends."

When asking for Doan's Pills always see that you get the oblong grey box with the trade mark of a "Maple Leaf."

Price 50c. per box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MOTHER OF FOUR CHILDREN

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Kept Her Well and Strong.

Lincoln, Illinois.—"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for ten years with good results and I have four healthy children. This summer I was in a very run down condition and the very hot weather seemed more than I could stand, but I commenced taking your Compound in June and from then until September 25th, when my last baby was born, I got along much better than I had before. My baby was a girl and weighed 14 pounds at birth, and I recovered very rapidly which I am sure was due to your medicine. I am well and strong now, nurse my baby and do all my work. I had the same good results with your medicine when needed before my other children came and they are all healthy. My mother has taken your medicine with equal satisfaction. She had her last child when nearly 44 years old and feels confident she never would have carried him through without your help, as her health was very poor."—Mrs. T. F. CLOYD, 1365 North Gullick Ave, Decatur, Ill.

Expectant mothers should profit by Mrs. Cloyd's experience, and trust to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Says we can't look or feel right with the system full of poisons.

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading their system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisonous end toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water set on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water set on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Fortunately for the average man, his brains are not on exhibition.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, costing about 50 cents a large bottle, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

TO PREVENT WAR DEAFNESS.

How to Minimize the Damage Resulting from Explosions.

Dr. Wicart recently addressed the Academie de Medecine in Paris on the impairment of hearing by explosions, referring, of course, to artillery bombs, and rifle explosions on the battlefield. He stated that the damage done to the hearing by violent and long-continued explosions could be minimized by a little care. The New York Medical Journal prints this summary of his suggestions:

"The soldier should: 1. at the moment of the discharge or an instant later, forcibly swallow the saliva three or four times in succession, at the same time compressing the nostrils together. 2. During bombardments the external ear should be filled with cotton wick soaked in glycerine, and the ears and mastoid region covered with ear muffs of carded cotton. These precautions were simple but efficacious.

"The men in the trenches and those in the artillery should perform a daily toilet of the ear and nose by filling the former with glycerine and the nose and pharynx with camphorated oil, with essence of lavender or eucalyptus added, one in 100. Mentholated petrolatum has been used, but is distinctly inferior. The instillation should be made with the subject lying supine, his head thrown back for five minutes subsequently. Even if explosions have taken place these instillations should be made, because, if neglected, a suppurative otitis (inflammation of the ear) may be set up, although the drum membrane may not have been ruptured."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

Nov. 26, 1916.

A Living Sacrifice: Romans 12.

Golden Text: Present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your spiritual service.—Romans 12:1.

1. Verse 1. What good reasons are there that a man should bind himself for ever to the service of God?

2. Verse 2. What are the advantages of giving up all worldly frivolities, and devote ourselves to having our natures transformed into the image of God, and thus enjoy the rapture of our souls?

3. Verse 3. Why is it that the proud, the conceited and the boaster are so generally despised?

4. Why is it not mock humility, and false, for a man to outwardly deny, or depreciate the ability which God has given him?

5. Verses 4, 5. A church or a community may be compared to a band, and each instrument should be proud of the rest; for why should the kettle drum be jealous of the big drum or the trombone of the cornet, or the fife of the bass horn, seeing that each is necessary to produce the most beautiful music?

6. Verses 6-8. As no two persons are alike, each being different from all others, does that indicate that God has a special work for each, and if so how may we be sure that we are doing it?

7. Would you say or not, and why, that God expects us to be pleased with our particular gift, and that it is our duty and privilege to use and cultivate it to the utmost?

8. Verse 9. What is the one gift and duty, entrusted to every man alike, and how can we best administer our trust?

9. Why is love the greatest thing in the world?

10. What is the bogus love which Paul warns us against? This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

11. Verse 9. Would you say or not, and why, that the hatred of evil and the love of good is fully under our control?

12. Verse 10. Is love necessarily a feeling: that is a conscience emotion, or is it in the will, or disposition, and fully under our own control? Why?

13. Verse 11. Why cannot a lazy, shiftless man or woman, be a true Christian?

14. Why may not a man be a successful hustler in his business, and a most devoted Christian at the same time?

15. Verse 12. I know many good Christian business men; some of them always succeed in their ventures, some generally fail; some never seem to have trouble, others are beset with tribulation; now if God is the father of all of them, why not each have equal joy and gladness in the Lord?

16. Verse 13. Why is it just as much the duty and privilege of a Christian to help the poor, as it is for him to support his own family?

17. Verses 14, 15. How may we make a practical success of blessing those that curse us?

18. Verses 16-18. What is the advantage of looking upon all our neighbors with prayerful affection?

19. Verses 19-21. Why is it better to let God fight our battles for us?

20. How does it benefit us, and our enemy, if we do him a good turn at every opportunity we have?

HAD NINE TORPEDOES MORE.

U-53 Sought That Many Additional Victims in His Raid.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23. — Captain Alegio Sturlez of the Italian liner Dante Aleghierie, which arrived from Genoa, says that on his last eastward voyage he left New York on Sunday, October 8, about four hours after the steamer West Point had been sunk by U-53 off Nantucket lightship, and took a zig-zag course southward.

"At 2 o'clock on Monday morning," Captain Sturlez continued, "the chief operator picked up a message from the U-53, calling Sinscourset Station. No answer was received, and after repeating it three times, the German submarine finished this message broadcast in the hope that it would be picked up by some friendly ship and forwarded to Washington:

"'Count Von Bernstorff, German Ambassador, Washington—Have sunk several merchant steamships today. Am looking for nine more vessels—Commandant U-53.'"

Machinery for ships in which a steam turbine and an oil engine are coupled to each propeller, permitting either kind of fuel to be used, has been patented by a Swiss inventor.

British Doctors Lack Gasoline

THE TWO-CARBURETOR PLAN

Machines are Started on 'Gas' and Are Then Switched to Paraffin Oil.

The New York Medical Journal devotes considerable space to comments on the troubles of British physicians in getting enough gasoline to keep their automobiles going so they can attend to their practice properly. The Government allows them to buy a maximum of fifty gallons a month, but this quantity proves insufficient. Many expedients have been resorted to in the endeavour to provide an efficient substitute. The best plan seems to be the use of a two-fuel carburetor, by means of which gasoline and paraffin oil are burned. The car is started on gasoline, and then switched to the oil.

"One of the scarcities due to the war most keenly felt by our professional brethren in England," says the writer, "is the dearth of gasoline. Practically all of that commodity used by England is imported, and the troubled state of the waters around that tight little island has caused many American shippers to fear lest their oil should be thrown on them by the forcible persuasion of a torpedo. The vast amount required by the expeditionary forces, and the diversion of English ships formerly used for gasoline to other purposes have had their effect. Early in the Spring of 1916 the Board of Trade appointed a committee to control the supply of gasoline, and this body immediately put restrictions into effect which have grown more and more rigid.

"This Petrol Committee has had the good judgment to favour the medical profession as far as possible, so that physicians are allowed as much as they ask for up to a maximum of fifty gallons a month. This has been found insufficient, however, in some cases; the war has caused a shortage of physicians with a resulting increase in the work of those remaining. Leakage and wasteful engines, accidents, delay in filling requisitions, and many other things may cause physicians to run short of gasoline before their allotted time is up, so they have sought a solution of the problem in one of two ways, either a substitute for gasoline or more miles to the gallon.

"Many things have been suggested to replace gasoline, either wholly or in part. Alcohol has been mentioned but the supply is just as restricted, if not more so, than of gasoline, although in the course of time this problem at this end might be brought equal with the English domestic which could never be the case with oil. Benzole has been suggested, but at present there is a greater need of coal tar products either by the Government or in the dye industry.

"The most practical substitute which has been suggested is paraffin oil, a heavier grade distillate of petroleum than gasoline. To use paraffin oil alone as a fuel would mean the employment of a different carburetor, and whether or not the profession would be justified in going to the expense of such a change, when the supply of paraffin oil is just as uncertain a that of gasoline, is debatable.

"A method which has been found by many practitioners to work well is to mix a small quantity of paraffin oil with the gasoline, in the proportion, say, of one to ten at first, and then gradually to increase the proportion of paraffin oil, as long as the carburetors can take care of it. Of course two-fuel carburetors can be obtained; the chief point of interest to the medical man is the problem of quick starting, especially in cold weather. The method which seems to have given the best results in practice is a two-fuel carburetor by which the car can be started on gasoline, and then switched to paraffin oil.

"Many arguments can be adduced for and against the use of paraffin oil. What seems chiefly to exercise the minds of the British profession is the fear that should they find an alternate fuel which is satisfactory, and adjust their machines to use it, this, too, would soon be unable to fill the increased demand. Such a contingency is hardly likely to arise here if the United States should become involved in war, as our supply of crude oil is ample, but perhaps some ingenious individual can make a suggestion which will relieve our British cousins."

CONSTANT TESTS OF FITNESS.

A French Surgeon Describes Two Used in Military Service.

Dr. Camille Lian makes the statement in the Bulletin de l'Academie de Medecine that in military practice great difficulty has at times been experienced in deciding, even after all varieties of examination had been gone through, whether men were or were not fitted for active service. He has found, however, two tests of constant value. Both are based on counting the pulse after an exact measured physical exercise. The New York Medical Journal summarizes the tests, as follows:

"The first tests consists in having the subject, after the pulse rate at rest in the standing position has been carefully ascertained, execute running steps on one spot, with the legs bending to a right angle with the thighs, at the precise rate of two steps a second. At the end of one whole minute the subject stops and remains at rest standing, while the pulse rate is counted for fifteen seconds in every minute—beginning at once when the exercise stops—until it returns to normal, or nearly so. The heart is considered adequate for military exertions when the rate returns to normal, or nearly so, at the beginning of the second or third minute after the termination of the exercise. A rise in the rate to over thirty in fifteen seconds, from the normal resting rate of seventeen to twenty-two, is held to show slight cardiac weakness.

"Where the rate rises as high as thirty-eight and returns to normal only after four or five minutes, heart weakness is so distinct that the subject must be relieved of the more arduous military duties, while if it rises to forty-two and lasts six or more minutes, the subject should leave the front, as he is fitted only for auxiliary service.

"The second test occasionally reveals cardiac weakness which the first failed to show. The subject while standing rabies a five kilogram weight over the head, then brings it down between the legs with the body bent forward and lower extremities flexed. This is continued for one minute at the rate of five or six cycles in every ten seconds. The results are interpreted as in the first test. The details of these tests must, of course, be somewhat modified in the examination of women and children."

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Shubuta, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

VACANT HOUSES IN BERLIN.

Forty thousand vacant houses in Berlin, equivalent in percentage to more than 30,000 in New York, afford one proof and test of the havoc of war; and doubtless London and especially Paris have similar troubles, says the New York World. New York has seen some hard times, and not seldom have builders outrun the market for new structures, but never anything like that!

Children Had Eczema Doctors Failed To Cure

Two Letters Which Prove the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a Cure for Eczema

Fortunate are the mothers who know the virtues of Dr. Chase's Ointment, for there is no treatment so suitable for use after the bath to relieve irritation and chafing and to thereby prevent eczema and similar skin diseases.

Mrs. W. L. Barnes, Timmins, Ont. writes: "I want to tell you about the case of my little boy, who had baby eczema when he was three months old. It started on the top of his head, on his forehead and around his ears. The doctors failed to do him any good, so I tried D. Chase's Ointment on the recommendation of a friend, and in a month's time the child was entirely free of this disagreeable skin disease. He is now four years old, and has never had any further trouble from ailments of this kind. I also have great faith in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and believe that it cannot be broken as a restorative for pale, nervous women."

Mrs. George McNair, River Charlos, N.B., writes:— "We use Dr. Chase's Ointment in our home, and would not wish for anything better for cuts, burns and bruises. A few years ago a friend of mine, whose baby was terribly afflicted with eczema had her child treated by their own family physician, but the little one got no better. They tried several remedies, but they all proved useless in this case. Upon the advise of a neighbour they got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and before the first box was used the child was completely cured. I can also recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to suffering friends who I now will be glad to learn of something to relieve their nervous trouble. You have my permission to use this letter for the benefit of others."

Dr. Chase's Ointment 60 cents a box; all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

JEFFRIES IS A FARMER.

Ex-Heavyweight Champion Leading Simple Life in California.

Jim Jeffries is a real dairyman these days. Once the terror of all the fighting men, big Jim has hied away to Burbank, near Los Angeles, where he has stocked his 105 acres of land with 120 head of the finest Holsteins that money could buy. The other day Jeff paid $3,049 for a Holstein bull. He intends to invest $50,000 more in his pets.

"I'm just a farmer these days," says Jeff. "I've moved up to Burbank in order that I could attend strictly to my plant, and I intend that an occasional hunting or trout trip shall be only diversion. I've spent $70,000 on my plant, not counting $20,000 that the house cost me. All my milking is done by electricity. In time mine will be the finest dairy in the West.

"Fights? Land's sake! I never think of them any more. Perhaps it is because the sport is under wraps here just now. I doubt if I'll ever be connected with it in any way again. Farming is my trade now, and I intend to top the list as a dairy producer."

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every pair passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

TRAINED TO RESIST GAS.

British Fighting Men Take Gas and Tear Shell Courses

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—The war has developed many institutions, but none more indispensable than the big training camp in France which perfects the British fighting man in the warfare he engages in once he goes to the fighting line, says J. W. Grigg, in the New York World. I have visited this vast school, where thousands at a time of the men who are to meet the Germans in sanguinary combats are given their final period of training. The officer in charge is an alert man of much resources. His staff of instructors is not entirely a permanent one, for with each new innovation which is introduced at the front some adept becomes a member of the teaching force in this big outdoor war academy. The men here, as is the case with the French in their counterpart of this institution, are put through gas as well as lachrymatory or tear shell courses

HAD BOILS

FOR SIX MONTHS

B. B. B. DROVE THEM AWAY

When the blood becomes impure the very first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, sores, etc., and to get rid of these troubles you must cleanse the blood thoroughly with a good blood remedy.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters.

Thousands of people from one end of Canada to the other have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but words of praise for its cleansing properties.

Mr. Rufus Reers, Upper Main River, N.B., writes: "I want to say a few words about your medicine, Burdock Blood Bitters. I had boils for over six months and sometimes was so bad I could not work. I tried lots of cures but nothing would drive them away for good until I took B.B.B. In a short time I was all better. It is a dandy medicine. I keep it in the house all the time."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., but so well and favorably is it known that there are many imitations on the market, see that our name appears on the wrapper.

Prices High Because Supplies Are Scarce

pelled the dairymen to supplement the pastures as much as possible with grains and mill feeds, despite their high cost. With the system of paying for milk according to fat, coming more into favor there is somewhat of a reaction in the matter of regarding the Holstein breed as the most favored dairy breed.

Poultry.—Opinions are very much divided as to the profits in poultry on the farm owing to the high cost of grains. Some correspondents speak of a reduction in the size of flocks on this account, but others point to the encouraging price prevailing all season for eggs, and insist that poultry keeping pays. More crate feeding than formerly is being practised. A large number of young turkeys died off in the cold, wet spring, but those remaining did very well during the dry, hot summer, although there was a scarcity of insects for food. Some correspondents speak of thes school fairs as helping the farm poultry industry.

Fruit.—The usual complaints are made of injury from San Jose Scale and oyster shell bark louse where orchards have not been properly attended to. The long summer drouth has also weakened many trees. There is a comparatively small supply of apples, especially of the best winter sorts, in some localities not sufficient for local use. The general quality of the fruit is not so good as usual, and there were many windfalls. Peaches, however, were more abundant, and there was a fair supply of pears, plums and grapes in those sections where these fruits are raised.

Threshing and Marketing. — The comparatively small yield of most of the grains has enabled threshers to have their work practically completed by the first week of November. Marketing, so far, has been light, except where farmers were requiring ready money for taxes or other pressing needs; for although prices are soaring for all kinds of grains the hope or getting even higher prices prevails with many holders. Others claim that the present and prospective prices for live stock it pays best to feed the grain on the farm, at the same time enriching the land.

Farm Labor.—Even with the comparatively light yield of grains, roots and corn there has been a scarcity of agricultural labor in almost every locality, attributed chiefly to heavy enlistments among the young men on the farms. To meet this lack of help farmers have exchanged work more freely than ever and the latest improved machinery has been brought into use while in many sections women were to be seen working in the fields more frequently than usual. As to the probable rise or fall in the matter of wages, several returns in almost identical terms state that farmers cannot afford to pay more for labor, and that men cannot afford to work for less; while one correspondent sums up the opinion of many regarding the greatest need of the present time as "Patience until the war is over." Domestic servants on the farm are almost impossible to secure.

Fall Plowing.—Plowing was fairly well advanced as correspondents reported, as the root and the corn crops were smaller than usual and threshing was also light. The chief drawbacks were the lack of plowmen, owing to the war, and the dry and hard condition of the clay soils on account of the summer drouths. Timely rains, however, were falling as correspondents wrote, and with a fair spell of open weather ensuing an average acreage should be turned under.

THE STORY OF REGINA TRENCH

another man to look after the two wounded men. They started to carry the wounded men back to their trenches, lost their way, and were forced to crawl into a shell hole, as the new day was arriving. The wounded died in the morning, and about noon one of our snipers picked off our prisoner's companion. Anyway, he lay there for two days and nights, apparently, and eventually decided to come over to us and give himself up. The poor devil was sadly unstrung and looked at us like a dog that you have whipped and then patted. We fed him, let him rest for a couple of hours, and then trotted him off to battalion headquarters.

IV.

During the day we had good opportunity to look over the ground that early the next day we were to attack. All day long our magnificent artillery hammered away on his trenches, while the enemy guns threw stray shells into the open ground around us. Only one shell came at all near us. That was when a "whizz-bang" caught a piece of our parapet and tipped it into the trench. A corporal was just a few feet away, but was not touched.

Darkness folded down on us again and once more it was night. My job the next day was to go across with the second wave, get into Z — trench and bomb it out for 300 yards. Before dawn all my plans and carefully-made arrangements were completed, and we waited impatiently for the runner who would bring up the final orders from the O. C.

As the sun lifted itself out of the east and peeped over at us, the runner came along, and handed me my orders. "The zero hour will be — Holy smoke! We've only an hour, sergeant. Get the men lined up and all ready, said I."

V.

The artillery burst with terrible violence on the Boche trenches, and the air shuddered with the hell of sound. Two seconds, four seconds—on into minutes, until, four minutes after our guns started bursting on poor Frits, we scrambeld over the top." Or barrages were wonderful. Had they been real sheets of steel they could not have been more effective.

Soon we found ourselves in Z — trench and away we started, beating back a very miserable resistance put up by a small party of Bosche bombers.

A party of about a dozen issued out of a deep dugout after we had worked along about one hundred yards. These men had a good supply of bombs, but they were very poor throwers, and it was not long before they were prisoners. Coming around the corner of a trench I found six men all holding their hands up and crying for mercy in their old familiar way. We put a slightly wounded bayonet man over them as guard and went on.

The 300 yards that we had been ordered to "mop up" was very quickly empty of Germans, and about five minutes after we had stopped to look things over, a party of bombers from the battalion on our right came along the trench and joined up with us.

The fight had not been long and success was certainly ours. Our bag of prisoners for our battalion alone was five officers and 142 men.

When our artillery had started to pound their trenches their bombing officer retired to his deep dugout, and when we went down to investigate afterward we found him lying on the floor. We thought he was dead, but on examining him found that he had drunk a prodigious amount of rum and was just very drunk. He was a very coarse brute to look at, and as soon as he sobered up a bit we hustled him back to the rear.

Of course our artillery had smashed the trench up a good deal and we had to work hard to get it in shape again. They counter-attacked us twice that night, but we very easily drove them away, as the counter was very weak and poorly organized.

On we go — further and further, eating into the territory that their Kaiser told the world some months ago could never fall into British hands.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women.

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs, who having tried advertised flesh-builders, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination of assimilative agents has made fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also unequalled, judging from reports, for repairing the wastes of sickness or faulty digestion, and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable preparation is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing assimilative elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this preparation, which is endorsed and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A few weeks systematic use of Sargol should go far to produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying nourishing fats to the blood. If not, every druggist who sells it is authorized to return the purchase price. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten and the additional fats that thin people need are thus provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and may there is a large demand for it.

If you find a druggist who is unable to supply you, send $1.00 money order or registered letter to the National Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine St., Montreal, and a complete ten days' treatment will be sent you postpaid, in plain wrapper.

FLOUR AND MILK PRICES

Prices to be Regulated by the British Authorities.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Board of Trade has begun work speedily under the new food control regulations. Two orders have been issued, effective November 27. One regulates the percentage of flour which may be milled from wheat, varying for the different qualities from seventy-three to seventy-eight per cent., and stipulates that after January 1 only flour made in accordance with this standard may be used for the making of bread or articles of food. A milk order fixes a maximum price not exceeding the price which prevailed on November 15, or, alternatively, that the price may not exceed by more than a specified amount the price which prevailed in the corresponding month before the war, this amount being two-pence per quart. This order makes the maximum price approximately six pence per quart.

THE BRITISH HOSPITAL SHIP BRAEMAR CASTLE IS SUNK IN THE AGEAN SEA

Vessel Was Homeward Bound For Salonika and All on Board Were Saved an Official Admiralty Statement Announces--Berlin Claims the Capture of Orsova and Claims the Roumanian Resistance Has Been Broken --French and British Make Successful Raids.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 24.—The British hospital ship Braemar Castle, homeward bound from Salonika to Malta, was sunk by a mine or torpedo, in Mykoni Channel of the Aegean Sea, an Admiralty announcement stated to-day. All aboard were saved. The Mykoni Channel is only about sixty miles distant from Zeli Channel, where on Tuesday the hospital ship Britannic fell victim to a mine. The Braemar Castle was a vessel of 6,318 tons.

PARIS (French Official), November 24.—The success of a French surprise attack on a German trench near Hilsenheim, in Alsace, was announced in to-day's official statement. A number of Germans were captured. The statement detailed lively cannonading in the region of Sailly-Saillisel, and recorded the destruction of five German aeroplanes in a series of forty air fights.

PETROGRAD, November 24.—General Thepoff has been appointed Premier, the present Premier Sturmer, becoming Grand Chamberlain.

The Duma adjourned to-day until December 2. Newspapers here declare that Thepoff's appointment as Premier will necessitate an explanation by the Government in the Duma regarding what problems induced his selection as Premier.

PARIS, November 24.—Further progress of the Allies west of Monastir was announced in the French official statement to-day. The battle northeast of the Macedonian city is continuing. The Italian troops under General Serrail are also advancing, having reached Nezopoli.

LONDON, November 24.—Successful British raids of enemy trenches southeast of Grenay, and at Festubert and Bois de Grenier, were announced in to-day's statement from General Sir Douglas Haig, the British Commander-in-Chief.

BERLIN, Wireless, November 24.—Orsova has been captured by Teutonic troops from the Roumanians, an official statement announced to-day.

The breaking down of British attacks with heavy losses, was claimed in to-day's War Office statement, describing the western war theatre.

General Von Falkenhayn's troops are approaching Alt Valley, and the enemy resistance in the west corner of Roumania has been broken, according to the statement to-day. The statement said there were no important engagements on the front of Prince Leopold.

MILAN, Italy, November 24.—Newspapers here say that the British forces recently captured a large German submarine in the Mediterranean and have landed its crew at an Italian port for internment. It is thought that this submarine was engaged in torpedoing or mine-sowing in the Aegean Sea.

LLOYD GEORGE SLATED FOR PREMIER.

NEW YORK, November 24.—The Tribune's correspondent in London to-day again repeats rumours of the building of a new British cabinet, with prospects of Asquith's retirement, and Lloyd George becoming Premier.

SAFEGUARDING CANADIAN NICKEL.

LONDON, November 24.—Lord Robert Cecil in the Commons declared that the Government in conjunction with the Canadian Government, had completed most complete arrangements for safeguarding destinations of Canadian nickel.

FURTHER ADVANCES IN DOBRUDJA.

PETROGRAD, November 24.—Further advances in Dobrudja were announced in to-day's official statement. "We advanced southwards, reaching Tyshul and at places crossed Karial," the statement declared.

HARD FIGHTING IN DOBRUDJA

Meanwhile Germans Claim a Fighting Grip on Western Roumania.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 24.—If German official reports to-day are accurate, Gen. Falkenhayn's vise has close still tighter on Western Roumania. Berlin claimed the occupancy of Orsova and Turnu-Severin. Whether the Roumanian army which Berlin claimed was being hemmed in about Orsova, has actually been encircled, was the question which military critics were most concerned about to-day. They hoped that this force had been able to withdraw with success. Meanwhile there has apparently been a resumption of hard fighting in Dobrudja. Both Roumanian and Russian statements to-day reported advances. Petrograd announced the occupancy of Tashul, a town on Karial river 20 miles north-west of Constanza. German statement claimed throwing back of the Russians and said the Bulgars and Russians were in fighting touch along the Danube.

Bruises on Girls Arm Noticed by Factory Employees

In the Juvenile Court this morning Magistrate Dumble heard a complaint of alleged cruel treatment of a girl by her aunt with whom she lives. The evidence showed that the mother was dead and her two daughters were taken in charge by their aunt, the mother's sister. One girl is bright and normal, but the other who is sixteen and looks no older than 12, presents the appearance of arrested physical and mental development. This latter girl was chastised by the aunt, and neighbours had complained to Mr. Spence, agent of the Children's Aid Society. The bright girl receives music lessons and all the comforts of home, but her sister, it was shown, was frequently beaten for disobedience of one kind and another for which it was felt the child was scarcely responsible. The child's arms were bruised to such an extent that the foreman of the factory complained about it. Otherwise the home was said to be a good one. Magistrate Dumble dismissed the case, but warned the aunt against continued severe treatment of the child.

TRAFFIC CARDS

Although it is several weeks since Wm. Smyth left the employ of the Police Department, it was not until last evening that a letter tendering his resignation was brought to the attention of the Police Commissioners. In his letter Smyth stated that he had got "a better job."

"Tell him not to come back again, and look for a job," remarked Judge Huycke, chairman of the Board.

Three applications were received for the position. One was from Andrew Young of Apsley, age twenty-two, height, six feet, and weight, one hundred and seventy-five pounds. Colour of hair and number of teeth not noted.

"I think he had better enlist," remarked Judge Huycke.

Edward Genge, Bethune street, lays claim to the following specifications: Height, five feet, eleven inches; weight, one hundred and seventy pounds; single, born in Peterborough and is an Anglican.

Wm. Bolton Spenceley, 189 1-2 Hunter street, was born in Peterborough. He is six feet, two and a quarter inches in height.

"Too high," was Magistrate Dumble's comment, regarding the last named applicant.

Judge Huycke—"Personally I am not in favour of giving the position to any of those fellows. We may have some boys back from the front who could fill the position. I think we can find somebody more deserving than any of the three."

Chief Thompson said that Genge had a rejection button on when he called at the office.

Magistrate Dumble was of the opinion that the City could get along without another man. There is considerably less drinking since the advent of temperance legislation.

Chief Thompson said that this city was below the standard of other cities in respect to the number of policemen. Since the bicycles have been dispensed with owing to bad weather it takes an extra man to cover the outlying districts.

At the suggestion of Judge Huycke the matter was left over until the first of the year. In the meantime the city will have to struggle along without the extra man.

On Sick List.

Police Constable Lawrence has been on the sick list since the seventh of September. Dr. C. H. Anya reports that it will be at least a month before Lawrence will be in condition to report for duty. Upon his return he will probably be put on Station duty for a while.

Chief Thompson was authorized to procure three thousand traffic cards, to be distributed among farmers and others who make use of the city's streets. The card bears a diagram on one side and traffic regulations on the reverse side. It was pointed out that many local drivers were among the worst offenders.

Magistrate Dumble wanted to know if the express men were respecting the carters' by-law as adopted by the Board some months ago. Personally, he did not think they were. He believed they "tacked" it on every chance they got.

"We could pay for the traffic cards out of the fines we got from people who break the law," jocularly remarked the Magistrate.

A RECRUITING RALLY SUNDAY

There will be a big recruiting meeting at the armouries on Sunday night at 8.30 o'clock in the interests of the 247th Battalion and other units. The speakers will be announced to-morrow. Spirited addresses will be given and it is hoped the armouries will be crowded. Watch for to-morrow's announcement.

A GREATER PETERBORO' PAGE WILL BE A NEW EXAMINER FEATURE

Peterborough with her many natural advantages, sightly location and other blessings which contribute to her peoples' wealth and happiness, ought to take foremost place among the growing, progressive and live cities of Ontario.

The foundation is here to build upon. Whether that superstructure of prosperity shall be built depends on her people, upon the unity of purpose of her loyal citizens. If all will join hands and push and boost, Peterborough will realize her highest ambition and take that place among her sister cities that she rightly deserves.

Peterborough will rise when her people are determined that she shall; when local pride triumphs over narrow petty, personal concerns, and when the energy of all is merged to accomplish something for the general good, which means the good of everybody.

It is with this end in view that The Examiner has prepared to start a feature that will be known as a "Greater Peterborough" Page, in a series of articles that will deal with practically every phase of this city's life.

The new feature will appear for the first time in to-morrow's Examiner, and will be a Saturday feature for the next twenty-six weeks.

The citizens of this city can assist in "boosting" Peterborough to a great extent if each and every reader will send Saturday papers to friends or relatives residing in other cities, in this way familiarizing outsiders with the possibilities which Peterborough has to offer.

Any person desiring additional copies may secure the same at The Examiner Office.

Let us all join hands and "push" and "boost" for a bigger and more prosperous Peterborough. Your co-operation will mean considerable and is needed.

Be a Peterborough "booster."

PTE. BRUCE CLARK OF 93rd BATTALION IS DEAD FROM WOUNDS

One of the First Men to Join the Peterboro' Unit Has Succumbed to Injuries—Gunner Sidney Thompson of Peterborough Wounded—235th Battalion and Bantams Are Recruiting Here—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Another 93rd Battalion member has given his life for the Empire. It is officially announced that Pte. Bruce Clark of the 5th C.M.R., and formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who three weeks ago was reported wounded has succumbed to his injuries. Pte. Clark who was a Canadian by birth was one of the first men to join the 93rd Battalion enlisting in August of 1915, when the campaign first opened. He had been living at Keene for some time and came to Peterborough to enlist. Pte. Clarke was a quiet, amiable soldier and a great favourite with the men of his platoon and throughout the battalion. He was a member of A company of the 93rd. A sister resides at 112 St. Vincent street, Toronto.

In a letter from one of the Peterborough boys in the firing line, he tells of a re-union of Peterborough boys which took place at a show given by the Princess Pats, Somewhere in France.' There were Capt. Harold Wallis, Lieut. Hugh Wallis, Lieut. Harold Hill, Lieut. Douglas Hammond, Capt. Frank Burnham and Percy Pierce. A great evening was spent in talking over Peterborough news. After the show the boys went to the Wallis boy's mess tent for dinner.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Daily orders by Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, commanding 247th Battalion, C.E.F., Nov. 24, 1916:

(1)—Parade—

All officers, N.C.O.'s and men, except those specially employed, will parade in drill hall at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

(2)—Duties—

Orderly officer for Friday, Lieut. Johnston; next for duty, Lieut. Strickland.

(3)—District Order No. 000—

It is published for the information of all concerned that men of infantry units will wear their waist belts outside their great coats whenever the great coat is worn. The coat to be tucked behind so as to give a neat appearance. This order must be strictly adhered to.

(4) District Order No. 000, Retreat—

Retreat for the ensuing week will be sounded 4.46 p.m.

R. S. Brooks, Lieut.,
Act. Adjt. 247th Batt. C.E.F.

More For the "Bantams."

Private P Maurice of the 216th Battalion, Toronto, is in the city to-day with a view of getting a few recruits for that popular unit. Men under five feet two inches are eligible for service. A number of Peterborough boys have already joined the Bantams. Private Maurice will be here for several days and will be pleased to meet anybody desirous of joining the 216th. He will be found at the armouries or at the Simcoe street recruiting station.

GUNNER ARMSTRONG HIT.

Mr. Frederick Armstrong, Marmora Avenue, received official word this morning that his son, Gunner Sidney K. Armstrong, is officially reported admitted to No. 2 General Hospital, Havre, on November 15th, suffering from a gun-shot wound in the right leg. Gunner Armstrong, who for nine years was in the employ of the J. C. Turnbull Co., enlisted last spring with the Cobourg Heavy Battery and went overseas with a draft from that unit, and was afterwards transferred to the 165th Canadian Siege Battery. He had been at the front for a couple of months.

In accordance with the new arrangement which permits the 235th, 247th, 252nd and 254th Battalions to recruit anywhere in the seven counties, the 235th Battalion is opening a recruiting campaign in Peterborough. A squad in charge of Lieut. H. Dodds of Peterborough and composed of Sergt. Greenwood, an Imperial veteran, who was in the retreat from Mons, Sergt. Sam Mills of Peterborough, Sergt. Long, Pte. Wilmot and Pte. Moran arrived in the city last evening and have started a drive for men. They will make the Simcoe street recruiting office their Headquarters and are being given every assistance by Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion who believes that the principle thing is to get men to enlist, preferable in the 247th if possible, but if they prefer another unit all well and good.

Peterborough's casualties since the war began are now well over the 400 mark. No fewer than 126 Peterborough soldiers have been killed at the front, or died of wounds or from illness. The figures to date are as follows:

Killed in action	91
Died of wounds	22
Died of illness or accident	15
Total deaths	128
Missing	15
Prisoners of war	40
Wounded	233
Total casualties	416

A Chance For Small Men.

For over two years the cry of the Empire has been, "Send us men, and yet more men." Ever since the declaration of war on Aug. 4th, 1914, Britain's dominions overseas have answered that call nobly. But it is only since the 15th of February, 1916, that the small men, small in inches but big in heart and spirit to aid the Empire, has had a real opportunity of answering the call of the Motherland. It was on that day that Col. F. L. Burke, of Toronto, was authorized to mobilize the now popular aggregation of small men known as the 216th Overseas Battalion, Bantams, who are to date 940 strong and ready, aye, and willing to cross the seas and meet Fritz and show him that the little Britisher can fight for his king, his country and his women folk, as well as the big one. The 940 big-spirited little men are but awaiting your entry into their midst. What are you going to do about it? Nothing your chance! If you have been turned down before try again with the 216th O. S. Battalion. Any man who is physically fit and under five feet two inches is eligible for service with the Bantams. Everyone has read of the daring, the whole-hearted patriotism and service of the Bantams of the old country, let short men of Canada show their equality, if not superiority, in the same direction. Take the first step and call on Pte. P. Maurice at the recruiting station on Simcoe street, talk the matter over with him. Remember Kitchener, Capt. Fryatt and Miss Cavell and enlist to-day.

Letter From the Front.

Mrs. James Heal, 292 Aylmer street, has received the following letter from her brother, Private Robert H. Saxby:

SIR HERBERT AMES VISITS PETERBORO'

GUNNER SIDNEY E. ARMSTRONG
Margaret Avenue, who is officially reported wounded. He enlisted in the Cobourg Heavy Battery and was at the Front with the 165th Canadian Siege Battery.

Dropped in Last Evening For About Three Hours—Met a Number of the Local Patriotic Fund Workers Including the Members of the Board of Police Commissioners Who Happened to Be in the Building at the Time.

"CITY HAS DONE WELL"

Sir Herbert Ames, Honorary-Secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, was in the city last evening for about three hours. He arrived shortly after six o'clock and left for Montreal on the 9 o'clock train. While in the city Sir Herbert met Mr. F. H. Dobbin, Executive Officer of the Patriotic Fund, and a few of his associates, including Mayor J. J. Duffus, and ex-Mayor Wm Buller. An informal meeting was held in the rooms of the Peterborough Patriotic Association, and several matters of vital importance to the Fund were discussed. The Board of Police Commissioners comprising His Honour Judge Huycke, Police Magistrate Dumble, and His Worship Mayor Duffus dropped in to see Sir Herbert at the close of a regular business meeting of the Board, held in the City Buildings, where the Patriotic Fund quarters are located.

Voluntary System.

"No matter how you raise your fund, whether by taxation or otherwise, do not abandon the voluntary system of raising money for the fund," said Sir Herbert Ames, upon being informed of the proposal to raise Peterborough's share by placing the entire amount on the taxes, which will amount each year to about forty-two cents on the dollar. The patriotic fund workers assured Sir Herbert Ames that it was the intention of the local committee to raise a substantial amount by voluntary subscription in addition to the amount to be raised by taxation. A substantial amount raised by voluntary subscription would help carry the fund along until such time as the money raised by taxation would be available. Then there are many people who would be willing to make a voluntary subscription that could not be reached the other way.

Ontario's Allotment.

Sir Herbert related a number of incidents concerning a big money-raising campaign that was held in Vancouver. The people on the Pacific Coast were very enthusiastic. Sir Herbert was present at the time and noted some of the methods employed. Little difficulty was experienced in raising more than the amount required. This year the Patriotic Fund hopes to raise fourteen million dollars, including Manitoba. The last named Province is contributing one and a half million dollars, leaving twelve and a half million dollars for the rest of the Dominion. Ontario's share of this amount is six million dollars. One million dollars has been subscribed by the Ontario Government with a view to helping out the situation in the more sparsely settled districts of northern Ontario, where enlistments have been heavy in proportion to the population.

At the beginning of the year thirty meetings will be held at different points throughout the country preliminary to the big 'push'.

The amount to be raised in Peterborough City and County is one hundred thousand dollars. Of this amount, it is hoped to raise forty thousand dollars in the county, and sixty thousand in the city.

Sir Herbert Ames expressed his satisfaction at the local situation. "Peterborough has done well," he said.

MORE PETERBORO' SOLDIERS ARE HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Quartermaster-Sergt. Robt. Matchett and Pte. Naish of the 93rd and Pte. Walter Perks of the 21st Battalion Are Back.

HAVELOCK MAN HOME

A number of Peterborough soldiers have arrived home from overseas, reaching the city yesterday or this morning. Among them was Co. Quartermaster Sergt. Robert Matchett of the 93rd Battalion, who has been discharged from service on account of physicial disability and who arrived early this morning, receiving a warm welcome home from his many friends. Q. M. S. Matchett was in charge of a party of invalided men for the convalescent hospital at Kingston.

Practically all the able-bodied men of the 93rd Battalion were in France when he left Sandling Camp on November 4th. The 93rd band was awaiting orders then to come home. The members were confined to camp and all preparations had been made for their departure. A number of the 93rd bandsmen had been playing with the band of the 39th.

Q. M. S. Matchett states that a number of the 93rd Battalion, noncoms are on instructional work. Among them are the four company Sergeants-Majors of the 93rd. Bert Hartshorn, is on instructional work in France, Sam Calladine and Jack Playford are on duty with the 186th Battalion and Jim Hawthorne is also on instructional duty.

H. Langham a Peterborough boy who went overseas as a Corporal in the 39th Battalion is now regimental Sergeant-Major of the 39th.

PTE PERKS HOME.

Pte. Walter Perks of Peterborough, son of Mrs. L. R. Perks, 542 Gilmour street who enlisted in the 21st Battalion in September 1914, going with the Lakefield detachment of the 46th Regiment has been invalided to Canada and is at his home, on a short furlough before going to the convalescent hospital, Kingston for treatment. Pte. Perks who arrived this morning has been ill for some time in England and was unable to go to the front with his battalion. He has two brothers overseas.

Pte. Naish a Peterborough member of the 93rd Battalion, rejected at the final examination in England arrived home yesterday while Pte. A. Althouse of Havelock who went over with the 93rd has also reached home. He will go to Kingston for treatment.

Palmer May Visit City

There is a possibility that Peterborough citizens may get an opportunity to hear Frederic Palmer, the famous war correspondent. Capt. R. J. Soden, Quartermaster of the 247th Battalion is endeavoring to make the necessary arrangements. Mr. Palmer who is just back from the Somme front where he was the only American newspaper man with the British forces is to give four or five lectures in Canada and it is hoped that Peterborough will be included. Mr. Palmer is the author of the famous war book, "My year of the Great War".

Have Arrived In England

Rev. J. P. Wilson of Trinity Methodist Church, has received a cable to the effect that his son-in-law, Major Harry A. Frost, and Mrs. Frost, have arrived safely in England.

STREET RAILWAY NOTICE

Owing to the increase in passenger traffic, the management of the Peterborough Radial Railway deem it advisable, in the interests of the public, to discontinue stopping at the white poles in the centre of the blocks on George street, as it is found impossible, during the busy hours, to give the public a ten minute service and make so many stops. After the date of this notice the cars will stop only at the regular street corners. Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. Central Ontario System. 5d-119

MAKE A WAY.

The City Fathers are troubled in soul over their inability to relieve returned soldiers from increased poll tax imposed for the sins of the slackers. The City Solicitor is no doubt right when he says the Municipal Act does not provide for any discrimination. Hang the Municipal Act! Let the Council take the risk and do the right thing for our returned soldiers: make the discrimination in spite of the Municipal Act, and remove from themselves the reproach of placing returned soldiers, who have done their bit, on the same level as the slackers, who have refused, and still refuse, to do their duty. We cannot do too much for our returned soldiers, and it seems better to break a statute law in their interest, than to break the eternal law of gratitude and recognition of service. But is there any need for that? Why not, as is done every year, remit the tax. If that has been done, contrary to the Municipal Act, do it again; but by all means do the decent thing for our returned soldiers. We owe them more than they owe the municipality. If the City Fathers cannot find a legal way, let them make a way; anything to show our gratitude in so small a way for the services and sacrifices our soldiers have given and have made.

Members of the active militia-members of the 57th Regiment, who have never seen overseas are exempt from poll tax. Then, in heaven's name, let the Council do something equivalent for the soldiers who have done service overseas. If there is no way, make it.

CONSCRIPTION BEATEN.

The latest returns from Australia in regard to the popular voting on the conscription question, show that the proposal was rejected by a large majority—61,000. This might have been expected. If every adult citizen had a chance to vote, it seems very certain that the young men who expected to be affected by compulsory service conditions would vote against any form of conscription. If he hadn't the "nerve" to voluntarily enlist, he would not favour a measure that would compel him to take up arms. In Australia 61,000 shirkers out of a total of 2,200,000 voting turned the scale and defeated conscription. It would probably be the same in Canada, if one were foolish enough to submit so vital a question to referendum vote. The men who evade the plain and emotive duty of enlisting, who couldn't be drawn to a recruiting office, by cart horses or a traction engine might be counted upon to vote against conscription. This seems to be immensely necessary if we are to adequately supplement the splendid results of voluntary action of the 375,000 Canadians at the front and supply the needed 100,000 to complete Canada's quota of 500,000.

We did not feel the need of conscription or equivalent energetic measures till now; and now there are many citizens to it who were opposed to compulsory service, among them as valid a mannered Christian as Rev. Principal O'Meara, who told the archdeaconry clergymen that he had been converted to sentiment in its favour, by conviction of the necessity of its adoption or some equivalent measure. Conscription may be regarded as practical denial of the great British principle—the liberty of the subject. That liberty is subject to high moral and national interests. We have "suspended" the liberty of the subject in adopting prohibition, the consideration of the greatest good to the greatest number submerging a principle great in its self, but subordinate to consideration of the general good. We are, most of us, good loyal citizens, loyal to the state and the city and their interests. But few of the best of us willingly pay taxes—few of us voluntarily thrust our precincts of duty upon the authorities. Those of us who do not pay taxes upon principle, have to submit to conscription—forcible measures of compelling us to do our duty in this regard. If everybody promptly paid his taxes, we should have no need of compulsion. If all who are eligible to fight, who are physically fit, came forward in this time of crisis, we should not have to consider the adoption of something like conscription.

We must win this war. That's a settled thing. Our dearest liberties are in danger. To win we must have more soldiers. If fit men won't do their part, then we must not palter with considerations of interference with personal liberty, affecting the few, when the greater liberty of everybody, including those individuals themselves is at stake. We don't want conscription in Canada if it can be avoided. But we must have at least, another 100,000 soldiers.

We seem to have exhausted the voluntary spirit; but have we exhausted other means less drastic than compulsion? We have done what we have done largely by personal action and the patriotic energy of individuals. In the matter of recruiting, the government seems to have taken little official interest or efficient official action. The cry comes to the government from all parts, from all parties, to take measures to systematize recruiting; to organize it and thus replace the haphazard, but heretofore, splendid activities of private citizens and the militia people. As things go, commanding officers of battalions being formed have to resort to all sorts of expedient, unaided by the government, not even the necessary, and necessarily considerable, expenses being supplied by the government, if we judge from recruiting officers in Toronto making appeal to the Ottawa authorities to supply funds for recruiting purposes.

We do not want conscription in Canada and it is not wise to consider its adoption till all other means have been tried and failed. If we are compelled to conscription, it will fall to the government to apply it and to share the responsibility with those whose refusal to serve, makes it necessary. But in the event of conscription, the governments responsibility will be lessened if it makes an earnest effort to exhaust, every resource of persuasion. If the Ottawa government would give the leading and provide the machinery, much more effective moral suasion could be exercised. We cannot reach the individual and drive his responsibility home by academic appeals of Sir Robert Borden or anybody else. Young man eligible for enlisting should be registered under government action, and their co-relation to industrial war work established System must be substituted for go-as-you-please methods. Patriotic leagues and members of the militia must be backed by the government. In a word, complete organization of the manhood of Canada for war service at home or service in the field must be effected. Then if, after moral measures are exhaustively applied, recruiting results are not forthcoming, military measures—virtual conscription must be considered—must, because we must win this war.

IF A FOREIGN ARMY

If a foreign army were to sail up the St. Lawrence, seize the food supplies of Montreal, and only allow them to be released on payment of a tax of one dollar a bag on potatoes, several dollars a barrel on apples, 30 cents a dozen on eggs, 20 cents a pound on butter, and other taxes in proportion on all the food supplies of the people, it would not be doing any worse than some of our loyal Canadians are doing now. The Government could act, if they would.—Montreal Herald.

STRONG TALK.

What's the use of worrying any more about the 236th Battalion? The boys are the football of the politicians. It is a dastardly shame the wire-pulling that has gone on to make votes for politicians. Glad to see the Belleville Daily Ontario speaking out plainly. If the members of the battalion would bayonet the political wire-pullers, who would worry? It is time the curtain was dropped on this disgusting farce.—Bowmanville Statesman.

The Barnardo Home in Relation to War Service

We have just received a most interesting booklet issued by the Barnardo Homes, containing stories of some Barnardo heroes, three of whom are Anzacs. In certain despatches from Gallipoli, four Anzacs were recommended for bravery while collecting the wounded at great personal risk. Three of those four were old Barnardo boys, and of these, two distinguished themselves still further for bravery on the Western front, and were presented with the Military Medal on the battlefield by General Birdwood. The third has been wounded. Accompanying the booklet is an earnest appeal from the Homes for support of this National and Patriotic Charity during the third winter of war. The Charter of the Homes is "No destitute child ever refused admission." They are assisting Tommy's bairns, as no one else can do. Close on 1,000 War children, most of whose fathers are soldiers and sailors, have been admitted since war broke out. Should any of those fathers die at the front, their children, in all probability, will become permanent residents; but meanwhile, these little ones, whom patriotism has temporarily orphaned, are being tenderly nursed and cared for. The War Office grant in respect to these soldiers' children is, of course, received, but it is only a few shillings weekly, and not in any sense sufficient to pay for the housing, clothing, food and training of the children during these times of high prices; and, indeed, no money could buy the care needed and given to these children. The War Office cannot nurse motherless little ones. Here is a case. Private Tom Brown was at the front, when his wife died leaving six motherless children, quite little ones: two were twins only five days old. The poor father was distracted, what was he to do? Someone suggested Dr. Barnardo's Homes. The soldier put the case before them. There were no relatives who could look after the children. The Homes, therefore, took them in immediately, and are minding them until "Daddy comes back from the war"—if he does come back! If not, the Homes will care for his bairns.

"Oh! it's Tommy in the trenches! It's Tommy by the gun!
But it's Tommy's bairns are crying while the work is being done!"

Dr. Barnardo's Homes help at once, without red tape. 83,000 of the Nation's destitute children have been admitted in fifty years, and the great majority of them justify the care and attention and the money which have been expended upon them.

Nearly 8,000 Barnardo Boys are serving their country in the Army and Navy and Mercantile Marine. Over 4,000 of these are boys whom the Homes have emigrated to the Overseas Dominions, and who have come back to help the Empire in the present dire need. For the Motherland and for the Overseas Dominions alike, it is the boys and girls who will count in the years to come. Thirty of the Nation's destitute children are admitted every week by these Homes.

We feel sure that our readers will wish to help this National and Patriotic Charity, of which their Majesties the King and Queen, and Queen Alexandra are Patrons. Ten shillings maintains the whole of these vast Homes (comprising 133 separate households—the largest family in the world) for one minute. Gifts of all kinds, money, clothing, blankets, etc., will be welcomed by the Honorary Director, Mr. William Baker, M.A., LL.B., at Headquarters, 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

LOSE $120,000 BET ON WAR.

But Amsterdam Men Had Wager Insured, So Companies Lost Most.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 23.—Whether the war would end before October, 1916, was the subject of a $120,000 bet just liquidated here.

The members of the groups concerned were principally stock exchange and commercial men, and the bet was made last year. Both parties had insured their chances of losing by taking out policies for which 10 per cent. premium was paid, and the risk of these policies was redistributed among various companies.

The winners of the bet had $108,000 to distribute, while the losers had to pay $12,000. The main loss fell upon the insurance combinations.

TATERS FILL WAREHOUSES.

Montreal, Nov. 23.—Allegations and denials followed the announcement that 180,000 bags of potatoes were being allowed to freeze in three hundred much wanted cars on the railway sidings.

It was alleged by retail dealers that the potatoes are not being taken up by the wholesalers because they would batter down the present high price of $2.25 a bag. The wholesalers argue that their warehouses are full and that they cannot accommodate the new consignments. They deny they are forcing the prices up. It has been suggested that the demurrage charges on a car, now only $1 a day, be raised.

This morning a St. Laurent farmer on the Bonsecours market was fined $25 and costs for selling short weight bags of potatoes and the magistrate threatened to send to jail the next dealer that was brought before him on a similar charge.

Public Opinion Demands That The "Middleman" Must Go

Canada is groaning under the heel of the "middleman" the consumer is finding the load too heavy, and is demanding that the "MIDDLE MAN MUST GO." Cities and towns all through the Dominion are holding meetings, and public indignation is being expressed by appeals to Federal, Provincial and local governments for relief. The situation is acute. But it is not a new problem. We have always had the middleman—he has always exacted tribute from those who choose to pay. Sixteen years ago we eliminated the creature from our business. We went direct to the source of supply and established the beginning of a tailoring business that to-day is National-wide in its character.

We Abolished the Middleman and Passed the Profits Over to You

If it were not for our "MILL-TO-MAN" plan of business, we would be asking $25.00 to $30.00 for the clothes you get here for $18.00. That is what "Direct From the Mills" means to every man who deals here. A clear saving of $7 to $12 on the Suit or Overcoat we make for you.

Come in to-morrow and to-morrow night and investigate. We want you to see the splendid range of New Woollens Direct from the mills, and no middleman's profit added to the price.

We give you Style—We give you Value—We pass the Middleman's Profit to You.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY of Peterborough City and County For the care of neglected and illtreated children. C. A. G. SPENCE Accountant, Secretary and Inspector 325, Simcoe Street. 'Phone 1291 Office Hours: 3 till 5 Children for Adoption

BRANCH OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY FORMED IN LAKEFIELD

Following Illustrated Address Last Night by Mr. C. A. G. Spence—Peterboro' City and County Give Only $600 to This Work.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The first of the county meetings Mr. C. A. G. Spence, agent of the Children's Aid Society, has planned in the interests of society, was held in Lakefield Town Hall last night. Under this movement it is hoped that not only the active support of the city, but of all the communities in the county will be drawn to the work of assisting dependent children, and branch societies will likely be formed in Norwood, Havelock, Keene and other centres.

The Lakefield committee was elected as follows:

President—Rev. C. W. Barrett.
Vice-President—Mrs. Spence, Sr.
Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Sherin.
Executive—Mrs. W. Graham, Mrs. Marling, Mrs. Robins, Mrs. A. W. McKenzie, Mrs. Hilliard, Mrs. Barrett, Miss Kennedy, Rev. Mr McKenzie, Rev. Mr. Robins, Rev. Father Meagher, and Rev. Mr. Sleeman.

Well Attended.

That Lakefield has simply been waiting for an opportunity to further the work of the Children's Aid Society was testified by the large attendance, the town hall being filled when County Magistrate Langley opened the meeting and outlined its object.

Mr. Spence's lecture on the work of the Children's Aid Society throughout the province, was illustrated with interesting and convincing slides, showing the manifest benefits to neglected children, who had been received under its care. Rev. Mr. McKenzie, of Grove School, loaned the lantern for the occasion. Adjutant McElhiney, who accompanied Mr. Spence, presented some of his best war slides.

Mr. G. N. Gordon Will Address "Y" Meeting Sunday Afternoon

Men and boys who had the pleasure of hearing City Attorney G. N. Gordon, at the Y.M.C.A. men's meetings during the past two years, will be pleased to learn that Mr. Gordon will be the speaker next Sunday, at 4.15, subject, "Efficiency." Forty-five men and older boys were present at the meeting last Sunday, showing that the interest is growing weekly in these meetings. It is believed that the meeting next Sunday will be a record-breaker.

Membership Contest.

Eighty-five contest team workers were present at the workers' supper, last evening, there being a total of thirty-one members reported as having enrolled toward the desired three hundred. Just seven days remain of the contest, so every man is urged to make every day count.

Overseas Men Present.

Captains Jones and Neal, of the Y. M. C. A. overseas staff were present last evening and addressed the workers in a most encouraging manner. These two men are in uniform and will leave in a few days for England. Their presence in Peterborough is that they may personally inform the local friends of the Y.M.C.A. overseas work, regarding the pressing needs of the work this winter, What our boys endure at the front is beyond description, so it is certain that the people of Peterborough will back up those who are devoting their efforts to help our boys at the front in keeping fit.

Persecuted In Tonawanda

Mr. Hargreaves, who has lately come to reside here from Tonawanda, N.Y., tells some startling tales of the pro-German feeling in that town. He held a splendid position in Tonawanda, but the intolerance shown to the British citizens there forced him to leave. Everywhere a British-born citizen was, he had to obliterate himself as much as possible, or put up with abuse. Mr. Hargreaves told of how his children, coming to and from school, were tormented because of their nationality. At school they were ridiculed and insulted by the pro-German teachers, and often returned with their clothes torn in ribbons.

Asked the reason for this treatment Mr. Hargreaves said that ever since the unfortunate shooting at Fort Erie the British citizens have had little peace. I would not return for any inducements, said Mr. Hargreaves. Even at this moment I fear I will not be able to get my furniture over safely. Mr. Hargreaves resided in Peterborough until eight years ago, and was employed with Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons.

Give Them A Fight Says H. H. Dewar

Examiner Special:

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Liberal opinion is divided as to whether there will be opposition to the re-election of Hon. E. A. Kemp in East Toronto, on his being made Minister of Militia. Hon. G. P. Graham, who is here points out that Mr Kemp himself has been threatening a general election. H. H. Dewart, K.C., recently elected as the lone Liberal from Toronto in the Ontario House, says, "Give them a fight. This war bogey talk is overdone." Local Liberals will meet early to discuss the situation. Kemp's last plurality was over five thousand. There is some talk of running an anti-nickel policy Conservative against Kemp.

INCORRIGIBLE BOY GOES TO MIMICO

The boy who set fire to Armour's Hill one day last summer to enjoy the spectacle of a fire, something of a youthful Nero, reached the end of his tether of freedom this morning when Magistrate Dumble ordered him to be sent to the Industrial School at Mimico. From all accounts the boy knew no restraint and recognized no authority. He has refused to go to school, and has been an evil influence among his companions in Ashburnham. Chief Thompson had exhausted his patience and his persuasiveness in pleading with the youth, and even an application of the "cat" failed to make an impression upon him.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In last night's Examiner there appears an article headed "Quantity of Meat Confiscated." I desire to address my customers and the public, generally, that while it refers to an East City butcher, that I was not guilty of the offence named. I slaughter all my own cattle, and believe there is no better selected meat in Peterborough shown in any of the shops.

H. Wheeler,
Butcher, East City.

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—As there is so much talk in the city over the advance in the price of milk, permit me through your valuable paper to pass a few remarks. I read in your paper of Monday last that milkmen are still selling for eight cents. I myself am a milkman and I have asked all the milkmen that I run across in my morning delivery and they all say that they are selling for nine cents. Now the man that offers eight-cent milk is not making a fair profit, for if he buys for five cents (which is the price paid for the majority of the milk and I may say that I do not know any milkman that is paying six cents for all of his milk maybe some pay six cents for a few quarts to help him out when he is short) he makes three cents on the quart. Now supposing he sells one hundred quarts per day, which is about the average output he should get three dollars per day, out of this three dollars he has to keep his horse say fifty cents, shoeing five cents, wear and tear of harness and rig twenty-five cents and then loss on bottles, which I may say is outrageous, for I lose about one to two dozen weekly, say fifteen cents per day and then there is always someone ready to beat him 25 cents here and 50 cents there, $1 somewhere else. When he is through he has $1.75 per day. Of course, he works Sundays (so he don't get double time for this day). Now dear consumer is this a fair wage these days? If you pay him nine cents for his milk, he will get $2.75 per day, which is below the majority of the consumers' income. If any person can convince me that $1.75 per day is a lively wage and enough for a milkman, who has to turn out in all sorts of weather, I will start and sell for eight cents again. Thanking you for space in your paper.

38TH BATTALION IN HARD FIGHTING

Cable Received From Col. Edwards and Other Officers—Several Peterboro' Men in the Battalion

Cables received in Ottawa by relatives of officers with an Ottawa regiment at the front lend credence to the rumor that the 38th battalion had been in the recent severe fighting. This battalion is one that wintered in Bermuda. The cables received by Mrs. R. F. Parkinson, wife of Major Parkinson; Mrs. Wm. Woods, wife of Major Woods, and relatives of Lieut.-Col. P. Edwards merely mention that they are safe.

These cables are basis for the belief that the battalion had been in a severe action, evidently the fighting last Saturday mentioned in the report of the official eye-witness. It is rumored that the battalion had suffered heavy casualties.

All the Militia Department has received is a cable to the effect that this regiment had been in a fight and was hard hit.

Several Peterborough men are in this Battalion, including Lieut. Harold Hill, Lieut. J. A. Harstone, Lieut. D. Hammond, brother of Dr. Hammond of Peterborough also a number of others.

Wednesday the Canadian War Records Office sent a despatch describing an advance by the Canadians on Saturday last on a front of about 3,500 yards and the capture by them of 500 prisoners. At one point the Canadians for a time were subject to heavy shell and machine gun fire from a knoll which they subsequently occupied. It is probable the Ottawa battalion took part in this engagement.

The Ottawa battalion is the 38th, commanded by Lt.-Col. Edwards, which was sent to Barriefield from Ottawa at the opening of the camp of 1915, and from Barriefield camp was sent to Bermuda where it remained for one year, relieving the Royal Canadian Regiment.

TOM THE PEEPER ON SIMCOE STREET

Residents on Simcoe street have been much annoyed lately by a man of the genus Tom the Peeper. One lady who was sitting in her drawing-room looked up to find a man peering into her windows. He disappeared before help could be called. Several other residents in the same vicinity have been likewise annoyed lately.

NO PRAYERS WILL BE SAID

Jack London Will be Cremated Without Ostentation.

SANTA ROSA, Cal., Nov. 24.—Without ceremony of any kind, the body of Jack London, novelist and adventurer, will be cremated at noon to-morrow at the Oakland crematory.

No minister or priest will pronounce a benediction; no prayers will be said, no choir will sing a requiem.

Believing that death ends all, and that there is no hereafter, London often said that when he died he wished to be cremated and buried without ostentation.

RETURNED INDIAN OF 93RD OVER AGE DREAMS OF GETTING "TUG'S PAPERS"

Alfred Coppaway of Curve Lake Rejected in England Hopes to Obtain Pilot's Papers in Waters He Knows So Well —Lacks Education to Pass Examination

Alfred Coppaway, of Curve Lake P. O., one of the Indian recruits with the 93rd Battalion, is another of the men rejected in England for being over age. He recently returned to Peterborough and is now back to his former home and haunts. All the way back on the boat he pondered on the question of how he could obtain "tug's papers." It seems that Coppaway knows the water routes of the upper lakes as intimately as "Al" Young of the "Geneva" knows the channel to Marwood, and it is said of "Al" that blindfolded he could take the "Geneva" either up or down the river and never cut a turn wide or short.

But Coppaway in his early days was deprived of an education the lack of which precludes his passing the general examination for "tug's papers," as he calls it. But the experience with the 93rd probably broadened the Indian's ideas, and coming home he apparently formed the idea that military methods had no monopoly on deviousness. Hence he outlined the situation to Alderman Dobbin that he knew every twist and turn in the boat channel in the waters above, every stone and stump and sand bar. And somehow he concluded that he might be able to get papers for a tug helmsman on the strength of that knowledge without the general knowledge that is also required. And Alderman Dobbin promised to present the fact to the Minister of Railways and Canals, and it may be that Coppaway, the returned soldier, may realize the fulfillment of his dream.

THE STORY OF THE GEISHA

Quaint Comic Opera Will Be Presented at Grand Next Week

The [illegible] of the "Geisha" or the [illegible] of a Tea House," in the Grand Opera House next week in aid of the funds of the Progressive Club by Mr. R. J. Dewey will recall to some people the quaint story written by Mr. Owen Hall and set to music by Sydney Jones of the adventatic libretto will be new.

several officers of the Royal Navy stationed with their ship in far eastern waters. To many, however, the operhouse outside the limits of a treaty Wun-Hi, a Chinaman, runs a tea and in a weird fortune telling scene port, and the ship's officers when on leave make this a rendezvous. Lady Constance Wynne and her lady friends also discover the tea house, and Lieut. Fairfax, in company with a beautiful singing girl, which she resents as he is engaged to one of her guests, Molly Seamore. Marquis Imari, Governor of the Province, also discovers the officer with the singing girl he has set his heart on marrying, and angrily orders Wun Hi to be sold up, girls as well.

Molly Seymour comes to the house in a rickshaw, and in fun puts on a Jap kimona, not knowing of the sale and is sold off with the rest, becoming the property of Marquis Imari, who was outbid by Lady Constance for the girl he wanted. In the second act the ruined Chinaman and a French tea girl plot to restore the English girl to her friends, assisted by the chief Geisha, O-Mimosa San, and in a weird fortune telling scene frightens the governor into admitting the French girl into the palace, who, procuring the English dress for Molly Seamore, restores her to her friends and takes her place as the bride The score contains many beautiful numbers, notably, "The Amorous Goldfish," "A Geisha's Life," "Pearl of the Radiant Eastern Sea," "Star of My Soul," the "Jewel of Asia," "Toy Duck," "Chou Kina," "Toy Monkey," "Cling a Ring a Ree," and the "Interfering Parrot."

A Y.M.C.A. Membership is a great investment. Yearly fees are, Boys 10 to 15 years, $3; Intermediates 16-18 years, $4; Senior $6; Business Men's Sustaining, $10. Activities are adapted to men of all ages. Join during the contest Nov. 20-30.

Sir Hiram Maxim Died To-day

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Sir Hiram Stevens Maxim, aged 76, inventor of cordite and an automatic firearm, died here at 2.30 a.m. to-day. He started life as a wheelwrights apprentice.

PRESENTATION AT FAREWELL PARTY

On Wednesday a very pleasant evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reed, 171 Adaline street, on the occasion of Mrs. Reed's sister, Miss Edney, returning to her home in England, and to present her with a gold signet ring, gold chain and pendant, and a pair of kid gloves. The following address from her friends was also presented:

Dear Friend,—Will you kindly accept the small presents as a token of a great regard from the friends gathered here to-night to bid you goodbye on this your departure for the dear home-land. We trust they will remind you of the many happy days we have spent together, and we pray that you will have a safe and a pleasant voyage, and we all wish you well. God bless you ever.

Yours truly,
The Surprise Party.

Though dark clouds may gather over thee,
Never yield thee to despair;
The home-land has lots of sunshine,
There are kind friends everywhere.

GRIEF ENDED IN TRAGEDY.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Apparently having grieved herself into mental unbalance over the fact that her son, Guillard, 19, is fighting for France, Mrs. Albert Cassanave, wife of a chef, is believed to have etherized her husband and then inhaled the vapor until she was dead. Their bodies were found to-day in bed.

THE ARMY'S BULWARK

Backing the line across France held by the English and Canadians is a row of Y. M. C. A. shelters that have been described by the London Times as the "Bulwark of England." Some scores of Y. M. C. A. buildings, tents, dugouts, etc., are making happiness in the lives of our soldiers by providing heat, entertainment, games, athletics, letter writing facilities, religious activities, and innumerable personal services for the men.

Canada's army is served by over 500 Y. M. C. A. workers in Canada, England and France, of these twenty-three are Honorary Captains in England, and twenty-four in France, each of whom has several assistants.

"Already over thirty branches are operated in the Somme area, these plants running all the way from one equipment composed of canteen marquees, hut for writing, and a huge concert marquee, accommodating a couple of thousand men at a single spot, down to the tiny dugouts where not more than four or five can be allowed in at one time.

"One of the most interesting plants is carried on in a cellar of a much shelled city, frequently referred to in our Canadian papers, and strange to say this Y. M. C. A. handles more refreshments than any of the other forty-two with the Canadians in France."

HOW THE Y. M. C. A. SAVED THE LIVES OF BOYS AT THE FRONT

In a recent report Major C. W. Birk describes how front line canteen saved many lives during a drive by Germans.

Major Birks says:—

"The work being done in the large marquees, huts and cinema plants in these rests is excellent and is reaching thousands of men. The finest plant of this type is unquestionably Hancock's with two large marquees and a large hut forming an L, the balance of the quadrangle being given up to an outside gymnasium. It is, I think, without any question, the largest military Y.M.C.A., plant Overseas, if not in the entire British Army, and I think often a couple of thousand men must use it in an evening.

At the other end of the work are the dugout canteens, and in many ways they are the most attractive part of what is being done. The post advanced dugout is within a few yards of the front line trench, and of course all of them are, more or less, under shell fire, so that they have to be, of necessity, very small in size, and notices have to be put up advising the men against loitering, a rather unusual type of notice for the Y.M.C.A. to put up, but they are unquestionably meeting a very great need.

Every night these dugouts are visited by men who have been sent in from the more advanced trenches by their platoon commanders, each one arriving with a sack over his shoulder, and a list of the purchases to be made for each man in his platoon, a penny box of matches for this man, a two penny package of cigarettes for the next, stick of chocolate for a third, and so on down the whole list. These are all put in a bag and carried back before daylight, so that the German snipers may not prevent delivery, and then delivered to the boys crouching in the more advanced trench lines.

"In the drive which took place early in June, Wallace did a particularly fine piece of work in one of these dugouts, recognising at once that until the drive was over no more supplies could be brought in, and also recognising that the rations would be interrupted, he at once shut down the sale in the canteen and gave away his entire stock to the needy men, but in every case enquiring first when the individual had his last meal and when he might hope to get the next. In this way nothing was wasted, and as a result Capt. Trees who was working in one of the advanced dressing stations without break for 26 hours, tells me he believes many lives were saved, and the Y.M.C.A. organization has won a still warmer place in the affections of both officers and men.

Cottage Prayer Meetings

Non-Denominational

"The night cometh, when no man can work," Jno. 9, 4.

Go, labour on, spend and be spent;
Thy joy to do the Master's will;
It is the way the Master went.
Should not the servant tread it still?

Are there not many homes that need help even in Peterborough. We can get close to such cases in these cottage prayer meetings.

Prayer services will be held as below, beginning promptly at 8 o'clock:

On Friday evening, Nov. 24, at Mr. Truesdell's, 177 Edinborough street.

Trial of Mrs. Davis Cost Victoria County Over $400

County Councillors Claim That Peterborough County Should Pay This Bill—Peterborough Not Compelled to Refund Money—Council Expresses Its Disapproval of the Action of Police Magistrate.

LINDSAY, Nov. 24.—By having the murder trial of Mrs. May Davis in Lindsay the county will have to foot a bill of $360 and costs, the latter amounting to $60 for Crown witnesses.

This bill of expense created considerable discussion at the County Council, which is in session. Members of that worthy body claimed that the case should have been tried in Peterborough. A refund will be looked for from Peterborough.

The crime had been committed within five hundred yards of the boundary, although in Peterborough County. The arrest had been made by a Victoria County Constable, and as the case was too late for the assizes in Peterborough County, Victoria County had to try the case unless it was left over till the Spring Assizes. Peterborough County would have to pay the witness fees amounting to $60.00, but Victoria County would have to pay the jurors' fees, amounting to $300.00, as there was no provision in the act for the transference of jurors' fees from one county to another.

Reeve Hawkins claimed that the officials should have been more keen in looking after the interests of this county.

Reeve Wilson thought Peterborough County should be billed for this expense. They should at least pay a proportion of the expense, morally, if not according to law.

Mayor McLean favored sending a deputation to Peterborough Council next week in regard to settling the matter.

Thomas Jenkins — This 300 yards is common ground between the two counties, and Peterborough should bear its share of the expense.

Mr. Poor Business.

Messrs Hetherington and Adair commented that the case was hopeless as Peterborough was not compelled by law, and it would be simply throwing good money after bad by sending down a deputation.

Mr. McNeillie was then instructed to communicate with Peterborough, and ask them to take over this expense.

Reeve Tiers thought the matter should be dropped, as it was hopeless and showed poor business on the part of Victoria County.

Reeve McLean thought the Council should express their disapproval of the action of the Police Magistrate in allowing this case to come to Victoria County, with great expense, when it should have been tried in Peterborough, which had expressed its willingness previously to take the case from the start. He stated that the Council should express in a resolution its disapproval of the action of the Police Magistrate.

A motion fathered by Reeves McLean and Brock was put through to this effect.

TOBACCO FOR THE SOLDIERS

Effort Should Be Made to Give This Worthy Cause More Public Support Than It Has Been Getting

"The Battle of the Somme," which was shown in Peterborough this week, presented a striking endorsation of the work that is being accomplished by the Overseas Tobacco Club, a branch of which has been established in Peterborough. It is apparent that at all stages of military life from the time the soldier enters the trenches until he returns to Blighty as convalescent or possibly to the hospital that the cigarette is essential to the comfort of the soldier. One could not fail to be impressed by the evident appreciation of the soldier as he was handed a cigarette following the dressing of his wounds. The same applies to soldiers on the march, in the trenches and, in fact, at all stages of the game. The pictures presented in a practical and striking way the claims of the Overseas Tobacco Club. Persons interested in this worthy effort are invited to leave subscriptions at the Examiner Office or call and get collection books from Messrs. Dearle or O. Cranfield.

AN EXPLANATION

In connection with the seizure of meat made yesterday by the Health Officer, I beg to state that the meat in question was not killed by me, was not bought by me, and was not to be offered for sale in my shop. The parties handling the meat simply used a portion of my shop over night to hang it in until it was otherwise disposed of in the morning.

FATHER IS ALLOWED PENSION FOR DEATH OF SON, HIS SOLE SUPPORT

A pension of $24 a month has been officially awarded to Mr. Thos. Flemming, 26 McDonnell street, whose son, Private William Flemming of the 39th Battalion, was killed in action last spring. This is an unusual action by the Pension Board, and has been under consideration for months. Mr. Flemming's disabilities left him dependent upon his son, and the Board apparently made an exception in this case since pensions are only allowed to widowed mothers and wives.

THE SALE OF SUNDAY PAPERS

Windsor Deputation in Toronto To-day.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—Capt. J. F. Reeve and Mayor Jackson of Windsor called at Attorney-Generals office today to request that no prosecution be taken under the Lords' Day act for sale of Sunday newspapers in Ontario. They claim there is strong feeling in some Canadian cities that the sale of Sunday papers should not be interfered with. As Hon. I. B. Lucas was out of the city their call was in vain.

MORE GAINS FOR SERBS

LONDON, Nov. 24.—The Serbian official statement this afternoon asserted further advances had been made north of Monastir. In spite of the continued violent resistance Serbian troops have taken the village of Rapes.

THE WEATHER

Mr. Walter Peters' official barometer, at 8 o'clock last night, showed an unprecedented low register (28 inches) also forecasts of to-day's howling gale

SUCCESSFUL VISIT

Rev. Chas. G. Smith, B.D., of Belleville who has been in the city for the past two days in the interests of the Montreal Temple Fund has returned home after a very successful visit. Those who have not yet returned the cards left with them may hand them to the pastor of Murray Street church who will see that they reach their proper destination.

TELLS DYSPEPTICS WHAT TO EAT AND AVOID INDIGESTION.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, about nine times out of ten, are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach; therefore stomach sufferers should either avoid eating food that is acid in its nature or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity or they should continue to eat what they please in reason and then counteract or prevent the sour acid fermentation they create in their stomach by taking immediately after the meal a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any excess acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness you probably will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia as an aid to digestion and stomach. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation, which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could be possibly done by any drug or medicine that acts upon the stomach lining rather than the stomach contents. Get a little Bisurated Magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, and then notice how sour and sore if this isn't the best advice you ever had on the subject of eating.

WILL MEET THE RETURNED OFFICERS

The members of the Peterborough Club have been invited to meet Capt. H. A. Pearson and Capt. C. W. Bishop, overseas representatives of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A., on Monday evening the 27th inst., at 8 o'clock.

Capt. Pearson is an old Peterborough boy; was the first Y.M.C.A. captain to land in France, and had two years' experience at the front.

Capt. Bishop has just returned from the Somme.

These officers have a most interesting experience to relate and a full attendance of members is looked for.

Young men save your money to pay on a Y.M.C.A. membership during the ten-day contest Nov. 20-30. It will be your best investment of the year. 12d-115

THE WORLD OF SPORT

KINGSTON BATTERIES TO HAVE A TEAM

KINGSTON, Nov 23.—There are wonderful chances for a splendid hockey season in Kingston this coming winter, and there will doubtless be full advantage taken of the recent changes in O.H.A. regulations, which wave the resident rule in favor of soldiers. There was a most enthusiastic meeting of the representatives of the batteries at the Drydock barracks on Wednesday evening. The meeting was called to order by Major Bennett, and Capt. Leary then called for the reports of the committee. It was shown that two teams of very fast players could be secured, and the feeling of enthusiasm that has spread through the brigade was reported by the battery representatives.

The question of entering the Military District No. 3 Hockey League, which is being mooted by Major R. D. Sutherland, 253rd Battalion, met with a favourable response.

There was no decision arrived at, but matters for final consideration will be voted on at a meeting to be held on Friday evening. In all probability there will be at least a junior O.H.A. team entered and a team to contest in games with the 240th at Renfrew, 207th at Ottawa, 240th at Brockville, 235th at Belleville, 254th at Belleville, 253rd here, 235nd at Lindsay and the 247th at Peterborough, if each of these battalions puts up a team.

57TH CHAPTER I.O.D.E. MEETING

108 Pairs of Socks Sent During Month—Melting Pot Was a Success

At the regular monthly meeting of the 57th Chapter I.O.D.E., in the green parlour of the Y.W.C.A., last evening, a large number of members was present and Mrs. Duncan Walker, the regent, presided.

For the visiting committee Mrs. Sharpe reported 28 visits paid during the month; Miss Maud Rush reported seven families had been sent flowers; Miss F. Davidson reported the tea room would be reopened in the Masonic dining hall, over the Matthews-Blackwell store.

Mrs. Hay, convener of the Knitting Committee, reported 108 pairs of socks sent to Peterborough soldiers in the trenches, divided as follows: 2 pairs to Sig. Chas. Sharpe, 48th Battery; 4 pairs to Lt. Gordon Matthews, Trench Mortar Battery, and the remainder to Pte. R. T. Dorell, 109th Batt.; Lance-Corp. Wm. Lyburn 21st Batt.; Lt. M. Dunsford, 18th Batt.; Capt. H. B. Pickel, 58nd Battalion; Gr. M. L. Hardie, Ammunition Column; Gr. Bruce Sloan, 6th Battery. During the month 139 pairs socks were received and nine spindles of wool purchased at $7.50 a spindle. The committee is indebted to Mrs. Magie for a donation of pairs of socks, and to A Friend for a $1.00 donation. A letter from Lee Jeup, C. Mathias acknowledged receiving 2 pairs of socks. The ladies of Stewart Hall very generously donated 18 pairs of socks.

Reporting on the sale of old silver Mrs. H. Foote said the meetings were held at the home of Mrs. V. Eastwood. The silverware was cleaned, and the result was a very satisfactory sale. Thanks were due The Toronto Loan and Savings Co. for use of the store; Peterborough Utilities Commission, for light; Mr. J. Edgar, for wrapping paper; Adamson and Dobbin, for coal oil and services rendered. The committee wished also to thank Mrs. Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Eastwood, Mrs. Mason, and Miss Davidson for their excellent assistance, and the ladies who helped at the sale.

Mrs. Cottrell reported 41 boxes of Christmas Cheer sent to prisoners of war in Germany.

Votes of thanks were passed to Mr. Rowell, Mr. Renwick, Trustee Board of George Street Church, Mr. Peck, Miss Allen, the Press, Mr. Gillespie, Mr. Edgar and the ushers who assisted on the occasion of Mr. Rowell's address.

Votes of thanks were also extended to Mr. Might for the use of the tea room at the Turnbull building, the Masonic Lodges, for placing at the disposal of the Chapter, their dining hall; The Toronto Savings and Loan Co., Peterborough Utilities Commission, Mr. Edgar, and Adamson and Dobbin, who assisted on the occasion of the sale of old silver. The proceeds were $101.

Hearty votes of thanks were extended to the Ketchecum Club for a donation of $10; the ladies of Bridgenorth, per Mrs. Jobe, for 48 pairs of socks and 46 personal belonging bags, which will be forwarded to the soldiers.

Mrs. Widdifield gave an interesting paper on "The Founding of a Truly Imperial Order." Mr. Dobbin was to have addressed the meeting, but was detained elsewhere.

The next meeting will be held in January.

Mr. William Buller of the Inland Revenue Office, drawn attention to an article that appeared in a local evening contemporary, setting forth the claims of a grocer who alleges that many of the grocers are ignorant of the "Special War Revenue Act." "If that is true it is the fault of the grocers," says Mr. Buller. The Inland Revenue Department notified the secretary of the local Retail Grocers' Association of the requirements and also gave out more than sufficient printed notices to cover the entire city. In addition to this the department visited the majority of the grocers in the centre of the city and distributed literature covering the Act. It is not necessary to send to Ottawa or any outside place for information with an Inland Revenue office located right in this city.

THE PETERBORO BOWLING LEAGUE

A large crowd attended the match between the Grocers and Left-Overs. The Grocers won two games out of the three, putting them on an even basis with the Business Men. Solomon was high man for the Left Overs with a score of 305. Heard was high for the Grocers with 512. Heard and Hughes each pulled of a hard spare.

Grocers Are Very Wrathy

Government Order-in-Council is Called a Rank Piece of Class Legislation—Speaks of Kaiserism

ARE GOING TO REBEL

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—A strong criticism of the Government's recent order in Council purporting to embody regulations for the control of food prices was voiced by E. W. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants Association addressed the Ottawa Retail Grocers' Association last evening. Trowern stated that the merchants, who were the highest assessed class in Canada were discriminated against by the new order, and were singled out as being primarily responsible for the present high cost of living. He contended that if the Government had been sincere in its endeavors to deal with the problem, it should have included every class of citizen in the act.

"The former can increase his prices as he likes" stated the speaker," "labor can strike for increased wages. Teamers and contractors can increase their rates, and yet merchants cannot meet to consider what steps to take to meet the new conditions arising without the risk of facing a fine of $5,000. He went after Government for what he termed its practically non-existant trade and commerce department, which he stated was good for nothing, while you could go to agricultural department and ascertain how many sheep and cattle there were in any province, the Trade and Commerce Department could not even furnish figures as to how many retail merchants there were". And this in spite of the million upon millions of dollars worth of merchandise carried by the merchants throughout the country, said Mr. Trowern. "This new act is a rank piece of Class Legislation made up by an arrogant and unscrupulous Kaiser and his Satellite and we are going to rebel.

MILITARY NEWS

of the machine gun section of the 5th C.M.R., and formerly of the 93rd Battalion. Pte. Sandys, who is now in France, writes as follows:

"I received your letter and was glad to hear from you. I am sitting in my little dug-out writing to you miles away and am in the best of health. Thank the good Lord for His protection to me and the boys. I will soon be back in billets for a few days' rest. Scanlon and Moore are both well. Mr. Stewart did not come with us. He is still in England as batman for an officer. I get very lonesome sometimes, but I just pack it in my old kit bag and smile. I have never regretted that I enlisted, like some of them. I get along all right. Sometimes it is a very close call, but you must expect that these days. We are making great headway all the time. It can't last very much longer. There are just five of us in this section. It is not very often that I see any of the 93rd boys in this Battalion as we are on either the left or right of them. Of course if anything happens I always hear of it the next day. We get the very best of food and take turns in cooking it. We are singing tonight "Keep the Home Fires Burning." Everybody is happy for there is no use being any other way.

Pte. B. H. Sandys.

More Wounded Will Be Sent Back to Canada

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Preparations are being made by the Dominion Hospital Commission in conjunction with the overseas organization for the reception of largely increased numbers of various classes of wounded from England. The congestion in England could be considerably relieved while better and quicker recovery could be obtained in large proportion of men who need extended treatment were brought back to Canada and if a large number of the wounded who have been consigned to 'permanent base duty were sent home. These men of whom there are upwards of five thousand in England while temporarily at least unfit for active service are capable of engaging in civil life or in base duties.

LINDSAY DENIES CHARGE MADE BY ARTHUR MEIGHEN

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—G. G. S. Lindsay, Liberal K.C., who was mentioned by Solicitor-General Meighen, as negotiating with the International Nickel Co. to secure commissions for the sale of nickel to the Russian Government, to-day denied this charge. He said he had previously visited Russia and had seen large opportunities where business in Canadian nickel might be opened up between Canada and private Russian companies. He claimed he would have been entitled to commissions on such business, like any other agent, but it had nothing to do with the Russian Government. H. H. Dewart, K.C., would not make a statement.

MRS. BIRNIE'S RECEPTION.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. John Birnie (nee Miss Marguerite Sanderson) received for the first time since her marriage at her home on Brock street. Mrs. Hodgetts, Mrs. Birnie's sister-in-law received with her. Mrs. Birnie one of Peterborough's prettiest brides was very charming in her wedding gown of white Georgette crepe, with a beautiful bertha of Irish rose point lace, and carried a huge bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. Mrs. Hodgetts wore a pretty gown of geirgette crepe with bolero of white satin, with pearl trimmings. Mrs. Sanderson, mother of the bride was very handsome in a black velvet and Spanish lace gown. The reception room was very attractively finished with huge bouquets of yellow and flame colored chrysanthemums. A body of lovely young girls, prettily attired assisted in the tea room. The tea table with a beautiful cluny lace tea cloth and bouquet of russet 'mums was presided over by Miss Morrow, who wore a handsome gown of Burgundy Georgette crepe and ivory hat with touches of gold. Miss Ruth Robertson, who was very pretty in a white net gown with green sequined tunic and green toque, cut the ices. Those assisting in the tea room were: Mrs. Harry Thompson in a Betty-Brown dress of grey satin and picture hat to match, Miss Jessie Crossman in her bridesmaid's gown, of white crepe de chine, with quaker frills, Miss Dorothy Hill in a white taffeta dress and hat of grey velvet and silver lace, Miss Amy Clementi, in pale blue satin with black picture hat and Miss Esme Alymer in a green taffeta dress with touches of pale pink. During the afternoon, Mrs. Hodgetts, Omemee, rendered several solos which were much enjoyed.

Conservative Asperions Are Condemned

TORONTO, Nov. 24.— A strongly worded resolution condemning the persistent aspersion of Conservatives on the loyalty of the Liberal party, and the "unholy Conservative-Nationalist alliance" was unanimously passed today at the annual meeting of the General Reform Association of Ontario, which opened its session in the Temple Building this morning. Other resolutions passed with great enthusiasm congratulated Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. N. W. Rowell on the success of their leadership in the Federal and Provincial spheres and expressed unswerving confidence and loyalty in the two leaders.

The resolution which was the result of recent statements by Mr. W. K. McNaught and Ald. McBride, concerning the loyalty of the Liberals, was moved by Mr. W. O. Charlton, of Aylmer, and seconded by Mr. A. Cleard of Brockville.

DO GERMANY'S GAINS COMPENSATE LOSSES ON OTHER FRONTS?

British Staff Chief Asks Pertinent Question That Sheds Different Light on the Roumanian Situation—A Dangerous Blank Left by the Invaders.

LATEST MILITARY DEVELOPEMENTS

LONDON, November 25.—"It is for Hindenburg to decide, whether the gains of the German army in Roumania pay for the losses sustained on the other fronts by the withdrawal of divisions to operate there," said Major-Gen. F. B. Maurice, chief director of military operations of the war office, in discussing to-day the latest military developments.

"It is impossible and foolish to prophesy the outcome of the German campaign in Roumania," continued General Maurice, "but I can say the first efforts to cut through by the way of Predeal Pass have been a failure. Since that time the Germans have had to go a long way around, thereby giving the Roumanians time which they need.

"The Germans have a long line of communications to defend, while the rapid approach of midwinter operates in favour of the Roumanians.

"I will not undertake to say whether further successes by the Germans compensate them for their other losses. Since their venture began, the French at Verdun have regained much lost ground, and captured 6,000 prisoners, while we gained a considerable victory on the Ancre, with 7,000 prisoners, and the Italians took more ground on their front, as well as 5,000 prisoners.

"I have just returned from a visit to the scene of our late success, and can assure you we captured everything we set out to gain, despite the official German communiques asserting that we had much greater objectives in view."

DANGEROUS BLANK LEFT BY INVADERS.

PARIS, November 25.—Henry Bidou, military critic of the Journal des Debats, compares the German general, von Falkenhayn's attack with his right wing, which resulted in the taking of Craiova, to von Kluck's enveloping movement on Paris before the battle of the Marne. He declares that von Falkenhawn's strategy was to force the Roumanians' attention on his centre at Campolupg, while his right wing was rapidly and without supports sweeping on toward Bucharest. At the same time Field Marshal von Arz, in Moldavia, and Gen. von Mackensen, in Dobrudja, were fighting battles of demonstration, which, however, were to be, if possible, followed up.

LEAVES BIG BLANK.

M. Bidou then asks: "What is the situation to-day?" and replies, "While von Falkenhayn has succeeded in getting his envelopirg movement under way, he leaves a very dangerous blank between the army at Craiova and the central army, descending by the Oluta River. If the Germano-Bulgar armies wide and exposed to attacks by the Allies. If the Germano-Bulgar armies were closing up together as they came down to Bucharest, the situation for the Allies would be much more favourable."

Taking the two armies together, M. Bidou reckons that von Falkenhayn has twenty divisions to cover a front of 500 kilometres (210 miles), which, he says, are not nearly enough, if the Allies can attack anywhere en masse.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO RUN DOWN, NERVOUS, WEAK, ANAEMIC PEOPLE

Iron makes pale faces rosy, and phosphorus restore nerves, making you 100 per cent stronger in a few days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, digest well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to attain this glow of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested. then your bowels are unable to take any nutriment from the undigested food and the food begins to ferment, causing indigestion, the impurities run into your kidneys soon follows liver trouble, constipation, rheumatism, etc., and your skin becomes sallow, your nerves shake, you feel tired and all worn out. you take all sorts of medicines and you find nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorus to restore your nerves. First see how much you weigh: then go to your druggist and get some Bonized Phosphorus with Iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 100 per cent. stronger. The moment that Bonized Phosphorus with Iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By putting the iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Bonized Phosphorus with iron as spoken of here does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine, nor any poison which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. This is not a stimulant which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach liver and kidney complaints. Bonized Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed in this city only at either F. C. Weber's or McDermid & Jury's stores.

ALLIES IMPORTING LABOUR FROM CHINA

WASHINGTON, D.C., Nov. 24.—France and Russia, the American government has learned, are importing thousands of Chinese and Indo-Chinese to work in munitions factories and arsenals to free their native workmen for military duty. The number already put to work in French plants is estiamted at 20,000, with 30,000 more under contract by permission of the Chinese government for four years' service in France. Russia has contracted for 20,000, of whom 5,500 have reached the country.

Most of the Orientals are trained artisians, drawing wages in some instances as high as $5 a day. Specially chartered ships are moving them to France, while Russia is transportinf them by way of the Siberian railway.

brOi-uO anFvq.s, ,$of2 ....

The Indo-Chinese are being distributed largely among the munitions plants in the south of France. Already more than three thousand are at St. Medard, seven hundred are working at Bassens, five hundred at the Toulouse Arsenal, three hundred in the Toulouse Powder Mills, nine hundred in the Tarbes Arsenal and several thousand of Chinese and Indo-Chinese in the smaller plants and agricultural pursuits. Some of the more highly skilled men are in aeroplane factories.

Washington officials are watching the Allies' experiment closely, interester particularly in the outcome of the introduction of Oriental labor into modern labor conditions and into more or less modern factory surroundings. Some significance is attached to the fact that both France and Russia have contracted for the imported labor for four years.

Reports reaching Washington declare that if the trial proves satisfactory neither France nor Russia will stop at the seventy thousand men contracted for. Labor conditions in the Shanghai, Hongkong and Canton districts are said to be already badly disturbed by the allied drafts.

GERMAN NEWSPAPER ACCUSER OF GRAVES

Frankfort Gazette Says He is Max Meincke, With a Record of Arrests —He Denies the Charges—Self-Confessed Spy Asserts He Headed a College for Kaiser's Secret Service.

CARRIED CIPHER CODES

According to the Frankfort Gazette, "Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves," who describes himself as an international spy of worldwide fame, at one time in the confidence of the highest officials of Germany, including the Kaiser himself, is in reality Max Meincke, at one time connected with a more or less private detective agency in Brussels. A recent issue of the paper, reviewing his career, asserts that Graves, or Meincke, has never been connected with the German Secret Service.

According to the story as told by the Gazette, Graves has served terms in prison in both Germany and in Great Britain. John. J. Halligan, his lawyer, of 302 Broadway, admitted recently that Graves had been sentenced to eighteen months in Scotland several years ago, and also that his client had been sentenced four months in jail in Bulgaria prior to his conviction in Scotland. On both occasions, he added, the offense was one of espionage undertaken in behalf of and at the instigation of the German Government.

Mr. Halligan said that Graves had told him that he had used the name Meincke as an alias while working as a spy in Belgium before the present war started.

EDUCATED TO BE A DENTIST.

On Monday Graves appeared in the Supreme Court of New York County and announced his intention of becoming an American citizen. In his application he gave the name under which he is known in this country, said that he was born in "Central Europe," was a subject of the late Franz Josef, and that he was born May 7, 1878.

"'Dr. Armgaard Karl Graves,'" the article in the Frankfort Gazette reads, "who has been lecturing and writing books against Germany in the United States, is Max Meincke, who was born in Berlin May 7, 1882. He studied dentistry for a time and was later in the employ of a merchant. In 1898 he left Germany for the first time.

"In 1911 he appeared in Wiesbaden as 'A. K. Graves, M.D.,' and on May 27 of the same year was sentenced in a German court to six months' imprisonment, but before the sentence was imposed he fled to Stettin. Meincke first asserted while examined in court that he had earned the title of doctor of medicine at the University of Adelaide in Australia, and that his right to the name 'Graves' was due to the fact that he had been adopted by a Major Graves in Tavistock, West Australia.

"Investigations by the proper authorities disclosed that no such person as the Major Graves mentioned by Meincke existed and furthermore that there was no town in Dest Australia called Tavistock. When confronted with these facts Meincke admitted that he had been exaggerating.

CIPHER CODES LEAD TO ARREST.

"While still living in Wiesbaden Meincke endeavoured to attract attention to himself by veiled allusions to acts involving espionage which he said he had accomplished. Subsequently he left Germany and went to Scotland and in 1913 was arrested at Glasgow, tried, and sentenced to serve eighteen months in prison for having in his possession ciphers which he refused to decipher."

"All of these statements against my client," said Mr. Halligan, "are inspired by the German Government. He may have been known as Meincke in Brussels and probably was. Dr. Graves tells me that he had so many aliases that he has forgotten some of them, and that the name Meincke may be among those which have slipped his memory. Any statement that he has served several terms in German prisons is false and nobody knows that better than do the German authorities.

"When he was in Belgium before the war he was not there in the employ of any private detective agency, but as the agent of the German Government, sent there to get military maps of the country. He was sent to England for the same purpose and would have succeeded but for the fact that he was betrayed by an enemy at the German court, who wanted him out of the way. That enemy was very close to Crown Prince Frederick William. He did not serve the sentence imposed in Scotland, but was released for 'reasons of state' by the British Government."

A copy of the article which appeared in the Gazette has been placed in the hands of the United States naturalization authorities in New York and it was said that in the event Graves applied for full citizenship he would be asked to explain certain statements made in the article. Up to the present he has only asserted that it is his "intention" to apply for citizenship.

Dr. Graves is at liberty under $2,000 bail, charged with having attempted to blackmail the Countess von Bernstorff, wife of the German Ambassador. He says he has certain cipher letters addressed to, but not intended, he says, for the Countess.

STORY IS MALICIOUS, SAYS GRAVES.

Dr. Graves issued the following statement in regard to the article in the Frankfort Gazette:

"The whole article is malicious and unfair, and I do not wish at present to make a detailed statement in regard to it. I will, however, call attention to certain points which I want to make clear.

"First, concerning the assertion that I was ever connected with a detective agency in Brussels: I was there as the head of an institution, a college of philosophy, the funds of which were supplied by the German Government, and the Faculty of which were my subordinates in the Imperial Secret Service.

"Second, as to my serving terms in English prisons: I was caught, tried, and convicted in 1912 in England as a German spy, and, after fighting the British Government to a standstill, when I was convicted I admitted that I had had a fair and square trial. The British Government is not in the habit of convicting any man without an exhaustive trial, and if the British Government found me guilty of being a German spy you may rest assured that a German spy I was.

"Third, I was never convicted in Bulgaria. I was arrested there and released after forty-eight hours.

"Fourth, as regards the statement about my veiled allusions to espionage made in Weisbaden: This must seem a joke to any one acquainted with German officialdom, for no one with even the slightest suspicion of espionage attached to him would be able to travel 100 metres in Germany, especially in Prussia."

Wheat Prices Off a Little

Absence of Export Buying and Increase in Visible Supply Contributed to the Decline

THE CATTLE MARKET

Wheat markets showed further weakening yesterday, the effect of more talk as to the probability of an embargo on U. S. food exports, and an absence of export buying. Indications also point to an increase in the visible supply next week. Chicago December option, was off 2 1-4c, and Winnipeg November off 2 5-8c, and December off 3-4. Cash prices were off 3c at bay ports yesterday. Ontario steady.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 Northern, $2.10 1-2, track, bay ports; No. 2, $2.06 3-4; No. 3 $2.01 3-4; No. 4 $1.85 1-2; old crop 4c above new crop.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W. 71 1-2c; No. 3 70 1-4c; No. 1 extra feed, 70 1-4c; No. 1 feed, 70c.

American corn—No. 2 nominal; No. 3 new, $1.05 1-2; immediate shipment track, Toronto.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white 68c to 68c; No. 3 white, 65c to 67c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, per car lot, $1.82 to $1.84; No. 3 $1.80 to $1.82.

Peas—No. 2 nominal car lots $2.50.

Hay—Baled, No. 1, track Toronto, best grade, new hay, car lots, 13 to $14; No. 2 $11 to $12; straw, $9 to $10.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Total receipts of cattle at the two Toronto markets were this week again over 12,500 head, while receipts of sheep, lambs, hogs, and calves were also heavy. For all the heavy receipts, following equally large receipts for the past month or more, the demand continues strong and active, and prices hold firm at slight advances in the past couple of weeks. Receipts of heavy, fat steers have not been proportionately large, feeders evidently holding many back for the Christmas trade. Choice handy butcher cattle also have not been coming forward any too freely, the past two or three markets being rather short of the demand than otherwise in this class, with prices tending proportionally higher. Receipts of canners and cutters have been exceedingly heavy, but the market readily absorbs all that come and at good prices.

Sheep and lambs hold very firm, and were a little higher on the closing market. Hogs hold comparatively steady but firm.

CATTLE RECEIPTS.

Toronto Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week, 781 cars, with 10,686 cattle, 1,119 calves, 16,291 hogs, 6,891 sheep and lambs, and 936 horses.

City Cattle Market—84 cars with 1,613 cattle, 1,419 sheep and lambs, 506 hogs, 70 calves, and 28 horses.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"That may suit you." Now the boy's vehemence was fully unleashed. "You may be willin' to die fightin' for a couple of cows and a few hundred rocks that you bump your knees on when you try to plow. As for me, I ain't! When I fight, I want it to be a fight that counts, for a reward that is worth winnin'."

The bearded face darkened with the hard intolerance of the patriarchal order, an order which brooks no insubordination. But the lad spoke before the words of discipline found utterance.

"Let me finish, father, before you say anything. What I have got to say is somethin' that ain't just come into my mind. It's somethin' that's kept me awake o' nights an' I've got to say it. I've sat here and listened, as I ain't put in my oar, but I can't be mussled, an' you, might as well hear me out—because there ain't power enough in the world to stop me."

"An' supposin'—" Tom Burton spoke brusquely, yet with something more like amusement in his eyes than had previously been shown there — "supposin' I aint' inclined to listen to you?"

"Then you will force me to leave you here—an' you can't hardly get on without me."

"You mean you'd run away?"

"I'd hate to, but once I was gone to. I stayed because you needed me."

"I guess I could keep a watch on you, if I had to," announced the father shortly.

"You couldn't keep a ball and chain on me," retorted the son. "I would not be much use that way about the farm."

The elder Burton very deliberately lighted his pipe. Like many men who fly suddenly into passions at nothing, he had the surprising facultay of remaining calm when anger might be expected. Now he said only, "Let's hear your notion, son. What's been keepin' you awake o' nights?"

"It hasn't been just thinkin' about myself that done it," began Ham, steadying his voice, though it still held a throb of fervor which neither his father nor his mother had ever heard before. "I've been thinkin' about all of you. You an' mother are workin' your fingers to the bone an' your poor hearts to the breakin' point — for what? Just now you sent Mary away cryin' to bed because she wanted to be pretty. Why shouldn't she want to be? Isn't it part of a woman's mission? You call a thing vanity that's just havin' some life an' ambition in her heart. What's life got in store here for Mary or for Paul or for me? We're startin', not endin' up. We have our ambitions. If we stay here Mary will be drudgin' till she dies. Paul's got the soul of a great musician, an' he might as well be dead right now as to stay here, an' as for me I'd a heap rather be dead."

"Oh, I see," commented Tom Burton very drily. "You figure that it will be pleasanter for us to move into a palace somewhere an' have a dozen or two servants waitin' on us. All right; where's the palace comin' from?"

Ham spoke in absolute confidence. "I'll get it for you—as many palaces as you want," he declared with steady eyed effrontery; "if only you give me the chance. All I ask is this. For God's sake, take the chain off me—let me get into the fight."

Ham Burton was a tall and well-thewed lad for his age. His muscle fiber had drawn strength from the ax and the log-pole but as yet it had not become heavy with decades of hard labor. He still stood slender and gracefully tapering from shoulders to his waist and just now there was something trance-like in his earnestness, which made wild prophecies seem almost inspired. The hard headed father eyed him with good-humored irony.

"And how do you figure to get us all these things, son?" he inquired.

"I'll show you," came the quick and undoubting response. "All I want you to do is to leave this place and educate me. Every year you stay here you are spendin' part of what you've laid by, an' none of it ever comes back—gamble it on me, and I'll attend to all the rest."

At that the bearded farmer broke into a loud laugh.

"I reckon you're fixed to give me a written guarantee, ain't you?" he demanded. "But maybe just for the sake of makin' talk you had better tell how you know you can swing such a man-sized contract."

"I know"—the lad's voice mounted into a positive crescendo of conviction—"I know by somethin' that tells me, an' it's somethin' that can't lie. The prophets knew that God picked 'em out because He told 'em so in visions. I haven't just heard voices in dreams, I've had the voice in me and I know—know I tell you—that, with a chance I can be as great a man as any man ever was. I'm not guessin' or deludin' myself. I tell you I know! I've always known."

"I reckon, Ham," said the father gravely, "I can tell you the name of this thing that has been informin' you how great a man you can get to be. It ain't nothin' under God's heaven but self-conceit."

But the boy swept on. "Napoleon's first friends were folks that ran a laundry, but afterwards kings couldn't talk to him unless he gave 'em permission. John Hays Hammond, Carnegie, Rockefeller, Frick, were all poor boys. None of these men had any better blood in their veins that I've got in mine, an' if you want to call it that, none of 'em had any more self-conceit."

"I reckon you have got enough blood to have better sense," observed the father shortly. Then with a very human inconsistency he added, "I do not often brag about it, but my middle name is Standish and Miles Standish was an ancestor of mine."

"And my name," retorted the boy, "is Hamilton, and Alexander Hamilton's family were ancestors of my mother's. I reckon that neither of those men would feel very proud to see us settin' down here, wearin' our lives away in a country where the ends won't meet."

"This dammen foolishness has gone far enough," ruled the elder in a voice of finality, his amusement suddenly giving away once more to sternness. "I've listened to you because you seemed to be full of talk an' I was willin' to let you get it off your chest but I don't need counsel from any cub of a boy. I am nigh on to 50 years old an' I've run my family all these years. I had brains enough to get on with before you was born an' if you have got all the sense that you think you've got, you got it from your be twenty-one you'll do what I bid mother and me. Until you get to you. Heretofore, you've done it willin'ly. I hope that you will go on doin' it that way—but if you don't I guess I'm still man enough to make you. Now go to bed—an' go quickly."

The lad flushed to his cheekbones, and for a moment he made no move to obey. Under the tyrannising manner of his father's voice his spirit rose in rebellion. Tom Burton stroke over and his attitude was threatening.

"Did you hear what I said to you?" he inquired. "Are you goin' by yourself or have I got to take up upstairs?"

Slowly and with a strong self-mastery, Ham came to his feet. "I'll go to bed now," he replied quietly, "because it would be a pity for us to quarrel—but I have got a few more things to say, and after a while, I guess you'll have to listen to 'em. We will talk about this thing some more."

"We'll talk about it some more—when I get good an' ready—if I ever do—an' if I don't we won't never talk about it any more. Go to bed!"

When the lad disappeared up the stairway he left a long and constrained silence behind him. From his mother's chair, came a sound that hinted at secret weeping, and at last Tom Burton straightened his hunched shoulders and gazed across at young Edwardes, whose eyes were no longer smiling but very sober.

"I hope you're satisfied now," said the host bitterly. "You've played merry hell with this family. Yesterday my son did my bidding without question. My daughter was an obedient child an' a natural one without foolishness. You've been under my roof for three hours an' my house rises rebellious against me in my old age. And you hear a name that's always stood for order an' wisdom—not for stirrin' up trouble. I reckon I ought to turn you out now in the snow, but I won't—I only hope you're satisfied."

"Mr. Burton," answered the young millionaire quietly, "I should be sorry to have you think that. If I have kindled a spark in little Mary that you never saw before it is nothing of which either you or she need feel ashamed. As for the boy, it was not I who incited him. He has been suppressing thoughts until now they have reached the point of eruption, that's all."

He paused, then added very thoughtfully: "Even if I did influence them both, it was as the unconscious tool upon which the hand of Destiny chanced to fall. The boy only seeks fulfilment; fulfilment that will make life better for all of you—if he succeeds."

"Yes—if he succeeds. All he's got to do is to start out empty-handed and lick the world to a frazzle. All I've got to do is to gamble the little savings of twenty five years of frugal living on his being able to do it."

"That," said Edwardes, "was hardly what I meant. If you will let me make one suggestion, since you credit me with already having done so much, it is this. That boy may be or may not be, the genius he thinks himself, but he's got a brain that drives and torments him. He thinks! If you will treat him as a counsellor and argue with him without sternness it will pay you. The final decision will rest with you, but let him argue. Don't choke him off and make a vassal of him instead of a son. His type of brain can not be leashed."

The father sat moody and did not at once reply. Finally he shook himself out of his reverie and repeated: "Argue with him? How can a man argue with a boy that thinks he's a genius and a miracle-worker? Besides, while he's gabbin' nonsense he can look at you with somethin' in his eyes that makes you feel like a fool."

"Let me remind you of one thing." The young man from the outer world spoke very quietly. "The chapters of history that stand out in boldest relief are chapters dealing with men who were miracle-workers, men who had something in their eyes that dominated other men. I have been reared close enough to the centre of financial achievement to have seen something of that. Perhaps that boy of yours is born with the stamp of victory upon him—who knows? Given the chance, he may fulfill his own visions. Both of your sons are dreamers, but the elder may be a doer of dreams as well as a dreamer of the dreams. He's an unquenchable flame. Don't force him to smoulder until he bursts into a blaze. Give him a chance to talk. Give him a safety valve."

Tom Burton drew his brows close over perplexed and baffled eyes; eyes full of foreboding and anxiety. His voice was full of bewilderment.

"What does it all mean?" he murmured half aloud. "What's the cause of all these voices an', protests where everythin's been quiet and peaceable up to now? Why, ain't we never heard nothin' about all this before if it's such a big thing and the thing the Lord attended?" He gazed about him helplessly and with the face of one who sees omens and cannot construe them, but who feels a nameless fear of their portent.

"At all events," reiterated the guest "you will do well to hear what the boy wants to say, and now I will bid you good night."

When he had gone, the older man sat in thought for a while, and when next his voice broke the silence, it was in a much softer timbre, a voice tinged with tenderness.

"Mother," he called in an undertone, and the woman who had borne his children and stood shoulder to shoulder with him through the years of fight, came over and knelt at his knee. He took her hand and held it for a while in silence, and then he said a little brokenly: "Mother, when we first came here from the little church down there, this house looked pretty good to us, didn't it?"

"To me, Tom," she said softly, "it has always looked good."

"Do you remember," he went on irrelevantly, "when we brought that slip of vine from the mountain, and planted it by the porch? It's over the roof now."

The woman only pressed his hand; and after a moment he went on.

"There are a couple of graves out there in the churchyard that I'd hate mightily to leave."

"The two we lost," she whispered.

"An' yet maybe if we stay here we will lose them all." Tom Burton was making a decided effort to hold his voice steady.

"Don't—don't Tom," protested the woman.

"When you married me, Elisabeth," he went on with the air of one resolved to take full account, "I reckon you could have done a good deal better, it's been a long fight here an' a hard one?"

"I've been happy," she told him.

Why Best for Babies?

"Granny" Chamberlain

"I am often asked why Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is best for babies. Well, there are several reasons:

First: It is perfectly harmless and can be given with every confidence to the youngest or most delicate child.

Secondly: It contains no alcohol, opium, chloroform, morphine or any other narcotic.

TIRING DAYS

OXO—Ready in a moment

The fatiguing duties which ladies in every class of society are performing now-a-days have emphasised in a wonderful degree the recuperative power of Oxo Cubes.

It is remarkable how quickly a cup of Oxo will revive and strengthen you after the fatigue of a long day. Hardly less remarkable is its convenience in the form of Oxo Cubes. A touch of the bell, and in almost less time than it takes to remove your gloves, a cup of Oxo is ready

Many ladies make a point of having a cup of Oxo before they leave home. It fortifies them against the cold and is wonderfully sustaining.

A Cube to a Cup

Tins of 4, 10, 50 and 100 Cubes.

OXO CUBES

A BLOOD-FOOD DISCOVERED THAT ENTIRELY OVERCOMES ANAEMIC WEAKNESS

CAREFULLY INVESTIGATED REPORTS ESTABLISH TRULY WONDERFUL RESULTS.

Heretofore it has often been a hopeless task for a thin-blooded person to gain either strength or weight. Neither food or medicine in many instances had beneficial effect.

What is practically a perfect blood-food, containing such elements as Iron, has at last been produced, and when taken after meals will put new life and vigor into people that have despaired of ever being strong again.

This truly wonder-working treatment consists of taking two small chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets at the close of every meal.

This wonderful blood-food supplies nourishment, vim, energy — sends a stream of vigorous, strength-making blood to every nook and corner of the body, makes every muscle and fibre sing with new-found life and health.

That gnawing tiredness leaves you—Ferrozone drives it away. Sleepless nights are turned into periods of rest, and you pick up fast. Day by day your appetite improves,—this means more food is transformed in nutriment that will build and energize weak organs. The inclination to worry passes away because Ferrozone imparts nerve — tone and bodily strength that prevents depression.

Think it over—Ferrozone is a wonderful tonic, in fact, it is more than a tonic, because it establishes health that lasts. Thousands use it and thereby cleanse and restore the entire system to a perfect condition. You'll feel the uplifting power of Ferrozone in a week,—it's bound to help you if you only give it the chance. Sold by all dealers, 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50; be sure of the name Ferrozone. Forwarded by mail to any address if price is remitted to The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

SAY SOMETHING GOOD.

Pick out the folks you like the least
and watch them for awhile;
They never waste a kindly word, they never waste a smile,
They criticise their fellowmen at every chance they get;
They never found a human jut to suit their fancy yet.
From them I guess you'd learn some things, if they were pointed out,
Some things that every one of us should know a lot about.
When some one "knocks" a brother,
pass around the loving cup,
Say something good about him, if you have to make it up.

It's safe to say that every man God made holds trace of good
That he would fain exhibit to his fellows if he could;
The kindly deeds in many a soul are hibernating there,
Awaiting the encouragement of other souls that are
To show the best that's in them and a universal more
Would start the whole world moving in a hopeful, helpful groove.
Say something swegt to paralyse the "knocker" on the spot.
Speak kindly of his victim if you know the man or not.

The eyes that peer and peer to find the worst a brother holds;
The tongue that speaks in bitterness,
that frets and fumes and scolds,
The hands that bruise the fallen, though their strength was made to raise
The weaklings who have stumbled at the parting of the ways,
All these should be forgiven, for they "know not what they do;"
Their hindrance makes a greater work for wiser ones like you;
So, when they scourge a wretched one who's drained sin's bitter cup,
Say something good about him, if you
have to make it up.

HOME HEALTH CLUB.

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

NIGHT AIR: Dr. Burriaster, the secretary of the Children's National Tuberculosis Society, never said a truer thing than this: "The only night air that is injurious is last night's; open the window and let in out."

Dr. Victor G. Heiser, Medical Director in the United States Health Service, states that observations made from his sleeping car in the early morning of five successive days failed to show a single open window in the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan and New York—and this was among intelligent and well to do people.

The average persons spends one-third of life in sleep—twenty or more years for those who attain to old age. The sanitary conditions that surround this long period of partly suspended activity of mind and body must have the greatest influence on the health of the individual. Fresh air is one of the things which should be the common property of all. In the congested districts of the large cities it is often unobtainable. In most other places its exclusion from the house during the cold months of the year is the result of ignorance, prejudice, or vicious, inherited custom. Physicians are now recognising the fact that cool, fresh air is the most important factor in the cure of pulmonary diseases, especially pneumonia and tuberculosis, and as it is always easier to prevent a disease than to cure it, by this same means and more effectually, may these and other diseases be guarded against by strengthening the body against them.

The habit of sleeping in a cool bedroom should be taught in early childhood, but may be quickly acquired by nearly everyone at any age, and when the habit is once acquired it is practically never abandoned. Fresh air sleepers cannot sleep in stuffy rooms. Everyone cannot have a sleeping porch but all may open a window at the top, letting the used air go out at the top and the fresh air enter between the sashes. Ventilation by opening a door is no ventilation. The air of the house is stale and frequently filled with harmful gases. Do not be afraid of the night air.

What a different world is this seen through the senses of the healthy man from that seen through senses dulled by disease or stupefied by stuffy, closed, sleeping rooms. As he rises from his slumbers he feels refreshed and delights to see the new day that has just overcome the night. The song of the birds calling to their mates is sweet to his ears. He looks forward to his daily labors with a heart full of good cheer. Breakfast is relished. The dishes prepared by the housewife or cook are delicious to his palate. He enters upon his daily work with a clear brain and a steady hand. The engineer after looking over his locomotive, jumps into the cab and seizes the throttle with a strong grip and a mind intent upon the track. The mother washes and dresses her little brood singing as merrily as the robin in the tree, and looking forward to a day of joy in their sweet care and companionship. The banker finds that the problems and anxieties which oppressed him when he laid his weary head on the pillow have slipped away, leaving his mental vision clear and unobstructed. And so under the touch of the magic wand of the bright eyed goddess of health the good old world goes spinning merrily around on its daily course.

But let sickness paralyse the hand and pain wring the brow, then how different the awakening. All nature is shrouded in a pall. Gone is the zest for food. The languid muscle is vainly urged to its accustomed task. The confused brain shrinks from the daily problem. The care of the child becomes a burden insupportable. The sunshine loses its brightness, the landscape is dull and deadly, and the sounds of commerce and industry distress and annoy. The singing of the birds and the prattle of the children only grate the sensitive ear. Business problems look hopeless, the country is going to the dogs and life is a slough of despond.

ing on the collar, cuffs and pockets.

Imitations of the quilting idea have also been carried out in heavier materials. For instance, a very good looking full length coat was worked with heavy navy blue silk in the diamond shaped quilted design on a mustard-colour background. The large square pockets were entirely covered with this work, a touch of it was on the cuffs, and the collar also had some of it. Mustard is one of the very popular colours for separate coats. Numbers of them are seen at present, some unrelieved by any trimming, and others with a lane of Hudson seal or other black furs. Some of them also have bands of fur at the edge of the sleeves or of the coat itself.

New Russian Blouses.

Russian Blouses are gaining a stronger hold day by day and they have become so universally popular that the name now stands for almost any kind of a blouse that has a peplum. The high collar and side closing which once typified the Russian blouse are no longer symbols of it, for this blouse has taken on manifold new forms. Many of them slip on over the head or are opened in front revealing a contrasting vest; and as to the high collar, it has been quite usurped by the flat rolling collar Some very dainty models are of Georgette in the prevailing suit colours trimmed with gold or silver thread embroideries. The peplums are sometimes finely pleated, sometimes gathered, and very often they are adorned with little fancy pockets. Blouses of this type are made up for dressy wear and they are not only in self-toned Georgettes and chiffons but in flowered and Oriental designs in these sheer fabrics. They are worn with suits or separate skirts.

Black satin and black velvet are very smart for separate skirts. Some pretty striped velvets with coloured stripes on a black background are also used for skirts, and they are wonderfully attractive

OLD FASHIONED QUILTING BECOMES A MODERN TRIMMING

Fashion Uses It on Frocks, Suits and Even Coats

NEW FORMS OF THE RUSSIAN BLOUSE

NEW YORK, November 25.—Little did our grandmothers dream when they sat together and worked and gossiped at their quilting-bees that the quilting they did then would furnish inspiration for dress trimmings for the women of to-day!

Certainly, the quilting trimming is a very novel idea from the fertile brain of our modern designer. It is generally used in bands at the lower edges of skirts and suit coats and is also used as a decoration for collars, cuffs and pockets. The work is done in machine-stitching and usually the same colour silk as the background is used.

The sketch above illustrates the conventional diamond-shaped design, but other designs of a less conventional character are also utilized. In this attractive one-piece frock of satin, the belt and the lower edge of the skirt are quilted. Some suits of satin and silk have been seen with quilt-

THE COMFORT OF BEING A BOY.

There is comfort to be a boy in the amount of work he can get rid of doing. It is something astonishing how slow he can go on an errand; perhaps he could not explain to himself why, when he is sent to the neighbors for yeast, he stops to stone the frogs.

He is not exactly cruel but he wants to see if he can hit them. It is a curious fact about boys that two will be a great deal slower about doing anything than one. Boys have a power of helping each other do nothing. But say what you will about the general usefulness of boys, a farm without a boy would soon come to grief. He is always in demand. In the first place he is to do all the errands, go to the store, post office and carry all sorts of messages. He would like to have as many legs as a wheel has spokes and rotate in the same way. This he sometimes tries to do, and people who have seen him turning cartwheels along the side of the road have supposed that he was amusing himself and hiding his time. He is only trying to invent a new mode of locomotion so he could economize his legs and do his errands with greater despatch. Leap frog is one of the methods of getting over the ground quickly. He has a natural genius for combining pleasure with business.

SOUR OR SWEET.

That's the question my brother, and it's not a mean one, either, for many of us had rather take a dose of salts than walk with your long-to-a-tail feeling. Your dyspeptic brain, torpid conscience and sour disposition make you anything but agreeable company. You are called a Christian, too. Well, perhaps, you are but the fact is not believed by many on earth. Possibly you may console yourself with the thought that they know it in heaven. I doubt it.

Why go through the world always in a fog? You dishearten many, give others the blues and keep scores under clouds of doubt and darkness. You make out that the path of the just is not "as a shining light," that the way is one of gloom, hard and difficult. The way of the transgressor is hard but surely not the path of obedience in which you claim to be walking.

Swing around, my brother, and get your eye off of self, "rejoice evermore." Give up your sourness; quit looking like a graveyard. Take the sunny side of the street. Laugh once in a while. Get off your stilts, and walk with humble folks, cheer up, tone up, wake up and see if milk is not better than vinegar, or in other words, if it is not better to be sweet than sour.

You, who are anxious to escape from the home nest, pause a moment and remember that this is so. Nobody, not a lover, not a husband, will ever be so tender or so true as your father or mother. The "Live a Little Longer" Idea

IN Rochester, N.Y., there has been formed an association the object of which is to promote the "Live a Little Longer" idea. It aims to encourage men and women to give attention to their health, and by preventive methods to avoid serious disease and add years of happiness to their lives.

This idea is suited to people of all ages, but seems particularly applicable to persons of advancing years who feel their vitality on the wane. It is truly wonderful what is accomplished by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food under these circumstances.

By forming new, rich blood, and nourishing the starved, wasted nerve cells, it instils new life and vigor into the vital organs and enables them to perform their natural functions.

This means new strength and comfort, freedom from pain and disease, and longer life. This letter gives you some idea what old people may expect from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. Sophia Baker, Tracook Island, Lunenburg Co., N.S., writes:—"I have been reading about people who have been cured by Dr. Chase's medicine, and as I have obtained great benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I want to tell you my experience. I am an old woman of 80 years. My sleep was very poor, I could not eat anything, and my nerves were in a bad state. Hearing about the Nerve Food, I decided to use it, and must say that the five boxes I took helped me wonderfully. I never expect to be like I was at 50, but this treatment has helped me to sleep well, improved the appetite and built up the nerves. Anyone who wishes can write to me for full particulars.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S PLAY DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7900

The pockets in this little dress supply a note of interest and novelty to girls' attentive wants, but its cut and fit will also appeal to the mother of the small girl. It is in combination effect, supporting the claim that the vogue for contrasting goods in all children's wear will enjoy as great success during the winter as it did in summer.

Above the waist line this little play dress fits neatly, but below that point it falls loosely and the fulness is unconfined. The neck is finished with a small rolled collar in contrasting color and the novelty pockets are of the same material.

If you do not care for the short sleeves you may make long ones with a wrist band and cuff, as the pattern allows for both. The fastening is at the back.

In favored material this little garment should be included in the winter wardrobe for the girl up to six years of age. The making of it is a matter of about a half hour.

The pattern, No. 7900, is cut in sizes 2, 4 and 6. To make the medium size will require 1¾ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard contrasting goods. It obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

GERMAN PRISON CAMP AS DESCRIBED BY U. S. WRITER

(By D. Thomas Curtin).

Getting at the facts in Germany is almost as difficult a task as conveying these facts out of Germany when you have got them.

Since the Germans began to find the war going against them, since, in particular, the English and French made large captures of Prussian Guard and other corps d'elite soldiery, a number of really excellent camps have been arranged to which neutral visitors are taken.

Before describing a visit to one of these great towns of prisoners, for that is what they are, I would like to repeat my conviction that now you have a balance of German prisoners here Germany will, for fear of reprisals, treat your men better than in the past. This view is borne out in an article in the Frankfurter Zeitung quoted in the Times, dealing, as the Times says, in a tone of unctuous self-satisfaction with the treatment by Germany of their two million captives.

The world does not need reminders such as that of Wittenberg or of so singularly accurate narratives as several in Blackwood's Magazine to know what has happened to English prisoners in Germany.

It is common knowledge throughout the German Empire that the most loathsome tasks of the war in connection with every camp or cage are given to the English. Conversations that I have had here in London about your prisoners give me the impression that the British mind does not exactly apprehend what a prisoner stands for in German eyes.

Scale of Values.

First, he is a hostage. If he be an officer his exact social value is estimated by the authorities in Berlin, who have a complete card index of all their officer prisoners, showing to what British families they belong and whether they have social or political connections in England. Thus when someone in England mistakenly, and before you had sufficient German prisoners in your hands, treated certain submarine marauders in different fashion from other prisoners, the German Government speedily referred to this card index, picked out a number of officers with connections in the House of Lords and House of Commons, and treated them as convicts.

Now that you have in your hands a great number of officers, some of them of distinguished German families, and also with royal and political influence, you can get better terms for your officer prisoners by the application of ordinary common sense in dealing with the German authorities.

Another German view of the prisoner is his cash value as a labourer. I invite my readers to realize the enormous pecuniary worth of the two million prisoner slavs now reclaiming swamps, tilling the soil, building roads and railways, and working in factories for their German task-masters.

Some of your military writers leave these prisoners out of their calculations when estimating Germany's' man-power. If you had two million prisoners you would probably be able to release two million of your own people for military service.

The most numerous body of prisoners in Germany are the Russians. They are to be seen everywhere. They have much greater freedom than any other prisoners, and travel unguarded in many cases by rail or tramway to and from their work. If they are not provided with good Russian uniforms, in which, of course, they would not be able to escape, they are made conspicuous by a wide stripe down the trouser or on the back. They are easy, docile, physically strong, and accustomed to a lower grade of good than any other prisoners, except the Serbs.

The English, of course, are much the smallest number in Germany, but much the most highly prized for hate propaganda purposes.

"More difficult to manage," said one Unteroffizier to me, "than the whole of the rest of our two million." It is, indeed, a fact that your 30,000 prisoners, though the worst treated, are the gayest, most ouspoken, and rebellious against tyranny of the whole collection.

I desire to be strictly fair to the Germans in my record of these 300 days I have lately spent among them during this fourth trip of mine.

The Soltau Camp.

I will describe the great prison camp of Soltau, with its 31,000 inmates — a veritable city we should call it on the other side.

Five hours away from Berlin, on the monotonous Luneberger Heide (Luneberg Heath), has sprung up this great town with the speed of a boom mining town in Colorado. I applied to the German Foreign Office in Berlin for permission to accompany Halil Halid Bey (formerly Turkish Consul in Berlin), and Herr Muller (interested in Germany's Far Eastern developments) on their visit to this camp, saying that I would like to see the good side of prison life in Germany.

On arrival at the little old town of Soltau we were met by a military automobile and driven out on a road made by the prisoners to the largest collection of huts I have even seen.

There is nothing wrong that I could detect in the camp at Soltau, and I should say that the 200 English prisoners there are as well treated as any in Germany. The Camp Commandant seems to be a good fellow. His task of ruling so great an assemblage of men is a large and difficult one, rendered the easier by the good spirit engendered by his tact and kindness.

I had confirmation of my own views of him on the steamer from Rotterdam to Hull the other day, when I came across a Belgian who had escaped from Germany, and who had been in this camp. He said: "The little captain at Soltau was a good fellow, and if I am with the force that releases the prisoners there after we get into Germany, I will do my best to see that he gets extra good treatment."

Our inspection occupied six hours, and Halil Halid Bey, who talks English well and looks like an Irishman, was, I am sure, as satisfied as I am with what he saw.

The physical comfort of the prisoners is well looked after in the neat and perfectly clean dormitories. The men were packed rather closely, I thought, but not more than on board ship.

One became almost dazed in passing through these miles of huts, arranged in blocks like the streets of an American town.

We visited the hospital, which was as good as many civilian hospitals in other countries. There I heard the first complaint, rom a little red-headed Irishman, his voice wheezing with asthma, whose grievance was not that against the camp itself, but against a medical order which had reversed what he called his promise to be sent to Switzerland. He raised his voice without any fear, as our little group, accompanied by the Commandant, and the interpreter, went round, and I was allowed to speak to him freely. I am not a medical man, but I should think his was a case for release. His lungs were obviously in a bad state.

We were also accompanied by an English sergeant, one Saxton—a magnificent type of that old Army of yours, of whom so many are eating out their days in Germany. He spoke very freely, and frankly about the arrangements, and had no complaint to make except the food shortage and the quality of the food.

I paid particular interest to the British section of the camp, according to my instructions from Lord Northcliffe. I inquired about the parcels, and found that here, as elsewhere, parcels, if properly packed in England and containing no illegal ingredients, reached the prisoners with considerable regularity and untouched by the authorities.

There is nothing of generosity in this treatment. The Germans fear that if they touch your parcels you will touch theirs, and they also fully realize that you are taking off their hands the burden of their support of this large number of men. The prisoners probably indicate what they want in their replies to their donors in England. I am sure of one thing—that fatty substances are very necessary.

The English section reminded one now and then of England. Portraits of English wives, children, and sweethearts were over the beds; there was no lack of supply of footballs, and the English and Belgians play football practically every day after the daily work of reclaiming the land, erecting new huts, making new roads, and looking after the farms and market gardens has been accomplished.

An attempt has been made to grow certain kinds of live stock, such as pigs, poultry, and what we call in America Belgian hares—a large kind of rabbit, there were a few pet dogs about—one had been trained by a Belgian to perform tricks equal to any of those displayed at American variety theatres.

Apparently there is no lack of amusement. I visited the cinematograph theatre, and the operator asked, "What would you like to see—something funny?" He showed us a rather familiar old film. The reels are those that have been passed out of service of the German moving picture shows. In the large theatre, which would hold, I should think, seven hundred to a thousand people, there was a good acrobatic act and the performing dog, to which I have referred, with an orchestra of twenty-five instruments, almost all prisoners, of course. Among the orchestra were a couple of German Landsturmer. The guarding of the prisoners is effected by plenty of barbed wire and a comparatively small number of oldish Landsturmer.

Lying Newspapers.

A special cruelty of the Germans toward the prisoners is the provision of a lying newspaper in French for the Frenchmen, called the Gazette des Ardennes. The Gazette des Ardennes publishes every kind of imaginable lies about the French and French army, with garbled quotations from English newspapers, and particularly The Times, calculated to disturb the relations of the French and English prisoners in Germany. For the English a paper in English which is quite as bad, to which I have already referred, called the Continental Times, is doled out three times a week. The Continental Times is, I regret to say, largely written for by renegade Englishmen employed by the German Government, notably Aubrey Stanhope, who for private and well-known reasons, was unable to remember England at the outbreak of war, and so must remain in Germany, where, for a very humble pittance he conducts this campaign against his own country. I shall have more to say of the Continental Times on a future occasion.

For the Russians a special lying sheet, called the Russki Sisnik, is issued. All these newspapers pretend to print the official French, British and Russian communiques.

For a long time the effect on the English prisoners was bad, but little by little events revealed to them that the Continental Times, which makes a specialty of attacks on the English Times and the Daily Mail, was anti-British. It still masquerades as a paper for Americans in Germany, and for a long time displayed our Stars and Stripes on its front page. One of our Consuls had this intentional insult removed. The journal is now as violently anti-American as it is anti-British, and could not exist but for the money provided weekly for the maintenance of the staff, purchase of paper, and printing by the English Department of the Foreign Office propaganda.

I may be permitted to remark here that the English Department in the Wilhelmstrasse is vigorously maintained and should be a warning to English editors, peace societies, and others who might quite innocently, not only in England, but in Scotland and Ireland, Wales and Canada, find themselves the tools of subtle German agents. I have no doubt that the very alert authorities at Scotland Yard know more than I do of the English Department of the German Foreign Office. Its direction in Berlin is in very capable hands which are supplemented by advice given by Baron von Kuhlmann, who is known to visit it whenever he makes one of his visits to Berlin, and who claims in Holland, with his customary boastfulness, to have the propaganda in England well in hand. The Reichstag statement that ten million pounds has been spent in newspaper and other bribery does not take into account the large sums raised privately in the United States.

Reading Matter.

To return to the camp at Soltau, the rest of the chief reading of the English prisoners consists of novels and any literature that is not up to date about the war.

The arrival of parcels and letters is, of course, the great event for the prisoners, and so far as the large camps are concerned I do not think that there are now any English prisoners unprovided with parcels. It is the isolated and scattered men, moving from place to place for exhibition purposes, who miss parcels. As I have stated before, the parcel organization needs tightening up here, though it is visibly improving month by month.

Soltau is bleak and dreary and isolated. At the outset cases of tryphus undoubtedly occurred there, though this is denied; I should not think the situation unhealthy for men of strong constitution. The heavy air of Northern Prussia is occasionally mingled with gales from the sea by Bremen. The winter is long and, of course, much colder than in England.

As I made the long journey back to Berlin I reflected with some content that if pressure by the British and French Governments were properly exerted, all your military prisoners in Germany can be removed to humane hut encampments such as these.

Britain's Generous Handling Of Crude Rubber Situation

Has Held Down Cost of Rubber Footwear While Prices of Other Necessities Soar

When, some twenty years ago, Great Britain began to establish great rubber plantations in her tropical Dominions, the outside world's industrial experts laughed in scorn. Were there not thousands of square miles of wild rubber trees in Brazil and elsewhere simply waiting to be tapped? Were not the marvellous chemists of Germany working diligently to devise a process for making synthetic rubber at a fraction of the cost of the natural article? Britain, they averred, was wasting time and money.

Six years ago the price of crude rubber jumped to $3.00 a pound, because the 60,000 or 70,000 tons which seemed to be the limit of the forests fell far short of the enormously increasing demand—and the synthetic rubber promised by Germany failed to materialize. The 8,200 tons produced by the British plantations in 1910 was more than welcomed, and the scoffing ceased. By 1914 the plantations were producing nearly 100,000 tons, or 60% of the world's supply, and the price had been reduced to one-third of the 1910 figures. This year the plantations are contributing 150,000 tons—75% of the total production—and Britain holds a monopoly which has been of vital importance in the War.

Controlling the seas as well as the supply, the British Government has effectually cut off the Teutons, while providing an abundance for the Allies. To neutrals, who might easily have been forced to pay any price, the monopoly has been truly a benevolent one, for so long as they resell none to the Germans, they get all the rubber they want at a lower price than before the war.

No nation, neutral or belligerent, benefits more generally from Britain's foresight and generosity in this matter than Canada. Besides the general use of the scores of rubber products, practically every Canadian uses rubber footwear more or less for at least six months of the year. Now that leather has gone up 80%, and shoes are costing two to five dollars a pair more than normal, the advantage of wearing rubbers and overshoes this winter is strongly emphasized. They cost so little compared to the shoes whose term of service they practically double, that it certainly is economy to wear them at every sign of bad weather. And there's another point, even more important:

The need for leather at the Front is so great, and the scarcity so serious, that it is a patriotic duty to save it all we can by wearing rubbers and overshoes.

ON this page you see the photograph of Zenatello, the great Italian dramatic tenor recently knighted by the King of Italy. He is singing in direct comparison with Edison's Re-Creation of his marvelous voice. Zenatello is but one of the many great artists who have proved in this manner that Edison's new invention Re-creates every voice and every form of music with such literal perfection that, when heard in comparison with the original, it is impossible to distinguish one from the other.

The New Edison has been submitted to the acid test of direct comparison with living artists before more than 200,000 music lovers. It has never failed to sustain this astonishing test. The music critics of more than 200 of America's leading newspapers bear testimony to this fact in the columns of their own papers. We shall be glad to show you what the critics say.

Will there be real music in your home at Christmas?

A talking machine gives but a hollow imitation of music. The New Edison is not a talking machine. The New Edison gives you the literal Re-Creation of music. In speaking of it, the New York Tribune said: "Edison has snared the soul of music." The New York Globe called it "the phonograph with a soul." We want you to investigate this wonderful new invention.

Come to our store and hear a few examples of Edison's Wonderful New Art

You are under absolutely no obligations to buy. We merely ask you to come and hear what we believe to be the most wonderful musical instrument in the world.

Ease Your Wife's Anxiety

"Indeed, I could not sleep last night," said a merchant to one of our insurance agents. "The insurance on my store expired yesterday, and that pesky fire bell reminded me of it. That store is my living, and I could never start another. If the fire had 'snuffed out' my business last night, instead of Smith's, I would be at my string's end."

"Get insured this morning?"
"Yes, sir; bright and early."
"Own the house you occupy?"
"No; wish I did."
"Anybody helping keep the family?"
"Why, no—why do you ask that?"
"Any income besides the store?"
"No, not a dollar—why?"
"Does your wife sleep well?"
"Why yes; but what on earth are you driving at, anyway?"

"I was just thinking how she could sleep, for if your life had been snuffed out instead of your neighbour Jones' yesterday, she would be at her 'string's end,' for I happen to know that you have no life insurance and your income is her living."

Most men sleep sounder when they know that in event of FIRE their property IS PROTECTED BY INSURANCE. Would not your WIFE AND FAMILY sleep sounder if they knew YOU HAD FULFILLED YOUR OBLIGATIONS and made provision for them in event of YOUR DEATH?

HAS 73,000,000 EGGS, COST 20 CENTS DOZEN

CHICAGO BROKER COOLLY ASKS THE PUBLIC "WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?"

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Jas. E. Wets, who admits he is the egg king of the United States, may find his throne tottering when U.S. District Attorney Charles Cline finishes his food probe.

Wets after admitting that he controlled 72,000,000 eggs and could swing the price as he saw fit, said:

"Well, what are they going to do about it?" Last year the public said I was a fool for speculating in eggs, and this year I am called a criminal. Did anyone accuse me of being a manipulator last year when I got stung along with the rest?

"This is the brokers' year, and as for me, I am going to sit tight and watch the prices climb up and the public can pay——. I am going to square accounts for last year."

Wets said he defies investigation, legislative or otherwise, to bring down the price of eggs.

Wets bought most of his eggs last spring. The six million dozen were bought at an average price of 20 cents. The average wholesale price is forty cents. His books profit to-day is more than $1,000,000.

"The White Flour Pinch"—have you felt it?

With the advancing price of wheat "the seven-cent loaf is doomed," say the bakers. In its place we have the eight-cent loaf—in many cities only the sixteen-cent loaf. A loaf of white flour bread is not a complete ration. However wholesome and pure, it does not supply all the proteids the human body needs. In Shredded Wheat Biscuit you have all the body-building nutriment in the whole wheat grain prepared in a digestible form. It is always the same price, always the same high quality. Eat it for breakfast with milk or cream or with fruits.

DEAL WITH FOE AFTER WAR THROUGH COMMITTEE

How Germany Will Seek to Encourage Her Home Industries.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—James W. Gerard, United States Ambassador to Germany, speaking at a dinner given in his honour by Frank A. Munsey, predicted that Germany, to encourage her home industries after the war, would probably do all her foreign buying through a central committee.

"In Germany," said the Ambassador, "after the war probably no one will be permitted to purchase anything made outside of Germany. There will be in all probability a central buying committee, which will do the purchasing from foreign countries for the Empire.

"This will permit the Germans to enter the market in a position to say to a certain extent what prices they will pay for that which they wish to purchase. Before the war a friend of mine, a German manufacturer, said to me: 'We can combine here to buy copper from you, but you can't combine to sell it to us.'

"Now, if our peace and prosperity are to continue commercially, permission to combine for the foreign export trade should be given. There is a bill, known as the Webb Bill, which will afford some assistance to American exporters."

CARD SYSTEM FOR NORWAY.

Food Minister Says Population May Be Put on Short Rations.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—The Royal Provision committee of Norway has unanimously decided that a ticket system ought to be instituted to meet the food situation, according to a Copenhagen dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company quoting the Norwegian Food Minister. At a meeting in Christiania the Minister said that a great question had arisen as to whether the population of Norway should be put on a short food allowance.

The Minister added that neighbouring neutral countries were organizing themselves as if they were participating in the war, and that in Sweden the German ticket system for grain and flour would be introduced.

FAMINE SPECTRE FACES HUNGARY

Crowds Wait Hours for Rations—Approach of Winter Makes Situation Black

New York. — The Hungarian government, frightened by the spectre of famine, is seeking to appoint a food dictator, but can find nobody to undertake the job and dictate with regard to food which has no existence, writes a Swiss correspondent. He describes how the commonest sight in Budapest is that of little crowds, mainly women, who wait wearily outside the shops for food which they cannot get.

Mr. Tabody, in the Pesti Naplo, describes the torture of these unfortunate women in an interesting article, telling how he saw among the waiting crowds in front of a butcher's shop a captain of police in civilian clothes. "I went up to speak to him," said Mr. Tabody, "and found that the dreaded judge of the food price raisers, who has sentenced some thousands of them to imprisonment, has to stand among the rest and await his turn. He being an expert on the food miseries of this unfortunate country, told me that the women have to stand one or two hours to get a few potatoes; from two to three hours if they want a bit of sausage; from three to four hours for a quarter of a pound of sugar; and from four to five hours for a bit of lard or fat. His servant girl was knitting her stockings before a green grocer's shop, while he waited for a bit of lard. A woman who wants to get something to eat for her children every day must spend at least five or six hours waiting in the queues."

The Budapest authorities have just issued two tickets, one for the general victualling, a general kind of ticket, without which single tickets for bread, meat, maize, potatoes, etc., are useless. These general victualling tickets can be procured only by the permanent residents of Budapest and the Transylvanian refugees, which means that travellers and visitors must take their food with them or go hungry.

The second ticket, issued by the holders of the general tickets, is a bean ticket, which entitles every inhabitant to buy a half a pound of beans a month. This makes the 18th ticket the inhabitants of Budapest now have to procure, and it is reckoned that in order to get the goods referred to in any of the eighteen tickets involves the loss of half a day's work.

PRICES ARE STILL SOARING.

People in Budapest are tired of grumbling about the prices of necessaries. Within the last month they have again risen from fifty to one hundred per cent., but even the prices would not matter so much if only the food could be obtained. Budapest is like a town besieged, and the people will soon have to follow the example of the Parisians in 1870 and eat the rats and mice. The principle trouble is that the Prussians are taking away nearly everything and what they leave is seized by the Austrians.

There is scarcely any soap in Hungary and the Prussians and the Austrians are as badly off in this respect as the Hungarians are. A small quantity, however, is imported from Holland and from the northern neutrals.

The Pesti Naplo learns that the distribution of the imported soap among the three allies is being made in this proportion: Germany gets 70 per cent., Austria, 27 1-2 per cent., and Hungary the rest—that is 2 1-2 per cent. It is almost the same as regards Hungarian produce, for the Prussians take the best part of it and leave the Hungarians to starve. The general depression on account of the distressing state of affairs is very great and the newspapers devote more than half their entire space to what they call their food miseries.

SOLDIERS ON HALF RATIONS.

If one takes all these things into account, with the fact that the military are being fed on half rations, and that winter will inevitably bring with it a famine such as no imagination can picture, it is possible to forecast an early end of the war. Winter is the most dreaded word in Hungary to-day, especially as there is no fuel, and no hope of an improvement in this respect, for the railways are over burdened with the work of military transport, and cannot supply civilians with fuel. In a month's time things will look still gloomier.

In Austria the conditions are said to be even worse, for there the people have not only no vegetables, but in some places they are sometimes without bread for weeks, and the working classes, especially in Bohemia, are in a dangerous state of exasperation.

Ten thousand munition workers, although under military control, struck work in Bohemia at the beginning of October and would not work until two wagon loads of flour were distributed among them. Twenty of the leaders were arrested and have not been seen since.

The newspaper correspondents in Switzerland send parcels of food and soap and such things every week, and are spending the time in supplying the staffs of their newspapers with commodities instead of telegraphing news.

HOPE IN ROUMANIA.

In such circumstances it is no cause for surprise that great things are expected of the concentration against Roumania and that the chief hope that animates the authorities is that the campaign against that country will end in its invasion and the seizure of the great quantities of foodstuffs which it possesses. There are some military critics who attribute the Prussian campaign on the Transylvania front to this end and argue that unless Germany and the monarchy can procure foodstuffs from somewhere within the next two or three months (and this somewhere can only be Roumania) the game will be up before the winter is over. The "cannot starve us out" boast has become sufficiently transparent, and prominent politicians agree that first of all the starving out of the army will follow.

Statisticians contend that the first two years of the war indicate that the producing power of the central empires is far short of their needs, in spite of the assistance derived from neutrals during that period. As the war goes on the food difficulties will increase and sooner or later internal troubles will be too intense to allow of the continuation of an external struggle. The stock of cattle as compared with pre-war times, is said to have decreased seventy per cent., while the producing power of the land is said to show forty per cent. decrease owing to the shortage of labor and materials. By organization, by resort to the ticket system, Germany has been enabled to go on, but no organization will help in Austria-Hungary, it is declared, where there is nothing to organise.

The cloudy look on a piano can be removed by a cloth dipped in soap and water and wrung very dry.

Always, if possible, have your dining-room light and bright in the winter, and cool and shaded in summer.

WHERE BABIES NEVER DIE.

There is a town in southern France called Villiers-le-Duc, where no baby under a year old has died in ten years and where in the same period no mother has died in giving birth to a baby.

Villiers-le-Duc contains about 1,000 inhabitants and the average birth-rate during the ten years works out at a fraction over 18 per thousand; so that over 180 babies have been born—all of whom have lived.

No other place in the world is able to show such a record and it has only been made possible in this case owing to a series of ordinances issued by the mayor of the town, and which are strictly enforced.

These provide, amongst other things for proper food and rest for the prospective mother, who is obliged to notify the authorities at least 2 months before the expected event. Free medical aid is also available for the mother and child, both at birth and afterwards.

Does Total Abstinence Pay?

During the past thirty years, The Manufacturers Life Insurance Company has maintained two separate Departments known as the Abstainers' Section and the General Section, thereby classifying Total Abstainers and Non-Abstainers.

The result has been that the Abstainer has shown himself a much superior risk to the Non-Abstainer, and our statistics in this regard are considered the most authentic of their kind on the continent.

Appreciating the superiority of the Abstainer as a Life Insurance risk, we give those eligible for insurance in this class the benefit of special plans and rates. Our statistics prove they are deserving of them. Why not ascertain what we have to offer before placing your insurance?

Upon receipt of your name and address, we shall be pleased to send you our little booklet "Total Abstainers vs. Moderate Drinkers." Insurance issued to women on these special plans as well as to men.

Lieut Thaw Home As French Citizen

Says American Airmen Are Detailed to Most Dangerous Work at the Front

ENGLISH TOO IMPETUOUS

NEW YORK, Nov. 23—First Lieut. William Thaw of the French Army Aviation Corps arrived yesterday from Bordeaux. He was in good health, but rather blue, he said, because he missed the Yale-Princeton football game on Saturday through the French liner Touraine's having to put into Fayal for coal. The aviator cheered up on the pier when his father, Benjamin Thaw, told him that he could see the game between Yale and Harvard next Saturday. He traveled under a French passport and will return to his corps in three weeks.

At first Lieutenant Thaw was reluctant to speak about his experiences with the French Army, and refused to have his picture taken. After his baggage had been passed he gave the following details to the reporters on the pier:

"There is something more in aviation in war time than just soaring up toward the sky and volplaning down again to earth. The French Army aviators are divided into groups and detailed to different duties. Some of them carry messages from Paris to the Generals at the front; others take new machines and deliver them to the aviators at the front; others confine themselves to ranging finding and others again drop bombs inside the enemy's lines to destroy his magazines or supply stores.

"The duty of the American aviators if I may say it without boasting is the most dangerous of all, because they have to go up and attack the German aviators directly they are reported in the air. The chief object is to get the German over his own lines so that his troops cannot use their anti-aircraft guns to assist him and the duel is fought to the death. We go up alone and use the left hand for the gas and the right for the levers and the machine gun. The Americans have brought down many German aeroplanes since the war started, and I have destroyed some of them myself.

WOUNDED AT VERDUN.

"I was wounded at Verdun in May while fighting a duel above the clouds with a German aviator. He was done and falling to the ground when two more Germans came to his rescue, flying very fast, and I had to descend.

"The bullet fired by the foremost German shattered my left elbow, but, using my right hand, I managed to volplane down, and landed 800 yards behind the first-line French trenches at Verdun.

"Poor Norman Prince had brought down his man, and was on his way back to the lines, as the weather was too hazy to do any more work. He was flying rather low, and did not know there were any telegraph wires up. His machine caught in them and capsized, turning several somersaults on its way, and crushing his back when he struck the ground. He died from the effect of a clot of blood on the brain, the surgeon said.

Lieutenant Thaw declined to say where the American aviators had been flying since they left Verdun, but indicated in his conversation that it was on the Somme front.

He said the most dangerous country he had flown over in the war was Alsace, because it was full of ravines, which made descents perilous in the extreme. After circling around for half an hour in search of a landing place, an aviator would descend, only to find that what looked like an open field was a deep ravine.

ENGLISH IMPETUOUS.

The English, he said, had lost more aviators than the French because their men were too impetuous, and were not sufficiently trained before they were sent to the front. The Germans and the French took precautions to see that their aviators were in every way fit before they flew over the enemy's lines. He added that the Germans were losing a great many more aeroplanes now than they lost last year, and were not flying so often.

Captain Boelke was killed, Lieut. Thaw said, in a collision with an English aviator.

When asked about the request made by the State Department to the French Government regarding the use of the term "American Aviation [illegible]" he laughed and said that the only people who used that appellation were American newspaper correspondents.

"We are known as 'N. 124' The letter stands for Nieuport," the Lieut. continued, "the machine which all the American flyers use, as it is the lightest and fastest in the service of the Allies. I came here under a French citizen to the end of the war, as I cannot get American papers while I am fighting for France."

FRENCH ACTOR'S WOUNDS

Another passenger on the Touraine was Jean Gauthier, a French actor, formerly in Mme. Bernhardt's company, who has come over to act at the Theatre Francais. He wears a large silver plate covering his abdomen another on his spine, and a third at the back of his head.

When the war started, Gauthier joined his regiment, and was wounded severely in the head at the battle of the Marne. He recovered, and was wounded in the spine with shrapnel at the battle of Loos in September 1915. The surgeons treated his wounds so skilfully that he was able to rejoin his regiment once more, and was rewarded with the War Cross with golden palms and a commission as Second Lieutenant. Beyond being kicked over a gun carriage by an army mule and knocked down by an aeroplane, Mr. Gauthier said his career was uneventful until last May at Verdun, when he was wounded in the abdomen. After the surgeons had patched him up with a silver plate the War Office officials in Paris said he could return to the stage.

A LUMBER MAN'S OPINION.

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Wm. Pritchard, Lumber Inspector, Lumsden Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

DRUGGISTS TO PROTECT DIGNITY OF CALLING

Druggists as a body in the Province are determined to maintain the dignity of their occupation, and are not going to look with leniency on an infraction of the spirit of the law against the diffusion of the drug habit in the community. To-day the Council of the Ontario College of Pharmacy will hear some members who have been invited to appear before them to explain certain sales. The idea is the removal of those guilty of the sale of habit-forming drugs from the roll. This the Council have not power to do directly, but they can recommend the Governor in Council to do so, if need be. The Council at yesterday's meeting also took steps to see that qualified pharmacists are now serving as dispensers in the army should be granted the rank of Honorary Lieutenant. Hitherto they have been able to rise in ordinary cases only to the rank of Staff Sergeant. All druggists chemists and students now serving in the army are being given special concessions, granted time, matriculation status, and diplomats as though they had taken the full courses, for the Pharmaceutical Society and the Council recognized the importance of the patriotic work they are doing.

A committee of the Council yesterday had a consultation with the License Commission to urge that the same conditions be applied in Provincial acts regulating the sale of wines and patent medicines as hold in the Dominion Act. The Council also desire that the Provincial law be made to correspond with that of the Dominion code in the case of fines for the sale of cocaine, opium and morphine.

RUE PLEDGE TO PAY TROOPS.

German Firms Object to Allowances To Enlisted Employes.

Items appearing in recent issues of German newspapers indicate that many German employers are becoming tired of paying their employees at the front the allowances which, in the first flush of patriotic excitement, they promised to continue indefinitely.

The Frankfurter Zeitung protests against what it regards as an organized attempt to get rid of these responsibilities, and prints a circular letter in which a Rhenish firm, observing that it is adopting a practice approved by many large industrial associations and now becoming general, informs its employes in the trenches that their allowances will now cease unless they sign an agreement binding them for three years after the war. The men are to regard the allowances as loans, and to pay 5 per cent. interest on them, and they must repay the "loans" if they leave the service of the firm within three years after the conclusion of peace. An excerpt from the circular, was translated for The London Times, reads:

"In consequence of the long duration of the war, the enormous taxation of profits which is to be expected and the impossibility of foreseeing the state of business after the conclusion of peace, we are compelled to protect [illegible] interests. Our interests make it necessary for us to clear up the situation and take measures of precaution."

GLASS OF SALTS CLEARS KIDNEYS

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts, which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralise the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

BALL PLAYER'S BANK CLOSES.

Hobiltzel Is Said to Have Had Big Deposit.

Williamstown, W. Va., Nov. 2. — Dick Hobiltzel, first baseman of the champion Red Sox, was a heavy depositor in the Williamstown Bank, the doors of which were closed several days ago following the disappearance of George Hunter, cashier. The ball player's father-in-law is president of the institution, and "Hobby" expected to become connected with it when he quit his national game. Hunter, detectives said today, probably lost much of the $40,000.

Obstinate Coughs and Colds YIELD TO DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to "Dr. Wood's" containing as it does all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree combined with the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks.

Mrs. H. F. McCormick, Rodney, N. S., writes: "I had a severe cold one winter, and had been coughing for a month. I could not sleep at night, nor could I speak above a whisper.

After I had taken a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup I felt better so I took two or three more and was entirely cured. I have three children and I always give it to them when they have a cough or cold."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup has been on the market for twenty-five years and we claim that it is the best cure for a cough or cold you can possibly procure.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FIRE IN VESSEL'S BUNKERS.

SYDNEY, N. S., Nov. 25 — The steamship Manchester Spinner was beached here last evening owing to a fire which had been smouldering in her bunkers for the last four days. The flames reached her cargo of deal boards threatening complete destruction to the vessel. Tugs are now on hand helping the crew, and they now have the fire under control.

Scout News

Splendid Opportunities.

The Headquarters Gazette, the official organ of the Boy Scout Movement in England, tells how Boy Scouts may render a distinct service, not only in defeating the enemy but in helping Great Britain to overcome material weaknesses, and in fostering a better mutual understanding between all countries.

After referring to the fact that the war has awakened England to a realization that she must organise her trade to meet every demand from the different corners of the earth if she wishes to be on a level footing with Germany, the writer says: "Our business in the Scouts then is to awaken the rising generation to their future responsibilities, to keep them out of the groove which they had fallen into and to encourage among them the development of individual inventiveness, initiative, technical study and skill, honesty in dealing, knowledge of foreign languages and foreign lands, tact, foresight and physical health to give the requisite energy and endurance, not merely to defeat our foes, but to improve the standard of our output of peaceful industry."

Then calling attention to the immediate necessity of developing and holding the good will and friendship of all neutral nations the writer again finds work for Boy Scouts: "We have brother Scouts in all those countries," he says, "the rulers, the thinkers and workers of the near future. Let us link ourselves all the closer with them. We have a big possibility in our hands if we can use our boys to keep up a correspondence as Brother Scouts with those of foreign countries in order to bring about a better mutual understanding by telling them of our high aim in the war; of the brave doings of our men; and of what they are suffering to uphold the ideal of honour and justice for other nations.

A Commendable Cause.

In a letter to the Manchester Guardian, His Lordship Bishop Welldon, Dean of the Anglican church in Manchester, Eng., tells why the Boy Scout Movement should be supported. "The Boy Scouts Movement," he says, "commends itself to me alike on physical, moral and national grounds. For in a day when the deterioration of physique is a grave and growing evil, particularly in the slums of large cities, it demands of all its members constant healthy physical exercise. Not only so, but it encourages the habits of obedience and co-operation; it teaches boys to receive and obey the word of command; it invests daily life with a new significance. But the supreme value, perhaps, of the Boy Scouts Movement is that under it every boy must every day render some service to somebody else; he must do a good turn; he must help a comrade or a stranger out of the mire; he must act in the true spirit of Christian citizenship. The result is that the Boy Scouts become good patriots, and as there is no regard to creed or class in the movement, it teaches boys the lesson—so vital to modern society—that they must act together, and think well one of another, and try to minimise instead of aggravating the differences which part them."

Democracy in Uniform.

There is nothing so democratic as a uniform and with all its wild west picturesqueness the Boys Scouts' costume is a uniform. Dress is the greatest of caste barriers. The Scouts organization has drawn in a very wide range of classes. In mufti some Boy Scouts are poor and badly dressed, others well to do and well dressed, but on a Saturday in uniform they are all dressed alike. Their uniform symbolises a fraternity in which all are equal, with a common ideal, a common occupation, and above all a common code of honour.

Lieutenant Pechkoff, an officer of the Foreign Legion of the French Army, and son of "Maxim Corky," the Russian novelist, in addressing the members of the Canadian Club of Ottawa on Saturday, October 28th, read the following letter received by him from an American lady living in North Carolina and replying to a letter of condolence which on his arrival on this continent a few days earlier he addressed to her concerning the death of her son, Kiffen Rockwell, a Harvard graduate who had been a member of Lieutenant Pechkoff's company of the Foreign Legion:

"My dear Lieutenant,—How your letter cheered and comforted me. Just to hear from some one who knew my faithful boy, who had lately seen him. Ah yes, my great loss is all the greater because Kiffen was just the boy he was. But I am not rebellious. Just before going to the front last May with the American esquaderie he wrote these words, his last that referred to death: 'Mother, if I die I want you to know that I have died as every man ought to die, fighting for what is right. I do no feel that I am fighting for France alone, but for the cause of all humanity, the greatest of all causes. So my brave boy is gone, but he leaves a beautiful memory."

Big Guns and Flaming Oil Do Their Bit on East and West Fronts

Giant British gun firing at night on the Somme front. So accurate is the range that these big guns score practically every hour of the day.

Every time this huge British gun speaks a ton of explosive is hurled toward the German lines on its message of death. As Dr. McLennan explained in his recent address to the Empire Club, these guns have silenced batteries and destroyed trenches miles away.

During the days of the Roumanian campaign when the Teutonic forces were sweeping everything aside in their advance an oil well was uncapped and tanks opened by Roumanians. Flaming oil formed an impassable barrier.

This is from an intimate photograph taken by a staff artist with the British troops on the Macedonia front. Loading and aiming a trench bomb.

The motor from an old automobile has been used to good advantage by a British soldier. It is the propelling force for a light locomotive used behind the lines on the western front.

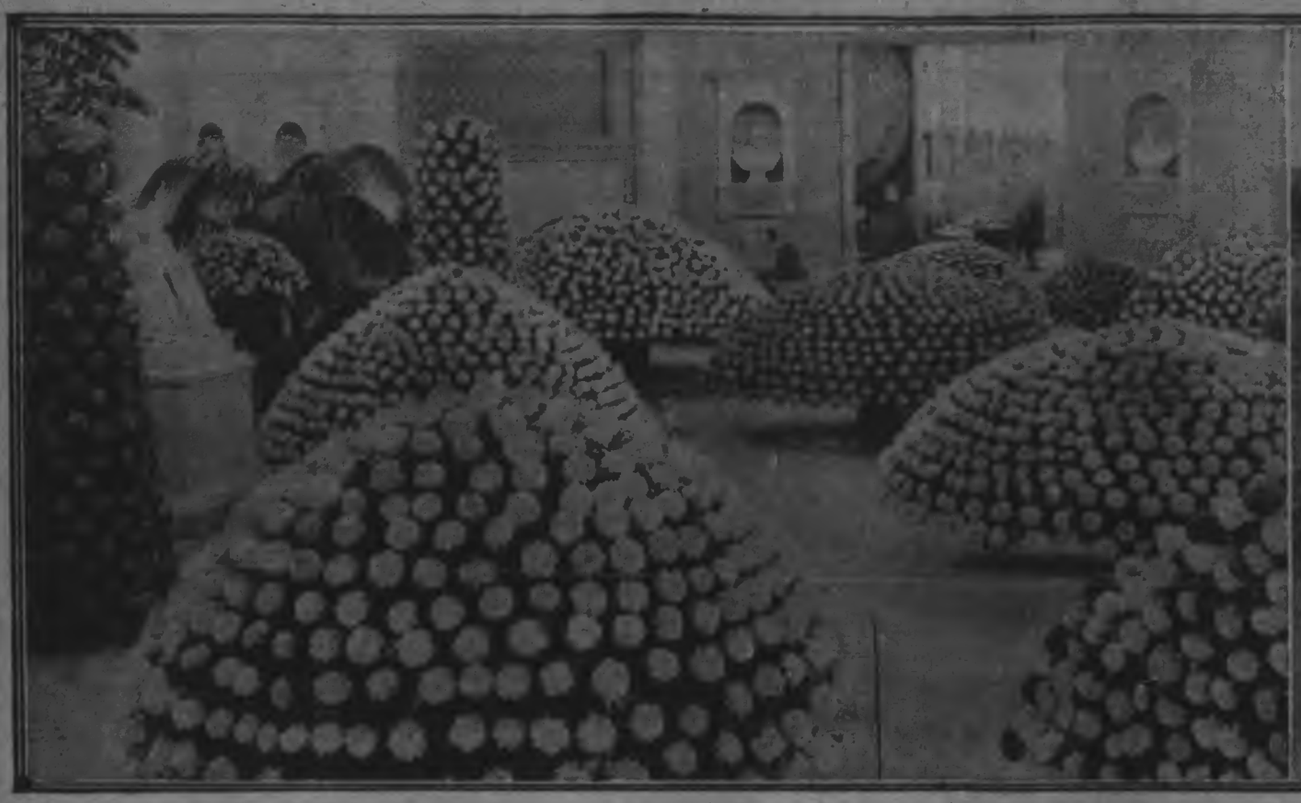
Five Unusual Pictures Focus the World's Leading Events of the Week



A few of the beautiful chrysanthemum plants at the flower show at the American Museum of Natural History in New York. Some of the bushes can boast of three and four hundred blossoms, which are supported by wire frames.

Winter will play havoc with the military roads in France which have already been torn up by shell fire, retarding the moving of guns and men. Forests will be denuded to supply the necessary wood to repair these. Photograph shows lumber made available by engineers.

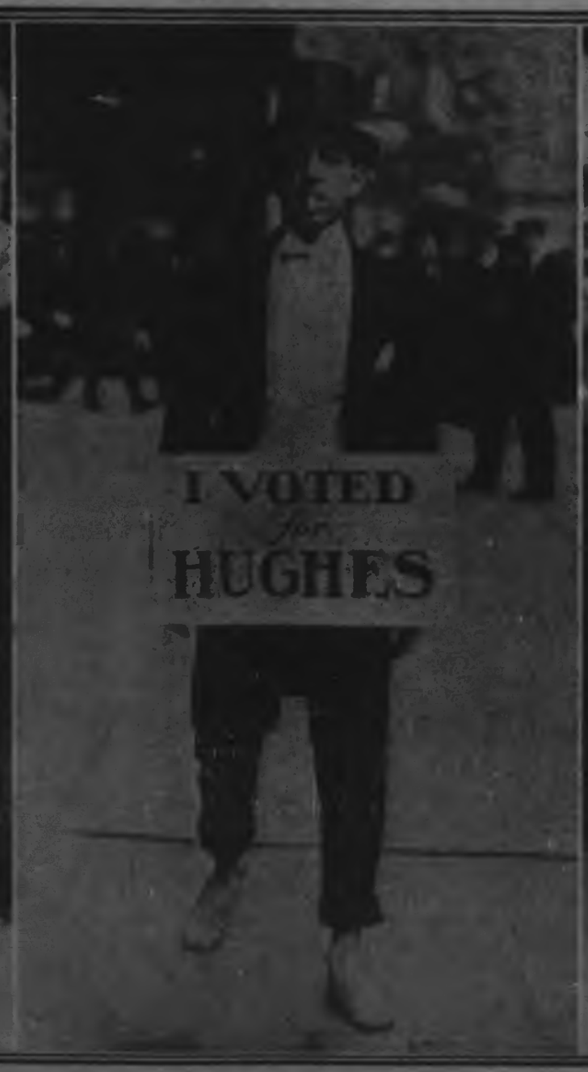
A view in the lighthouse at Tomkinsville, N.Y., where huge lenses flash their beacon many miles.

Finishing the last leg of his journey at a speed of 127 miles an hour, Victor Carlstrom flying from Chicago to New York, landed at Governor's Island, November 3rd. Photo shows him in his 360 horse power Curtiss aeroplane, just after he landed. Carlstrom was for a time instructor at the Long Branch Aviation School.

King Constantine of Greece addressing his troops at the palace in Athens during the recent crisis.

How the President of the United States and His Opponent Voted on Election Day

President Woodrow Wilson motored over to Princeton from Shadow Lawn and cast his ballot at 9 a.m. His ballot was number 50. Photo shows him leaving the polling place after he had voted.



It's bad enough to vote for the losing candidate, but to have to advertise it on the main thoroughfares is rubbing it in. This G. O. P. loser walked barefooted down Broadway, New York.

Charles E. Hughes casting his ballot which was number thirteen, at a laundry on Eighth Avenue, New York. He voted at almost exactly seven o'clock.

AN INTERESTING GROUP OF PETERBORO SOLDIERS PHOTOGRAPHED IN ENGLAND.

All four went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and have been transferred to other units. From left to right (standing) are—Corp. Lou Elliott and Pte. Fred Doughty, while the bottom pair are Pte. Gordon Elliott, brother of the former, and Pte. Wm. Doughty, son of the latter. The Elliott boys have lost two brothers in the war.

AN INTERESTING SNAP-SHOT.

CANADIAN OFFICERS WHO ARE PRISONERS OF WAR.

In the centre of the front row is Lieut. F. S. Hubbs, of the 8th C.M.R., and son of Mr. C. E. Hubbs of the Peterboro Hardware Co. All these officers were wounded before being captured.

A PETERBORO PRISONER OF WAR IN GERMANY.

Lance Corp. Charlton Drummond, of the 8th C. M. R., is the fourth from the left. There may be other Peterboro boys in the group.

PTE. THOMAS SARGINSON,

A Peterboro boy, who enlisted in the 93rd Battery, was transferred to the 93rd Battalion Bugle Band, and is now on active service in France. He is a son of Mr. T. Sarginson, 488 Aylmer St., and a former member of the 57th Regiment Bugle Band.

PTE. JOHN YACKO,

A Russian member of the 93rd Battalion. He has lived in Peterboro for five years, and was one of the first to join the 93rd, being a member of No. 1 Platoon, A Company.

Large crowds were daily attracted by the French guns which are exhibited in front of the Toronto City Hall. The one shown above is one of the captured German field guns, and was brought to Toronto as a part of the French war exhibit shown at The Robert Simpson Company.

You Get the Biggest Engine Value For Your Money When You Buy an

Alpha Gas Engine

YOU should measure the value you receive for the money you pay for a gas engine by what the engine will do for you.

Possibly you can buy an engine for less money than you can an Alpha, but you cannot buy an equal amount of good service in any other engine for as little money.

In the Alpha you get for your money more years of service, the lowest fuel cost, exceptional freedom from the need of repairs and the easiest engine to operate and care for.

The Alpha is a simple engine, with plenty of power, perfectly controlled by a Governor that keeps it running steadily and smoothly under light, heavy or varying loads. This engine has no complicated, delicate parts to require constant attention—not even batteries. It starts and operates on a single low speed magneto. You can use either kerosene or gasoline for fuel.

You need a gas engine on your farm. In a very short time the saving resulting through its use would pay for an Alpha. Buy an Alpha now. That is the quickest and best way to save the money that is to pay for the engine. Ask for a copy of the Alpha Engine catalogue. It contains a lot of valuable information about engines.

The Venizelos Government Declares War on Bulgars

Fresh Progress By General Sarrail's Troops

GREEK PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT HAS DECLARED WAR ON BULGARIA

Formal Declaration is Made To-day by Venizelo's Party---Teutonic Forces in the Balkans Have Crossed the Danube River---General Sarrail's Forces Operating West of Monastir Have Made Fresh Gains---No Activity on the British Front

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

ATHENS, November 25.—The Greek Provisional Government, headed by former Premier Venizelos, to-day formally declared war against Bulgaria.

Venizelos established the Revolutionary, or "Provisional" Government of Greece on the Island of Crete some weeks ago. The former Premier first clashed with King Constantine because of Venizelos' vigorous pro-Ally war views and his insistence that Greece cast her lot against Germany. At the Greek elections Venizelos apparently obtained the support in this position fro mthe people, but be failed to move the Greek monarch to any change in his attitude of neutrality.

Braemar Castle Was Sunk By Submarine

LONDON, November 25.—The Evening Star's Athens correspondent to-day declared that the Greek authorities at Tinos Isle have reported that the British hospital ship Braemar Castle, sunk yesterday, was torpedoed while carrying 400 British wounded.

German Destroyers Are Driven Off

LONDON, November 25.—An attempt by the German destroyer flotilla on Thursday night to approach Downs was frustrated by patrol vessels, the Admiralty announced to-day. Six German destroyers were in the squadron. Sighted by a patrol vessel, the enemy fired twelve rounds and immediately steamed away.

The Admiralty announcement said a shell had struck the Drifter. No shells fell near Ramsgate.

Super-Zeppelin Is Wrecked By Gale

AMSTERDAM, November 25.—Travellers from Munich arriving to-day, reported that a new German super-Zeppelin was wrecked in Tuesday's gale between Friedrichshaven and Wilhelmshaven. Twenty-seven are said to have perished in the accident, only one being rescued.

Admits Teutons Have Crossed the Danube

PETROGRAD, November 25.—The admission that the Teutonic forces in the Balkans have crossed the Danube near Simnitza, was announced in to-day's War Office statement. It also said the Roumanians have been pressed back by the enemy in the Alt Valley south of Kalimanesht and Moldarosht.

Gen. Sarrail Is Making Fresh Gains

PARIS, November 25.—Despite the hindering of operations because of fog and rain, Serbian troops out of Monastir, repulsed Bulgarian counter attacks in the region of Gunista, and the Italian forces, also under General Sarrail, succeeding in progressing further to the west of Monastir, said the official announcement made to-day.

"Heavy Rain" Only British Report To-day

LONDON, November 25.—Nothing but heavy rain was reported from the British front to-day, by General Sir Douglas Haig.

Enemy Troops Have Landed at Islaz

BUCHAREST, November 25.—The landing of enemy troops at Islaz, Roumania, after crossing the Danube, but the stoppage of their advance from Zimnica (Simnitsa) northwards, was reported in to-day's official statement.

TWO BROTHERS OF THE NEW EMPRESS FIGHTING IN THE BELGIAN ARMY

PARIS, November 24.—Two brothers of the new Austrian Empress, Princes Xavier and Sixte of Parma, are serving in the Belgian army. President Poincare recently decorated both the Princes with the War Cross.

Coal Strike Is Threatened

Conference Will be Held at Ottawa to Avert Trouble

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

FERNIE, B.C., Nov. 25.—The strike of Western Canada coal miners has been postponed until Monday. Men and operators have been summoned to Ottawa by Sir R. L. Borden to confer on the threatened tragedy that would be the result if the miners left work as opening of winter and with only small stocks on hand. Both sides show no signs of getting together unless the government influence can do it.

Local Council Of Women

A meeting of the Local Council of Women will be held next Friday afternoon at 3.30 in the Green Room of the Y.W.C.A. The president will give an interesting account of the Executive meeting of the National Council recently held in Kingston.

Several other important questions are to be brought before the Council, and every member of the Executive and representatives from affiliated societies are especially requested to be present, as well as all others interested in women's work.

The nomination of officers for the ensuing year will also take place.

PTE. THOMAS PERRY C.M.R. WAS KILLED IN NO MAN'S LAND

Comrade Writes That Peterboro Soldier was Trying to Make his way Back into Canadian Lines, When Bullet Pierced His Heart.

SYMPATHY FROM OFFICER

Mrs. Thos. Perry, 600 Chamberlen street, has received the following letters in regard to the death in action of her husband, Pte. Thos. Perry of the Canadian Mounted Rifles.

In the Field, Nov. 1, 1916.

The enclosed letter from Pte. Upton gives information concerning the death of your husband. It is only very little that I can add, except to say that he was a good soldier, had the respect of his fellow soldiers and died in the performance of his duties.

It is heart-breaking to lose our dear ones in this way, so many brave men sacrificing themselves for the common cause for right and freedom. We will get it in the end, taking comfort in the knowledge that those who died have won it with their life-blood and the sorrow of the dear ones left behind can be borne with greater fortitude under such circumstances.

With sincerest sympathy I am,

Yours truly,

J. R. Woods, Lieut.

For O. C. 4th C. M. R.

Pte Upton writes as follows:

I am writing, at your request, to give you information about your husband's death.

On June 2nd I was with Tom all day and at night time, after the bombardment we were between our own lines and the Germans. While we were trying to find our way into our own lines he was shot through the heart. It may ease your mind a little to know that he suffered no pain, as he was killed instantly.

He was brought in afterwards and buried by our own fellows. We were very sorry when Tom was killed. He was well liked, both in the 4th and 8th. Please accept my sincere sympathy, and believe me, I remain

Sincerely Yours,

F. Upton.

Farmer Fined For Trespass In Yard

William Bradshaw of South Monaghan, a farmer residing near Bensfort, was fined $3 and costs, amounting to $6.10, in police court this morning for trespassing in the lane at the rear of George street stores immediately north of Simcoe street and on the west side of George street.

Although there are warning signs posted about the yard, Mr. Bradshaw stated that he didn't see them. He could not see why he was fined and the other trespassers were not also hauled into court.

Magistrate Dunable dispensed cold consolation when he suggested that Mr. Bradshaw might split the fine among the other farmers who used the yard.

EDISON TOO BUSY TO ACCEPT PRESENT

NEW YORK, November 25.—Off on another of his non-stop-non-sleep orgies, Thomas A. Edison is too busy to accept the gift that his associates went to $7,000 expense and no end of trouble to get for him. Edison's reply to a 'phone message that "a big party and a big present" awaited him at the Ritz-Carlton was: "Too busy. Working on something new. Crate the present and send it to me. Much obliged."

The present was an exact replica of an antique hand-carved cabinet Edison saw in Paris, and of which he said: "If money could buy it, I'd have it." His associates sent a wood carver abroad who made a duplicate from the original with an electric lighting system and phonography mechanism installed within it. About once a year Edison goes on one of these working sprees and nothing can stop him. He eats very little and sleeps not at all.

Draft System For Sending Troops Over Will Be Adopted

Old Battalion System is being Abandoned---No More Will be Authorized and Some of those Now Organized May be Broken up---Recruiting Meeting For To-morrow Night Has Been Postponed--Letters From the Front--To-day's Orders and General Military News

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—A new system of reinforcing the troops overseas is announced. The old battalion system is being abandoned in favour of a draft system. This will mean not only the discontinuance of the practice of authorizing, recruiting and sending battalions overseas intact, but the probable breaking up of some of the battalions already authorized and recruiting in Canada, these battalions being converted into drafts for overseas. The new scheme will mean that men will go overseas with a minimum of delay.

The whole recruiting and mobilization situation has been under consideration for some weeks by Mr. F. B. McCurdy, M.P., Parliamentary Secretary of the department, and the senior departmental officer.

The system of recruiting by battalions has resulted in the enlistment of upwards of 375,000 men in 27 months. The practice of sending complete battalions overseas has resulted in the accumulation of a number of senior officers in England, due to the fact that with the formation of army divisions at the front, the additional battalions in England have necessarily been called on to provide reinforcements for battalions on the firing line.

May Return to Civil Life.

Almost a year ago the department sent out official notice to all general officers commanding that no assurance could be given to officers commanding battalions that these battalions could be held intact after their departure from Canada. Moreover, the senior Canadian officers in France have asked repeatedly that no officers above the rank of lieutenant be sent to France, as they naturally wish to promote those in the trenches who have acquired their knowledge and experience in action.

It is probable that a number of the senior officers left in England will be allowed to revert and go to the front, or if their services cannot be made use of for military duty that they will be allowed to return to civil life until such time as their services may be required.

There are a number of battalions in Canada which have not been able to recruit up to strength. The department is considering the advisability of amalgamating these.

The recruiting meeting announced yesterday to take place in the Armouries, under the auspices of the 247th Battalion, has been postponed for a week. The public is asked to note this. There will be a big meeting a week from Sunday night.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman is going ahead energetically with recruiting plans. On Monday he will meet the Ministerial Association of Peterborough at a special meeting and discuss the problem with them; while on Tuesday night he will confer with a gathering of business men. All business men in the city are urged to attend this meeting, which will be held in the office of the Patriotic Fund on Simcoe street. It is of the greatest importance that there should be a large attendance.

The 247th Battalion inaugurated a recruiting campaign on the streets this morning and all prospects were button-holed and the matter of enlistment put up to them. There are indications of a big revival in the interest of the Peterboro battalion. Yesterday there were some ten applications, but only two weathered the medical examination. The methods used to-day were the means of interesting other eligible men in the matter and should bring results.

The 236th Battalion squad, which is recruiting here, secured one recruit yesterday for their unit.

Capt. D. Warren of the Canadian Army Service Corps, and a veteran of the present war, is in the city to-day in the interests of recruiting for his battalion. A large number of men is required by the C. A. S. C.

Lieuts. A. H. Cameron and T. Quinn have returned from Kingston, where they have been taking a Captain's course.

Gunner J. C. Smith of the 4th Battery, and Pte. McWilliams of the 83rd Battalion, who have been on leave at their home here, return to the Convalescent Hospital in Kingston on Monday morning.

Lieut. S. Dunsford and Ptes. Ferguson and Rae of the 247th Battalion, who have been attending the Machine Gun School at Kingston, have returned to the city.

Corpl. F. B. Garlick, a Norwood member, is in the Canadian Special Hospital in England undergoing treatment for a loose cartilage in his knee. The trouble though not dangerous, is rather critical. The operation was to have taken place on the 31st of October.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Daily orders by Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, commanding 247th Battalion, C.E.F., for Saturday Nov. 25, 1916.

(1) Parade—

All officers, N.C.O.'s and men, except those specially employed, will parade at the drill hall at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

(2)—Duties—

Orderly officer for Saturday, Lieut. Strickland; next for duty, Lieut. Dunsford.

(3) Meeting—

The Peterborough Club invites Lieut.-Col. Ackerman and officers of the 247th Battalion to meet Capt. H. A. Pearson and Capt. C. W. Bishop, overseas representatives of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening, the 27th inst., at 8 o'clock.

Capt. Pearson is an old Peterborough boy, was the first Y.M.C.A. captain to land in France, and had two years' experience at the front.

Capt. Bishop has just returned from the Somme.

(4)—Transfer—

Capt. E. D. O'Flynn is transferred from the 12th Reserve Battalion, C.E.F., to the 36th Battalion, C.E.F., with rank of captain as of Nov. 7, 1916. Authority 3D, 25-247-2.

DEAD AT HOME ENTIRE DAY FAMILY TOO ILL TO CALL AID

R. Perry Taggart Residing at Extreme North End of Water Street Died Thursday Night Under Distressing Circumstances—Mother and Brother Ill Throughout Friday

FUNERAL ON MONDAY

When Robert Perry Taggart died from natural causes on Thursday evening at his home, 1035 Water Street, his brother, Albert Allen Taggart, himself weak from a recent illness, was only able to scribble "10.30" on the margin of a newspaper, as the hour when Perry died. About 8 o'clock on Friday night Albert stumbled up to the Children's Shelter to telephone for a doctor, and while it was reported that the explanation of this hiatus of action to call for assistance was that Albert and his mother had been overcome with coal gas, the attending doctors concluded that the reason of this lapse of a day to make the usual announcement was that both mother and son were physically unable to leave the house.

Entire Family Ill.

A whole series of recent disabilities affecting the three members of the family enter into this unusual situation and make it rather difficult to explain.

When Dr. M. McClelland was called to the Taggart home, last night, Perry was dead, Albert was manifestly unwell, and the mother so ill she was removed shortly afterwards to the Nicholls Hospital, in Bellegheim's motor ambulance.

Natural Death.

Dr. Greer investigated the case this morning and decided that Perry Taggart had died of a natural cause, paralysis and Albert informed the examiner this morning that his brother had died in an epileptic seizure, which, he added, was not the first he had suffered. In fact his brother was subject to epilepsy.

Mrs. Taggart, who was resting favourably this morning, is of an advanced age. Recently she had sustained an injury in a fall and has been otherwise unwell. Albert is still ill from the effects of stomach trouble, and although able to answer calls at the door this morning, has been of late unable to be about his affairs as usual.

Coal Gas in the House.

It is understood that the neighbours who first called at the Taggart home, last night, believe that coal gas, which, they said, was very heavy in the house, had rendered Albert Taggart and his mother unconscious by its effects. They opened the windows and doors to renew the air and even this morning the odor of gas was quite strong. But Mr. Taggart refutes this idea and the doctors point out that these two members of the family would likely have succumbed to the gas during the day if it were present in sufficient quantities to cause unconsciousness for that period.

How Brother Died.

Describing his brother's death Mr. Taggart stated that Perry was sitting on a chair in the dining room when he complained of a chill. The thermometer in the room registered 80 degrees, and Albert at once concluded that his brother was ill. The latter moved toward a lounge, placed his hands on it, but was unable to lift his feet and body on to it. Albert assisted him, and shortly after Perry was overcome with convulsions and died in about twenty minutes. That was about 10.30 on Thursday evening.

NET RESULT OF WEEK'S EVENTS TO PROLONG THE WAR

Fall of the Macedonian City of Monastir Balances the Occupation of Roumanian City of Cralova by the Forces of the Teutonic Powers.

SITUATION IN IRELAND

(By T. P. O'Connor.)

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The week ends the war situation somewhat complex, although, in my own mind, I have a clear conviction as to the net result. The fall of the Macedonain City of Monastir unquestionably balances the occupation of the Roumanian City of Craiova by the Germans and further hope comes to the Allies in the shape of the recent, and in many respects, the most successful advance on the Somme river front.

On the other hand, however, the hand of death is crossing almost every British threshold, and the House of Commons weekly pays tolls either among the Ministers or the rank and file, to the Moloch of war. Simultaneously come disturbing announcements from America of the supposed movement towards enforcing peace on the belligerent nations. In spite of all this, my own conviction remains clear that the net result of the events of the week will not speed the bringing about of peace, but on the other hand prolong the war.

MUST BE CRUSHED.

Should Germany get a firm grip on Roumania, it would undoubtedly place another big trump card in her hand and thus there would be less likelihood than ever on her part to consider any terms of which the Allies would look upon with favor. On the other hand, the deportation from Belgium and the still existing evidence of the gigantic strength and completeness of the German military machine, will serve to only stimulate the determination of the Allies that the Prussian military monster must either be crushed now or the burden left to coming generations. Hence, there is yet no repercussion of the war. The weariness and longing for peace which American suggestions have evoked in Germany, particularly in domestic circles, is in a measure reflected in the confusion of the battlefields. There is a good deal of restive discontent which is fanned by sensational newspapers and rumor is busy concerning impending Ministerial changes. Nothing is certain, however.

The Irish situation has been enormously influenced by the Redmondite victory in West Cork which means the beginning of the end of the O'Brien revolt. The rapid return of the majority of the people to Redmond and the ranks of constitutionalism and the solution of the police question may now be regarded as settled.

A NEW MEMBER

When the Speaker of the House of Commons called out the name John D. Nugent, William O'Brien looked up from his order paper and craned his neck back to catch a glimpse of the new member. Then he turned and said to one of his friends, "What a villainous face!" The remark was heard by John D. Nugent, and he immediately proceeded to repeat it with great delight to all of his colleagues. He could do so with the greatest satisfaction as it was not altogether a just observation. If Mr. O'Brien had called the face of John D. Nugent rugged or strong or aggressive, he would have been more accurate. A jaw of iron strength, strong, open, direct eyes, a stubby nose, a clean shaven face, except for a moustache, and great muscular looking body—the face

SATURDAY, NOV. 25, 1916

DO SOMETHING NOW.

The announcement comes from Ottawa that Canada is to have a "National Service Week" early in January, with the object of promoting the registration of the manhood of the country. Why wait till January? It is months since the National Service Board was organized, and not a tap done yet. Is this because the Board is composed chiefly of friends of the Government—ten Conservatives and one nominal Liberal—gentlemen whose flattery of the government consist in the appointment of official and delaying methods. Any success from "National Service" week will consist of the appointment of official enumerators, who will have government authority to demand information, and see that they get it, and not be "bluffed" or "cheeked" by slackers who do not recognise the authority of un-official solicitors of information. Under the unauthorised, but splendidly patriotic voluntary methods that have been used, by lack of definite government authority and leading they have become ineffective with the decay of the voluntary spirit, or the exhaustion of the manhood material inspired by it.

THRIFT! THRIFT! THRIFT!

If Canada is to benefit by the practice of national thrift—the habit must be formed in the young of the country. We are, as a people, wasteful and extravagant because we have not been educated otherwise. We teach our children in the schools in order to equip them with an education that may help them to make money, but we fail to teach them a more important thing; to make right use of it. To some thrift comes natural. We see some homes where, with a fair income, the family lives in comfort, pays its way and is happy. We see other homes where, with a similar or perhaps larger income, the family is in perpetual hot water without buying fuel—debt, a lean larder, duns, C.O.D. deliveries and perhaps the bailiff as a regular member of the visiting list. The explanation: thrift and unthrift.

We need to teach thrift in our schools, and if possible, in our homes. The former, and the latter through it, will come by the adoption of the savings bank system in the schools to give children an object lesson in the right use of money. The government is practically urging the people of this country to thrift as one of the means to helping Canada finance this war. The Bankers' Association have urged the managers of Penny Banks of Canada in Toronto to assist in a campaign of education, on the subject of thrift. The same request is being presented to school boards, including our own, which regularly receives such requests, which are as regularly "received"—rejected, refused, ignored, "turned down." A few years ago the Examiner, in the matter of school savings banks, got the Board in the mood of Felix—"almost persuaded," but nothing came of a matter of the most vital part of a child's education.

Our school board and ourselves may not see the benefits of habits and thrift and economy. But we will be convinced before long. This war is piling up an immense load of debt it will be followed by disturbing conditions in commerce, industry and every department of the national life. We shall need to bring to the solution of these difficulties not only the wisest statesmanship, but wisdom on the part of every individual of the Dominion. We shall have to practice the greatest economy and the greatest thrift—the right use of money. Do we know how, now? Is it not the wise thing to teach thrift to our children, who will have to bear, and steal with, the after burdens of the war?

ONTARIO'S NICKEL INTERESTS.

Turning aside, for the moment, from the Dominion government's policy of evasion of responsibility and imperilling of imperial interests in the matter of Canadian nickel, we might indicate that there is a serious responsibility upon Ontario and its rulers. Mr. Rowell in a recent speech said, "the time had come when capital & matter as the control of our nickel, which has so dominating position in the conditions of modern warfare, should be under control of the Ontario government."

That is, that the government should control the treatment of our nickel, and no be controlled by foreign or hostile interests. This is no new question. The Liberals in the Ontario Legislature last session took a definite and decided stand. They presented two resolutions. One called for the placing of the taxation of the Canadian Copper Company on a legal basis. This company is a subsidiary company of the International Nickel Company of the United States, whose agents in England for the sale of nickel refined from Ontario matte, are a pro-German organization, denounced as such by the secretary of the British Board of Trade. This Canadian annex of a foreign company, is allowed to escape with a fixed taxation of $40,000, fixed, (verbally), when he was Ontario Minister of Mines, by Hon. Frank Cochrane, the patron of Bourassa, the pro-German or if not, anti-British, head of the Nationalists, whose influence, officially fostered by the Borden government, has directly killed recruiting in Quebec and reactively slackened it in Ontario. Instead of letting this indirectly, but virtually pro-German company off with a paltry $40,000 taxation, the Liberal resolution called for the payment of $410,000, that should have been, and should be, levied under the Mining Act. This resolution was voted down by the government majority, as was also the following, which presented the square issue. Moved by Mr. Carter:

"That in the opinion of this House the production and sale of nickel in the province should be under government control, and that negotiations should be at once entered into by the government of this province with the government of the Dominion of Canada and the government of the United Kingdom to secure united action to acquire the absolute control of the nickel mines and nickel product of the Province of Ontario."

Of course these resolutions were voted down because, it was claimed, they involved a vote of want of confidence in the government. In reality so they were; but technically they would not have been if the government, recognizing how greatly they were directly in the provincial interest and indirectly in the national and imperial interest, had adopted and acted on their spirit. If they had done that in respect of the first, they would have put an end to a big waste of revenue. If the Canadian Copper Company had been compelled during the past five years to pay the legal taxation— $410 per year, the total would have amounted to $2,050,000, instead of the trivial $200,000 that came into the provincial coffers; a direct loss in revenue of $1,850,000. If the government as it should have done, and still should do, had taken or takes the full control of Ontario nickel, there would be a loss of taxation of $200,000 a year, but there would be adequate compensation in keeping in this province, the twelve or fifteen millions of profits a United States company realizes from the refinement of Canadian nickel. That would represent a proportional employment of Canadian labour, Canadian capital and industrial agencies. That would be a truly national policy and one well within the capacity of the province. If the Hydro-Electric Commission, representing a group of western municipalities, can afford to spend nine millions in building the Chippewa Power Canal, surely the Province of Ontario can afford to spend the four or five millions necessary to establish a nickel refining plant in Ontario, whose profits in one year of operation would not only more than recoup the cost of building and equipment and operation, but represent the truly national and rational and right policy of Canada for the Canadians—Ontario resources for the people of Ontario.

PRICE MAINTENANCE OF STANDARD GOODS ADVOCATED IN PURCHASERS' INTERESTS

According to the despatches published in the daily press, the Government threatens to take action to prevent the manufacturers fixing a resale price to the consumer, the Minister of Labour giving it as his opinion that placing a price in this manner was contrary to the present Combines Act. The Minister can possibly be excused, owing to his lack of knowledge of retail distribution. If the Government carries out their threatened action it will be because they know not what they do, as the Price Maintenance Policy has been strongly urged by the wholesale dealers, and retail dealers of all classes, including many unprincipled price-cutters. There are many manufacturers in Canada to-day who have seen the wisdom of adopting the Price Maintenance Policy, and at the present time the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada are endeavouring to get many others to do likewise. There is hardly a country in the world to-day but has some form of price maintenance. In the United States the Government appointed a committee on inter-state commerce to go into the whole matter of the wisdom of adopting a Price Maintenance Policy in that country. If the Cabinet Ministers at Ottawa will first secure for themselves a copy of the evidence given before that commission, they would immediately see the wisdom of encouraging manufacturers of standard articles to sell their goods through a Price Maintenance Policy. The Price Maintenance Policy is a benefit to the consumer. The consumer is not benefited by price cutting on standard trade-marked goods. On the contrary, the price maintained standard goods are commonly used as a means to defraud the consumer. The standard goods are invariably employed to advertise fake sales and fraudulent bargain counters, to attract the consumer's attention, and to thus lure him into a store, where after he purchases the advertised standard article at a loss of a few cents, he always succeeds in selling him some unknown article at an exorbitant price. Indeed the consumer pays well for the bargain that he obtains in the standard article. Furthermore, we all know that it is the general practice of dealers engaged in selling standard or trade marked goods on which the prices have been cut down, to make every effort to palm off on the consumer some unknown and unidentified brand, upon which the dealer make a substantial profit, as a substitute for the article that the consumer really wants, and in many cases dealers meet with success in that respect, and the customer instead of getting the article he is accustomed to use and that he really desires, obtains something which may or may not give him the same amount of satisfaction as the article called for by him and that he is well acquainted with. Stop price cutting on standard goods and you will at the same time eliminate from commercialism an instrument commonly used to defraud the consumer.

We do want free competition, but we want the kind of free competition that gives every man an equal opportunity to produce, to buy and to sell his merchandise in an open market, unrestricted and unrestrained by his competitors. We want free competitions that is restricted and regulated by the rule of fair trading. It is hoped that the Minister at Ottawa will become well advised on this subject before taking any drastic action. —Maritime Retailer.

Directors of the Kennecott Copper Corp. meet on the first Tuesday in December to take action on the dividend.

General Motors is earning $2,200,000 a month.

For December quarter United States Steel Corporation is expected to show earnings as high as $105,000,000 net.

Lackawanna Steel earned in October approximately $1,200,000 net after all charges, or at annual rate of slightly over $43 a share on the $34,750,000 stock.

White Motor Company has declared a quarterly dividend of $1 a share, placing the stock on an 8 per cent. dividend basis.

Crucible Steel's profits for past year averages 40 per cent. on the common.

Railway Steel Springs will not become one of the units in the proposed new consolidation of steel and equipment companies.

Chesapeake and Ohio current earnings are close to 11 per cent. compared with 4.73 per cent. in 1914.

Shattuck Arizona Copper Company performed during the month of October 2078 feet of development work, which compares with 1597 feet of new work performed in September.

Directors of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. have authorized a new issue of stock of approximately $40,000,000 at par in the ratio of one share of new stock for 10 shares now held.

Suggestions that the Allied governments plan to cancel many of their orders for shells and other munitions here, following the cancellation of one rifle contract, may be dismissed as not worthy of serious consideration says the Wall Street Journal.

United States Smelting directors meet for dividend action the latter part of December and in view of the pressure that is being steadily exercised from various quarters it would seem to be a reasonable expectation that the present $4 rate on the common will be increased. Strong arguments for a $6 basis will be made.

Alsike Stack Caught Fire—Barns Had Narrow Escape

This morning spontaneous combustion caused a fire in an alsike stack on the farm of Mr. George Edmison, who resides on the third line of Smith township. After some considerable difficulty the blaze was extinguished. The barns nearby had a narrow escape. Mr. Edmison was in Peterborough at the time. He was notified shortly after the fire broke out and immediately made for home. The damage will be slight.

Peterborough Offers Many Advantages As a Home City And as a Centre For All Kinds Of Manufacturing

Beautiful Location, Cheap Water and Light, Well Kept Parks, Residential Property at Reasonable Rates Make East Ontario's Most Progressive City An Ideal Home For Workingmen---Advantages As a Manufacturing Centre Clearly Shown By Selection of Peterborough By Such Mammoth Firms As The Canadian General Electric Company And Quaker Oats Company For The Location of Their Enormous Plants---Peterborough's Population Has Doubled Since 1900---City Has Done Magnificently In The Sending Of Men To The Colours, Enlistments Totaling 2,500---Splendid Contributions For Patriotic Purposes---This City Will Share Largely In The Boom That Will Come In Canada When Terrible War Has Come To An End And Manufacturing Re-Adjustments Have Been Made.

"PETERBOROUGH Presents Possibilities Unparalleled" — a slogan adopted some years ago —is a fitting summary of the many advantages the most progressive city in Eastern Ontario offers. Beautifully situated, nestling like Rome, between its seven hills, close to the magnificent chain of Kawartha Lakes and the lovely scenery of the Otonabee River, Rice Lake, and the Trent, offering cheap water and light and many moderately-priced residential sites, Peterborough has no need to worry about its future.

Its possibilities as a manufacturing centre are conclusively demonstrated by the number of factories located here and by the vast increase in the last decade in the amount of manufactured products, one of the largest increases in the Province. The selection of Peterborough by such mammoth concerns as the Canadian General Electric Company and the Quaker Oats Company is a striking endorsation of this city's advantages to manufacturers. These huge concerns, steadily growing in size, will be the magnets that will attract other large firms here, and further increase Peterborough's prestige as one of the most likely industrial centres in the Dominion. Hercules, the God of Power, is taking a hand in this. "The White Coal" is at its very doors, and with the water power operated by the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario.

Peterborough has never been a boom centre. The progress has been steady and sure. In 1900 the population was but 10,000, while this year, the assessors report, there are nearly 20,000 inhabitants here, and that with many residents now in France, England, or Canada, fighting for or training to fight for the Empire, for the cause of liberty for the smaller nations and the crushing of Prussian militarism. The "almighty dollar" has not yet in Peterborough proved a greater attraction than the backing of the spirit of freedom, of British fairplay. Peterborough has a fair future — its citizens will not make any compromise with the dollar at the expense of its soul. It is willing to pay the price, in both men and money.

That has been proved by Peterborough's contribution to the cause. To date some 2,500 have donned the khaki, while a conservative estimate places the gifts of this district towards patriotic and war causes—the British Red Cross, the Canadian Red Cross, comforts for the Canadian boys at the front, the Provincial war tax, and other like causes—at $350,000. This is sufficient proof that conscience is rated high in Peterborough, that pride of Empire has taken a deep hold in the minds of its citizens.

The natural advantages of Peterborough are many. Its railway facilities are good, while its site on the Trent Canal will make the bringing of raw materials here a matter of economical delivery. Its scenic features are many, its parks well kept, its cemeteries well deserving of the title of "God's Acre." A city of homes, Peterborough is made the more beautiful by the tender care bestowed upon its lawns and breathing spaces. Civic pride is well bestowed here, and the spirit of true citizenship is assiduously fostered by this very fact. Pure water supply, municipally owned, cheap hydro power with all its benefits, residential sites available at reasonable rates, are a few of the attractions which Peterborough has to offer to the workingman who comes here to make his residence.

With the conclusion of peace, Canada is bound to prosper. There may be a short period of depression, until the industries which have been utilizing all their energies towards the production of war supplies have readjusted themselves, but with all Europe, practically, needing rehabitulation, Canada will play a large part. Peterborough has many advantages to offer, and undoubtedly will share to a large extent in the prosperity which is bound to follow the present state of things. A greater Peterborough is assured. Let all assist in every way to make the expansion large and sure.

The Opening of The Toyman's Shop Proved a Success

The Children Joyously Acclaim Our Toyman's Shop as Headquarters For Santa Claus

We entertained a host of our little friends at the opening of The Toyman's Shop, our reward for weeks of effort was instant. The joy of giving joy is one of the greatest pleasures---and certainly the happy hearts and joy filled faces of the children was evidence of their enjoyment of this vast Toyland we have prepared for them.

It is a vertible Fairyland, a child world where age renews its youth---and youth halts in wonderment. For months in odd parts of the globe—in imposing factories—where child-love is an inspiration—many minds have wrought the designing of new Toys and joys for children. Here the results are shown in vast assortments that embrace practically everything that will delight the little folks.

Bring them often to view these toys and dolls—the loving task of selecting what will be most liked will become easy as you watch the little one's voice by word and look their choice.

Grown-ups will find extra interest in the price-tags—they establish the fact that gift things for children cost least here.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

To Major J. S. Lewis

Major Lewis was killed fighting the Germans along the Somme River. An American by birth, he came to Canada and was for years one of the most beloved newspaper men in the country. Bebore he went overseas he was Editor-in-Chief of the Montreal Star.

If you are dead a friend his praise must sing
Above this strife;
For all of you was all of everything
Endeared in life.

So bright, so sweet the days that here you trod
They might be days
Culled from the time that you will spend with God
In heavenly ways.

Wide as the boundless land from which you sprung
Was your fond mind
Whose hills and vales of thought with flowers were hung—
The fairest kind.

And every flower gave fragrance to some soul
That had been low,
And, like an altar incense, showed the goal
Where we should go.

Your sword was mighty and your pen was true,
And sword and pen
Long, long will be memorials to you—
Best of brave men.

M. A. HARGADON.

Would Appoint Superviser of Public Property

Ald. Dobbin May Propose Suggestion For Next Year's Council to Consider

Ald. Dobbin is considering an idea for next year's Council by which more attention may be given to minor necessary repairs and improvements throughout the city. It has likely developed out of the conference with the Engineer Department heads a few nights ago, when the Legal Committee practically demanded that precautions be taken to prevent accidents to citizens from which claims for damages arise. He believes that it might be practical to authorise some citizen to inspect the sidewalks, roads, crossings and other public property and to report to the Council whatever improvements or alterations he may deem advisable and advantageous.

The pedestrian who stumbles over a grating or other projection in the sidewalk, demands that such conditions should not exist, but they seem so trivial and often so numerous as to be beyond hope of proper adjustment. Other public annoyances and nuisances might be suggested in this connection, and doubtless more would appear to a supervisor who would make it his duty to go over the entire city.

It is unlikely that Ald. Dobbin proposes the appointment of another official for the general opinion is that there are officials aplenty. The suggestion presents a difficulty in that respect, in the selection of someone to perform this work and the decision of the amount of time he should devote to it. The task does not appear a large one, but has the promise of good results.

DOLLARD LEPINE PAYS EXTREME PENALTY OF LAW

ST. JOHNS, Que., —Nov. 25.—Dollard Lepine, alias Jean Renaud, was hanged yesterday at 8 o'clock in the court yard of the jail here. Lepine walked to the scaffold unassisted and maintained his courage well to the last, showing his agitation only by the extreme pallor of his face.

Among the officials present were Sheriff Leanies, Governor Laudriault, of Bordeaux Prison, Montreal; the Rev. Father Lafontaine, and Dr. J. H. Bruneau, the coroner. There were nearly two hundred witnesses of the execution.

The crime for which Lepine gave up his life was committed at the little town of St Luc, Que. He entered the home of Albert Wing, a farmer, seeking shelter, and was given food and a place to sleep. Late in the night Mr. Wing, hearing his visitor moving about, started downstairs to investigate and was shot dead. Lepine then seized Mrs. Wing in her room and attacked one of the daughters. He was captured without much difficulty

PUBLIC LIARARY NOTES

REFERENCE WORK.

First of all, consult the catalogue; failing this, consult the encyclopaedias; failing these, ask the librarian or his assistants to help you in your search. These preliminary remarks are made, first, because not a day passes that one does not notice people wandering up and down the aisles in quest of a book of whose whereabouts they have not the faintest idea, and secondly, because there are many instances in which neither encyclopaedias nor catalogue can help one and assistance has to be asked of those who as their custodians, may be assumed to know where they are to be found.

Now, as regards consulting encyclopaedias and catalogues, there is nothing much to be said. It is an easy enough matter for anyone to consult either of these reference agencies. The real difficulty arises when some question looms up wherein the resources of both fail to satisfy the enquirer. It is just here that reference work proves its value from the intellectual standpoint because it causes one's mental powers to get into action in the endeavour to reach the proper source of information. But it would be foolish to aver that anyone can make a success of reference work without a certain well-defined background of knowledge to work upon, it is not necessary to be a very advanced scholar but it is necessary that one should possess that modicum of learning which will enable the prosecution of research along certain mapped-out lines. Take for instance such a subject as Patriotism. If one were to look for an article on Patriotism in the Encyclopaedia the amount of information he would obtain would be somewhat disappointing. He would have to go further afield and by seeking in the right quarter he would get very valuable information in the articles on Civilisation and Geography. Very little consideration will suffice to show how patriotism is aroused by geographical conditions and that it must also necessarily figure in anything bearing on Civilisation.

A short time ago a request was made for the name of the author of the well-known lines,

"Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever,
Do noble things, not dream them all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever
One glad sweet song".

It was an easy enough matter to say off-hand that the author was Charles Kingsley, but it was not so easy to say where the poem could be found as we did not possess a copy of Kingsley's poetry in the Library. But there were anthologies on the shelves and in one or another it was fairly certain the lines could be found. It was discovered in Ward's Anthology. Most people are under the impression that the four lines quoted comprise the whole poem. As a matter of fact it is the second of a two-stanza poem entitled "A Farewell", the first stanza of which runs thus:—

"My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and gray;
Yet, 'ere we part, one lesson I can leave you
For every day".

One difficult problem that confronts reference workers is the hunting up of material on imperfect data. The following is an instance.

The question was asked "can you tell me, please, who was the author of the saying, 'Virtue alone is true gentility'?" Not being acquainted with the saying the librarian had recourse to the volumes dealing with quotations but found nothing, simply because the key word of the sentence had not been given. It took some thinking before the right word was hit upon and a satisfactory solution given. The proper rendering of the line is "Virtue alone is true nobility". It was written by Gifford, most probably William Gifford, first editor of the Quarterly Review, and occurs in the following quatrain:—

"Fond man, though all the heroes of your line
Bedeck your halls, and round your galleries shine
In proud display; yet take this truth from me—
Virtue alone is true nobility".

The above serves to show the great value of accuracy in dealing with reference work. If a person does not come properly prepared he not only is at sea himself but is very apt to put those who wish to help him at sea also.

Another and an hypothetical case is given to show the importance that attaches to the conserving of extracts from newspapers or periodicals. Librarians are often asked for information as to the origin and authorship of hymns. In the majority of cases enquirers can be satisfied by being directed to Julian's Dictionary of Hymnology. But even in that valuable work there are many instances where nothing but the name of the author is given and one is left ignorant of any fact concerning his or her personality.

Most of us know the well-known hymn beginning:

"Holy Father, in Thy mercy
Hear our anxious prayer".

Julian tells us that the authoress was Isabella S. Stevenson, and nothing more, but on looking at the catalogue reserved for clippings and magazine articles we find an article on this very hymn, from which the following extract is taken.

"During the war few hymns have become so popular as the one 'For absent Friends', which is found in 'Hymns Ancient and Modern' and other hymn-books. The Rev. J. B. Stopford, rector of St. Mark's, West Gordon has published a 2d pamphlet dealing with the history of the hymn with story illustrations", "We owe the popularity of the lines" says Mr. Stopford, "in the first instance to the King and his Navy". They were inserted in a small hymn-book of H.M.S. Barchante long before they found their way into any other collection. It came about in this way:—The authoress was a Miss Isabel Stevenson, who lived at Cheltenham with her father and mother and died there in 1880. A loved brother went out to South Africa and the pang of separation called forth the verses. They were written in the seventies of last century and were privately circulated; some friends received copies in the authoress' own handwriting. Among others into whose hands the hymn came was Mrs. Purefoy Fitzgerald, whose son was at that time a young officer in Her Majesty's fleet and was serving on board the Bacchante. On the same ship were the grandsons of Queen Victoria, they were on their famous voyage round the world. Mr. Fitzgerald, now Admiral Purefoy, receiving from his mother a printed copy of the hymn and it became known to the young princes, who liked it so much that it was used at services on board. Queen Alexandra received a copy from her sons. The hymn's first use in public worship was by sailors "tossing on the angry sea" and it passed from this use into Hymns Ancient and Modern and Church Hymns.

SOLDIERS JOIN CHURCH THROUGH Y.M.C.A. WORK

IN THE FRONT LINE—Y. M. C. A. GRAMOPHONE CHEERING UP CANADIANS.

(An Easter Letter from Captain T. F. Best, Uncle of Mr. Ray P. Best, in Flanders, Tells Its Own Story)

Five hours before you could see the sun, this bright Easter Morn, it has been shining in a clear sky for us in Flanders. Welcome as it is in all countries, in all seasons; "Ol' Sol" is double welcome out here after a winter of dark, wet weather and particularly after the past three days of rain and mud and cold and high wind. Yes, thrice welcome and very appropriate was the clear sky and the bright warm sun this morning as we hastened from the tent, hut, dugout, and billet to the large huts and marquees under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. to attend Holy Communion. This was occurring at twenty centres on our Canadian area and formed the opening number of ae series of communion and preaching services to be held throughout the day, one following close upon another including Roman Catholics, Anglicans, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists and Jews. These were nearly all conducted and addressed by our good chaplains, but had been previously arranged and the details worked out by the Y. M. C. A. officers in charge. Some of our splendid Canadian bands assisted the service helpfully during the day. At the service all ranks were represented from a General down to the privates, and all seemed deeply interested in the service. Religious services are not sneered at here by any one.

One Captain and three of his men came to Captain McKendrick to-day and told him of their decision to learn how to pray and live the Christian life. It appears that they came to this decision while in action last week. A comrade dearly beloved by them had his whole shoulder torn off by a shell. They carried him to comparative shelter and knelt around him in great grief as there was no possibility of saving his life. He asked his Captain to pray for him but the Captain shook his head. He could not make a prayer, so the dying man prayed. Then the Captain offered the only prayer he knew:—"Now I lay me down to sleep," and one of the men then led them in the Lord's Prayer. As they prayed, their beloved comrade passed away, and as they knelt by his silent bleeding body they entered into an agreement to "learn to pray and lead the Christian life," and they will be welcomed here and receive the right hand of fellowship, or confirmation by the Chaplains representing the church of their choice, and they will be received as members in good standing in the churches in the Homeland.

SPECIAL SERVICES IN GEORGE STREET

Two special services will be held in George street Methodist church on Sunday. In the morning, Capt. J. A. Kneale, one of the overseas men of the Y.M.C.A. will speak. Capt. Kneale was in charge of the Niagara military camp for two years and has been in military camp work for ten years. He will have a message of comfort and information as to what is being done for the soldiers overseas and in military training camps.

Memorial Service.

In the evening a memorial service will be held. The pastor, the Rev. H. G. Prever, will preach and Mr. Duncan Walker, Principal of the Normal school, will give a brief address. The order of service will be printed. The fallen heroes are Lieut. A. R. Ackerman, Lance-Corp. Harold Lowry, Pte. Jas. English, Pte. Norman Darling and Pte. H. G. Edginson.

BARON SHAUGHNESSY TAKES HIS SEAT IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 23.—It is felt everywhere that the first step towards a reconstructive policy of the Empire has been taken this afternoon when in the hallowed precincts of the House of Lords the bonds of union were cemented in a truly striking manner and in the presence of an august assembly of the bluest blood in Great Britain, Canada's son of the Empire, Lord Shaughnessy formally took his seat. His Lordship, absolutely self-possessed, erect, eyes keenly observant walked between his supporters, Lord Northcliffe and Lord McDonnell, the former Under Secretary for State in Ireland all dressed in the picturesque ceremonial robes and followed the bareheaded king at arms who was attired in his labard, and held in his hands the patent and the writ of summons to the House. Lord Shaughnessy followed the garter king to Lord Chancellor Buckmaster and made his obeisance. The Chancellor ordered Lord Shaughnessy's credentials to be read, after which the oaths were administered, and the writ handed over for keeping by the clerk of the House. Then in a stately manner Lord Shaughnessy was conducted to his seat by his sponsors, Lords Northcliffe and McDonnell, immediately after which all rose and bowed three times to Chancellor Buckmaster, at the same time doffing their black-peaked hats. The Chancellor returned the bows. Rising from their seats all three bowed again and then proceeded to the centre of the House of Lords, where the Chancellor, sitting on the woolsack, shook hands with Baron Shaughnessy and congratulated him. Immediately afterwards Lord Shaughnessy proceeded to the lobby, where he was surrounded and cordially greeted by his brother peers and many other friends who had visited the House to witness the ceremony. Amongst the guests present in the strangers' gallery were Sir Thomas Skinner, Sir Montague and Lady Allen, Mr. and Mrs. McLaren Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Allan, the Hon. Mrs. A. T. Shaughnessy, Mr. James Redmond and Miss Redmond, Mr. and Mrs. Orr Lewis, Major Campbell Stewart, Mrs. Joli De Lothiniere, Lady Holt and Major Maitland Kersey, while amongst the Canadian members of Parliament were Mr. Lemar Greenwood and Mr. Donald McMaster.

Oddfellows' Club Rooms

Reading, Card and Billiard Rooms Have Been Opened by Local Brethren

The Oddfellows of the city have opened up club rooms at the corner of George and Hunter streets for the accommodation of members of both local lodges and the convenience of out-of-town brethren who might be in the city. When the 83rd Battalion was in the city it was found that many Oddfellows from outside were in the ranks, and the necessity of a club room was brought forcibly before the members. There is a reading room, card room and billiard room, which will be open evenings and Saturday afternoons for local and visiting Oddfellows.

"I FEEL LIKE A NEW BEING"

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Brought The Joy Of Health After Two Years' Suffering

MADAM LAPLANTE

55 St. Rose St., Montreal, April 4th.

"For over two years I was sick and miserable. I suffered from constant Headaches, and had Palpitation of the Heart so badly that I feared I would die. There seemed to be a lump in my stomach and the Constipation was dreadful. I suffered from Pain in the Back and Kidney Disease.

I was treated by a physician for a year and a half and he did me no good at all. I tried "Fruit-a-tives" as a last resort. After using three boxes, I was greatly improved and twelve boxes made me well. Now I can work all day and there are no Headaches, no Palpitation, no Heart Trouble, no Constipation, no Pain or Kidney Trouble and I feel like a new being—and it was "Fruit-a-tives" that gave me back my health".

SUNDAY READING FOR A THOUGHTFUL HOUR

Prepared for the Examiner by a Local Church Worker

Like a cradle, rocking, rocking,
Peaceful, silent to and fro,
Like a mother, sweet looks falling
On the little face below,
Swings the great earth, turning, turning
Ceaseless, jarless, safe and slow,
Falls the light of God's face
Looking down on us below.
As the feeble babes that suffer,
Toss and cry, and cannot rest,
Are the ones the gentle mother
Folds the closest, loves the best.
So when we are weak and weary
By our sins weighed down, distressed
Then it is that God's great pity
Holds us closest, loves us best.
—Anon.

Arise, Let Us Go Hence.

We are to arise and go hence, To whom? The world has run away from God, and He has sent you and me to bring it back. Go out and represent Him. "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." The world is dying for the human touch—that is what the world needs. He will draw it if we hold Him up. If He draws we must follow. How does He draw? Churches are trying to draw — are wasting too much time and energy to hold Jesus up. The old world is hungry for the old-time religion of Jesus Christ. Billy Sunday says, "If Church of to-day had to suffer more, it would be more wonderful." Make gospel difficult, and you make it attractive. Christian religion is no bed of ease, but it is a joy. God yearns for us. He is richer than when He went up, for He took back a human experience. He knows what it is to walk a thorny path. We forget sometimes He is here interceding for us. Jesus Christ is the voice of God full of comfort. He is the hand of God reaching down to the lowest in the world. Not for us to take His hand, but for Him to take ours. What He has in His hand no one can pluck out. He is the face of God looking into men's faces, strong and winsome, and thorn-marked, with a smile like a rainbow through the storm. He has no face on earth but yours and mine. Do people see Him when they look at us? He is the heart of God, tender and yearning and true, beating in tune with the heart of Jesus. God wanted to lay His heart against ours so He sent Jesus, and it beat so hard on us that it broke. Do our hearts know the love of God, and others from us? We cant hold Him up unless we follow close in behind. That's what following means. Are we ready to go at every opportunity to pour out our hearts and follow Him? Never too busy to do something for somebody. Are we following Him in our yearning, sympathy and sacrifice? The world is dying for sympathy. Are we ready to give ourselves for them for Jesus' sake? Calvary was the personification of love, sympathy and sufferings of Jesus. No one can give without getting in. The coal that keeps us warm, does it by consuming itself. "We can give without loving, but we can't love without giving." In John 3:16, "For God so loved the world," we find "so" is the biggest word. That's the measure of our love. We make blunders and mistakes — yes, but the promise isn't to successful people—it's to the faithful ones — a crown of life is the reward.

"A little child, the lessons all unlearned.
My sums are hard, I cannot think to-night.
Dear father, won't you make the lessons right,
You understand it all?
I am so tired, I cannot think to-night,
Dear Father, take my life and make it right."

We must radiate love of Jesus Christ in our everyday life. Willing to say, "I want my life to bring more souls into the kingdom." "Arise, let us go hence."

—Marian Lawrence.

The Humanity of God.

(Form a sermon by John Clifford, M.A., LL.D., D.D.)

The word was made flesh; made human, and of the universal human, not merely of the Jewish human; and it is the universality and fullness of the human in Christ that casts its spell over us, and wins us to union and communion with Him. It is His pity, His exhaustless compassion, His matchless sympathy with man—with lost man, suffering and sinful man —irrespective of his class and station, his culture and rank; it is His hearty comradeship with the toilers of Galilee, His frank and fearless acceptance of the out cast and reprobate, His eager confidence in the man who comes with honest doubt in the secrecy of the night to talk with Him; it is this that gives Him His place in the heart and over the evils of men, and compels us to take as the key to His entire revelation.

Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord loves the world, and sends His son for its redemption.

Sir Oliver Lodge said, if he were asked what was the essential element in Christianity, he should say, "The divinity of man, and the humanity of God"; I should add to complete the statement" and "Jesus as the Revealer of both."

This interpreting God in the term of human father hood, determines the spirit and aim of the churches. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the church must pity men.

Does it throb with pity and tenderness towards men who have lost God, lost faith in themselves and in duty, in the goodness and order of the world, in the certainty of retribution, in the triumph of right, and in the redemption of mankind.

Is it said of us, Like as a father pitieth his children, so this church pities the poor and woe bogone, shelters the exposed, protects the imperilled, guides the perplexed, trains the young, solaces the sorrowful, saves the lost, so that the verdict of those who know us best?

The churches of Christ are always in danger of losing their humanity. They try hard to be great ecclesiastical organizations, instead of homes; to become imposing officials, rather than spiritual fathers and mothers; to sharpen the wits of philosophers in the creation of theological systems, instead of quickening the sense of human friendship and enriching men by love.

It is far easier to keep our theology than our humanity, our creeds than our fellowships. It is the human that tells.

He who is most man, works best for man, says Mrs. Browning.

Charles Lamb is eternally charming because he is so intensely human.

All the really great souls that have wrought the best work in the world by this quality of patnos, tenderness and loving sympathy for all that belongs to humanity. The church must be human enough for the social part of man, as well as thoughtful enough for the intellect; and pityful enough for the sorrows and sins of men, as well as strenuous enough in insistscience of men. Man is made for brotherhood. He grows by it.

There are thousands hungering for a word of fatherly guidance or motherly compassion. Who will rise and make faith in God a little easier? Who will scatter the mists of despondency? Who will seek the lost sheep for whom the Shepherd died?

Oh, that men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly where they cannot see!
Oh, that men would draw a little nearer
To one another! They'd be nearer Thee—
And understood!
—Ethel Colson, in the 'Continent.'

Hard Working Women

Will Find New Strength Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a home; every girl in offices, shops and factories is subjected to more or less worry. These cannot be avoided. But it is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible and to build up her system to meet unusual demands upon it. To guard against a breakdown in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. To keep the blood in this condition nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep up their strength and keep away disease by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. N. E. Tompsett, of Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For several years I suffered terribly from nervous debility, and was scarcely able to do a thing. During that time I consulted several doctors, and many medicines without getting any help, and I began to think that I would never get better. One day I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised and thought I would try them. After taking four boxes I was much better, but I continued using the pills for several months when I was again in the best of health. When I began using the pills I weighed only 100 pounds. While under their use with my renewed health I now weigh 140. I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every one whom I know to be ailing."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HELD CAPTURED TRENCH BY USE OF GERMAN RIFLES AND GERMAN AMMUNITION

Canadians After Taking Position, Drove off Five Counter Attacks, Writes Pte. Harry Hastie—Local Boy Tells of Exciting Work on Somme Front.

Writing to his parents, Harry Hastie gives some interesting details of the fighting on the Somme. He is with a 4th Division battalion.

Somewhere in France, No. 1, '16.

Dear Father and Mother,— I have three o fyour letters to answer now, as I have not written a letter for over two weeks. The news you received in the press that our regiment, the 57th C.G.G. and the 73rd Highlanders, were badly cut up on Sept. 15th, must have been a mistake, as neither of these regiments were in action on that date, as we were in the trenches at Ypres at that time, and things were very quiet. We were not in the attack which took the two villages you mentioned, but I have been through them often since. One would never know there had ever been a village there; everything is flat and level. This seems unreasonable, but it is nevertheless true, as the artillery has levelled everything, trees, houses and all. You never saw such a condition as the country here is in. I don't see how it will ever be of any use again. Shell holes are so thick that one has to walk around them, and as there is only a narrow piece of earth between each, it is risky at night. Many a one I have fallen into and climbed out mud from head to foot. I went two weeks without either a wash or shave, and was out every night carrying supplies over two and a half miles of this kind of country to the front line. One would be staggering along (one cant walk straight) when a shell would be heard coming towards you. The procedure would be to lie down and roll into the nearest trench or shel lhole; never mind the mud or anything else, get in there as quickly as possible. It is really laughable to see a fellow flop into a foot of mud and water when a shell sails over head. I have heard so many shells now that I can tell whether they are coming close or not. I can also distinguish a German from a British by the noise it makes.

One night a number of us lay in the bottom of a trench for over an hour, while a steady stream of shells went over, knocking half the parapet of the trench in on us. There was about three or four inches of wet mud in the bottom of the trench, but nevertheless we laid there. After some of these trips you could not touch any of us without getting mud on you. Without a word of a lie I have waded through mud three feet deep, and it is the most exhaustive work I ever experinced.

I will not try to tell you of any of the sights I have seen, as you could not believe them if I did tell you. I can't tell you what is going on or takes place, but some day I hope to tell you personally, although I have grave doubts if you will believe even then. I am not complaining, for we are now going through the hardships we enlisted for. I don't mind these hardships, for they are necessary. I am finding it hard on the nerves going through so much shelling.

The artillery never stops here; sometimes one can't hear anyone speak. I have had my ears plugged part of the time. The country is just covered with British artillery, and they are just blasting their way through. How the Germans stand up under the hail of shell we send over I don't know; it must be hell for them.

Several of our fellows are being awarded the D.C. Medals to-day for bravery in the attack we were in last week. No doubt you will see this in the paper. We lost heavily in the attack, I hear our casualties were over four hundred. We have won a pretty good name for taking this line of trenches, as it had been taken three times previously, but never could be held. We held it against five counter attacks, and when we ran out of ammunition and bombs, we had to use captured German rifles and ammunition. Talk about aeroplanes, one can't look up here without seeing a dozen or more. One day I counted thirty-four large balloons (these are connected to the ground with cables, and are used for observation. They are over a mile up), and along with them forty-two aeroplanes in the air at once. I saw two German aircraft brought down one day. One fell about two imles. I am getting quite expert at building dugouts now.

Some of we signallers have been on the carrying party, carrying ammunition, rations and supplies to the front line at night. This is very hard, dangerous work and I hope I never have the job again. It had been raining here for some time and the trenches are in an awful condition. Well, they got so bad that instead of trying to get along the trenches, we went right up to the front line over land. This was much more dangerous, but one made better time, and got out quicker. This was my job the night our boys too kthe above-mentioned line of trenches, and held it at an awful cost. We will be getting another draft soon to bring us up to strength again.

I received the box O.K. when I was up the line. It sure was doubly welcome to get it when under fire. There were four of us in a small dug-out when I received it, and we sure had a feed. The apples were fine and tasted great. I have seen the far-famed tanks, in fact I have been all through one of them. They are a wonderful machine. Don't worry, as I am well and looking after myself.

Your loving son,
HARRY.

A SPLENDID PROGRAMME IN COLLEGIATE HALL

Last night the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute was crowded to hear Mr. Frank Whitehouse play for the first time in public the Aeolian-Vocalian. Mr. Whitehouse was assisted by Mrs. Cameron Wilson and Miss Gertrude Stevens, who rendered some vocal soles, which were much appreciated. The recital was given under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., and the ushers were some of the members of the Peter Robinson Chapter. The programme was as follows

Selection, 'Love's Memories,' ..... Heinzman
Orchestra.
Song, 'A Perfect Day,' ..... Bond
Oscar Seagle
Trio, 'In the Gloaming,' .. Harrison
Violin, Cello and Piano.
Quartette 'Just Awearying For You' ..... Bond
Stellar Quartette.
Vocal Solo, 'Lute Player' .. Allitsen
Miss Gertrude Stevens.
Duett, 'The Herd Girl's Dream' .... Labitsky
Violin and Flute.
Violin solo, 'Three Dances' .. German
'Country Dance'
'Pastoral'
'Merrymakers' Dance'
Mrs. Cameron Wilson,
Operatic Medley, 'High Jinks' ..... W. Orch
Victor Light Opera.
Selection, 'La Paloma' ..... Yradier
Orchestra.
Duett 'Whispering Hope' Hawthorne
Soprano and Contralto.
Song, 'For You Alone' ..... Goehl
Baritone Solo
Violin solo (a) Salut D'Amour..Elgar
(b) Gavotte.
Mrs. Cameron Wilson.
Baritone Solo, 'Jesu Lover of My Soul,' ..... Marsh
Trio, 'Evening Chimes' ....Marizan
Violin, 'Cello and Harp.
Vocal solo, 'Dennis Darlin' ', Stewart
Miss Gertrude Stevens
Duett, 'Forget-Me-Not .... Macbeth
Violin and 'Cello
Selection, 'The Trailing Arbutus' ..
God Save The King.

The playing of the Aeolian-Vocalian delighted the large audience, each number being rendered with a clearness and lack of mechanical effect that was, indeed, refreshing. The programme included vocal and instrumental demonstration of the wonderful capabilities of the new music-producing instrument.

Cosmetics Not Needed; Peel the Skin Instead

One reason mercolized wax is so strongly recommended is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics, saving time, patience and expense. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any massage cream and better than any rouge, for accomplishing the results for which such articles are used. As the wax actually absorbs an old, faded or discolored cuticle, a little each day, the new dainty skin which gradually appears, is clearer, softer, healthier-hued and more youthful than any cosmetic-made complexion. Spreading on a thin coat of this wax at night, washing it off morning, in a week or so produces a marvelous transformation. Just one ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will do the work. There's nothing better to remove freckles, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, blotches, pimples or blackheads.

For wrinkles and loose, baggy skin, a face bath made by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel, is the best thing that can be recommended. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

New Lanvin frocks show several roses resting in a basket of china beads, embroidered in the front of the waist, just below the Moyen-age neck.

WOMEN TEACHERS' GUILD ENTERTAINED

The members of the Women Teachers' Guild were entertained at a Roumanian Tea, at South Central School, on Friday, Nov. 24th, the Kindergarten Room being very appropriately decorated for the occasion. The evening was pleasantly spent, one of the interesting features being the reading of an excellent paper on "Roumania."

THE WEATHER

The high mile of yesterday has been followed by the usual cold clip, and this morning the temperature was down to 6 degrees above zero. An inch or so of snow heightens the wintry aspect. "Is winter here to stay?" is the question asked, and answered variously. While consistently winter sets in at as early a date as this it is rare, and by all the averages of the past we should have a few weeks yet of fine weather.—W. P.

Church Bowling League Formed

Good Attendance at the Various Y. M. C. A. Classes—Address By Mr. G. N. Gordon

At the meeting of the Church Bowling League held Thursday night, the following officers were elected:

President—Mr. Edgar Walton.
Vice-President—Hugh Austin.
Sec.-Treas.—Jack Green.

Six churches have entered the League, and the schedule of games will be published Monday.

St. Andrew's Church has formed a Sunday School League, which will bowl Mondays on the Y. M. C. A. Alleys so there is every prospect of the alleys having an unusually busy season. Two new sets of pins will be on hand for the opening of the League Tuesday night.

The attendance at gymnasium and Bible classes is keeping up in good shape, and there is every prospect of its being a record season in all lines of activity.

Visiting soldiers from four different cities occupied our dormitories Friday night, the Association building now being the recognized headquarters for these military visitors.

There are several good vacant rooms in the dormitories giving a good selection to any interested in that line.

Five Days Remain.

There still remain five days of the Membership Contest and it will need the hearty co-operation of all the Association men to secure the goal of eight hundred enrolled members by December 1st. It is expected that every worker will be prepared with a good report at the supper Tuesday evening. Workers should note the fact that the next Conference supper will be held Tuesday and not Monday night. The postponement is due to the fact that three members of the National Council will be in the city on Monday afternoon and evening conferring with our men regarding military work.

Every man and older boy should be present at the meeting Sunday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock to hear Mr. G. N. Gordon's address on "Efficiency."

BOWLING

In the Bowling League game played last night on Water street allies between De Laval and C.G.E., the C.G.E. took three straight games. Jardine was high for C.G.E., the only one to top the 600 mark. Carter was high for losers. De Laval were in hard luck during the evening, their players crossing the foul line, which accounts for the low score:

Bob Parker Is Elected

HAMILTON, Nov. 24.—Speculation as to whether Hamilton would have other than a soldier team from the 227th Battalion in the O.H.A. was set at rest to-night at an enthusiastic meeting of civilian players at the rink. At this meeting the Hamilton Hockey Club decided to enter an intermediate team.

Fifteen players attended the meeting including a majority of last season's team. There is no question of the strength of the seven that will wear the local uniforms. Most of the men have already demonstrated that they are capable of holding their own in the O.H.A.'s intermediate race. "Bob" Parker, the former Peterborough player was elected President, and Frank Robbins, the local football official, will look after the duties of Secretary. By the first of the new year the local team will have had two weeks' practice on the artificial ice at the rink.

My Dearest Wife:—Just a few lines to let you know I am well and hope this finds you all the same. I am in the trenches again, but things are very quiet these days. I am at present on a working party. We rest all day and work at night; we do all kinds of jobs that cannot be done in daytime, and I like it, for it is a change from sentry duty. We generally work about five hours at night, then we are done till the next night. The weather here is very wet and it rains here every day, and of course there is lots of mud, but I am used to it now. We are living in a house just beside the trenches. Of course the houses are smashed up, the roof it off it, and there are no doors or windows; so we live in the cellars, but it is good and warm, for we have a fire made out of an old pail with some holes knocked in it. This has been a pretty little town, before the war, but now there is not a whole house in it. The Germans smashed it up the first year of war. There is not a civilian in the whole place and even the trees up the sides of the street have been smashed by shell fire. In the daytime we go all through the old houses, exploring; and in some of them you can see all kinds of clothing and furniture, which the people left behind. I guess they had no time to get them out. A lot of them even have baby cradles and cots in them. And this is just what would happen to England and Canada if Fritz ever got there. If some of the slackers in Canada could see what we see over here, then, may be they would come over and help to push the Germans back to their own country. Here is the head of a flower I picked up at the side of the french; I guess it was part of a garden at one time. Well, dear, I don't think I have much more to say at present, so I will close, hoping to hear from you soon. Your loving husband,

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The New Ford Car

A new Ford car and a new Ford price are the two important announcements we have been proud to make—a new car that is smart in design and a price that is considerably lower.

The modern streamline trend of motor car design has never been given a more beautiful expression than in the new Ford car. Graceful lines that surpass anything so far offered in a light car have been developed by the Ford experts, and all who have seen the care are delighted with its appearance. No car on the market to-day appears to better advantage.

Runabout, only $475; Touring car, $495. F.O.B. Ford, Ontario.

If you desire a motor car, there is but one car you can logically consider. That one is the Ford. It will give you more motor car mileage per dollar invested than you can get in any other car. This was true last year. It is even more true now.

NET RESULT OF WEEK'S EVENTS TO PROLONG THE WAR

and the figure of that hard dour race of Catholic peasant in Ulster—such is the appearance of John D. Nugent. But the good humor in the eyes, in the pleasant smile, and the suggestion of profound passion created by the sense of human wrong relieves the whole expression, and makes the face typically genial and Irish.

I introduce him to you to-day because he is one of the great new forces in Irish life, of which the world will hear a great deal more by and by.

The reason why William O'Brien hates him while so many other people admire him, is largely due to the fact that he is the secretary of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. The Ancient Order is one of the most curious examples in history of the persistence of an organization through several generations, retaining its name and yet changing its character with the change in the conditions of the times. It was brought into existence in the 17th century when the then omnipotent and very bigoted Orange party made fierce war on the remnant of the Catholics, who still survived the massacres and the confiscations of the Elisabethian, Cromwellian and Williamite time. The Catholic houses were visited by night; were often set on fire, and some of their inhabitants roasted; and this was done under the orders of local organization which was a secret society. The Catholics combined for self defence; they also were a secret society, and doubtless they now and then paid back in kind the sufferings inflicted on them.

IRELAND EMERGED.

Time passed on, and Ireland emerged gradually from the kind of internecine savagery which still survives in the Balkan States; and the Ancient Order changed some of its characteristics with the times. But it had still to face a powerful enemy in the Orange society, which made war on their creed and their very existence. The Society extended itself to whatever culture the Irish Ulster Catholics reached, maintaining both its character, also a secret and strictly Catholic association; now and then doing violent things; and in Great Britain, when anti-Irish feeling was still common and fierce, paying back outrage upon Irishman with outrage. It was a sort of Trades Union before Trades Unionism, and most of the rough unlettered Irish laborers who emigrated to England, found in it protection and organisation.

Up to a comparatively recent period it still remained in Ireland herself mainly an Ulster organisation—the relations between Catholic and Protestant in the southern portions of Ireland never in modern times having reached the savage bitterness of sectarian feeling in the North. Its tremendous growth within the last few years is due to two causes, both at once hostile and useful to it. The first of these was the adhesion of a large number of the priests, especially the younger priests, in Ulster to the disrupting forces associated with the name of Mr. Healy. Staunchly Catholic, the Hibernians were at the same time fiercely Nationalist, and like all the stronghands of Ulster, they were opposed to any factious movement that threatened the Irish party as the embodiment of that unity. There was thus that curious paradox of Irish life which few but Irishman understand, namely—an intense Catholicity with an equally intense independence of any attempt on the part of the clergy to encroach beyond their proper rights in politics, and especially in the interests of faction against National unity. Daniel O'Connel long ago gave the motto for this policy, "I take my religion from Rome but my politics from Ireland." The Hibernians literally saved the existence of the Irish party in Ulster, and through Ulster in Ireland generally, and thus were hated by all the enemies of the Irish party—Mr. O'Brien included.

VIOLENTLY DENOUNCED.

Denounced violently — sometimes even by high ecclesiastical dignitaries, the Order made continuous progress, and the attacks of Mr. O'Brien had the paradoxical effect of spreading it to Cork and other counties in the south of Ireland, where up to then it had been practically unknown. It is now making way in Great Britain; in Scotland it has always had considerable strength. And then came Lloyd-George to give it a status it never had before. Under his great insurance act benefit working men's societies were entitled to become what were called "approved societies" and in that way to become the administrators to their members of the benefits of the Insurance Act. Thus this organization—for several generations outlawed and lawless—emerged into the middle aged respectability such as that of the British trades unions or such benefit societies as the Oddfellows.

Its accounts were well kept, its members were sober, loyal and thrifty, and its funds now reached a huge annual income.

Some years ago Joseph Devlin was induced to take the presidency. His extraordinary eloquence, his courage, his immense hold over men, gave to the Society a status it never had before; for its leadership had been in the hands of men of comparatively small position. To Mr. Devlin there came the splendid combination of a thorough organiser, a clear headed man of business, a temper energetic and practical in John D. Nugent, who became the General Secretary. Its branches have spread and spread; it has built halls in many of the sombre Irish villages (especially in Ulster) and by the dance and song has brought back to rural Irish life much of that old gaiety which had disappeared with the famine. It has a splendid (almost a palatial) office in Dublin, in short it is getting to that wealth and power which are the characteristics in all parts of the world of the workingman's insurance society.

HAS IMMENSE FAITH.

But John D. Nugent is a vehement politician as well as a man of business, and an insurance agent; and the sufferings and the wrongs which he saw inflicted in his childhood on his fellow Catholics has given to his face some of that dour resolution which so shocked Mr. O'Brien. He has immense faith in organization, and the way which he is able to exercise in many parts of Ireland is a justification of this faith. Recently he has entered on a new and fateful departure. The breakdown of the Irish settlement, following the exasperation caused by the executions, has produced the revival of the old spirit of fierce opposition to the Government which was dying away under the softening influence of the triumph of the Home Rule policy. Mr. Nugent at once set himself to work to give force and form to the general national passion; and first he took in hand the police of Dublin. He found there material ready to hand, for by universal acknowledgment (including that of Chief Secretary Duke) these men were scandalously underpaid, and they were ready to revolt.

Then an extraordinary thing happened. Without any display, just walking down in twos and threes in plain clothes, the constables went to the Hall of the Hibernians, and were enrolled as members. Dublin Castle nearly had a fit; and all kinds of threats were uttered against this flagrant and appallingly novel method of protest by a Government force against Government action. Poor, worried Mr. Duke was rushed over to Dublin by frenzied telegrams; he then rushed back to London to propose a new and a better scale of wages for the policemen; and he thundered against their attempt to become Hibernians.

And then was discovered one of the many anomalies in the cinematograph of Irish life. It appeared that there is a law against the police joining any organisation with one exception; and this exception—to make the thing more ironical and more Irish—is the Freemason's Society. Freemasonry like the chameleon takes its hue from the atmosphere. In Prussia it is strongly monarchial and devoutly orthodox; in France it is extremely Republican and extremely Freethinking; in Ireland it is simply another section of the Orange lodges; in England it is an organization for good dining, copious wining and abundant and generous philanthropy. This was the weak point in the armour of Dublin Castle which John Nugent saw; and thus the poor Chief Secretary was put in the position of either excluding the police from the two organizations or being guilty of the iniquity of excluding the Catholic and permitting the Protestant organization.

AWAITS RESULTS.

Mr. Nugent smiles sweetly over the trouble; awaits results calmly; for whatever happens he knows that the police force of Ireland in future looks to him rather than to Dublin Castle for guidance and for help. One must be an Irishman to realize all this means of upheaval and transformation in Ireland. The police were hitherto the force of forces on which successive governments could rely. It fought bravely and loyally for its salt: it looked to the government for everything: the Government looked to it for everything: it was the chief pillar of British Government in Ireland. And now Dublin Castle no longer holds the key to the position in Ireland: it has passed into the hands of John D. Nugent. Commentators in the British and the Irish press have noted the change. "It is one of the chickens of the Government come home to roost," comments a writer in the Manchester Guardian—meaning it is part of that break-up of the orderly civil society which came with the Ulster rebellion. The comment of others is that it is the final proof of the growing conviction even among Englishmen that the Government of Ireland has become impossible except through the Irish people themselves. So the settlement may be soon coming again, with all the forces hostile to it affrighted, terrified and finally conscious of their defeat.

JESSE L. LASKY
presents America's Leading Film Star
FANNIE WARD
— IN —
A Gutter Magdalene

SYNOPSIS

Fannie Ward, who created a sensation in the world of motion pictures by her performances in "The Cheat," "Tennessee's Pardner," and other Lasky photoplays on the Paramount Programme, is the central figure in a new photoplay to Willard Mack, author of "Kick In" and other successful plays, which gives a vivid picture of a phase of city life and is replete with stirring adventure and romance. In "A Gutter Magdalene" Miss Ward as Maida, finds redemption in her allegiance to the Salvation Army. As a worker for this great cause her path re-crosses those whom she knew in other days. Temptation is thrown in her way again. The manner in which she successfully combats these temptations forms the remainder of the story.

Doctors Agree On Eczema Remedy

Confirm the Statements About D. D. D. Prescription

Geo. T. Richardson, M.D.: "In my opinion D.D.D. should be applied in all cases of skin disease—an immediate relief to the itch, a calm to excited nerves, soft, soothing, yet a powerful agent, a strength to the general system."

Dr. Unna Holmes: "D.D.D. is as near a specific for eczema and the dreadful psoriasis as is quinine for malaria. I constantly prescribe D.D.D. also for salt rheum, tetter, barber's itch, pimples, all forms of itching eruptions, scales, sores."

Dr. Ira T. Gabbert: "I freely admit that D.D.D. reaches most cases of eczema and permanently cures them."

Come to us and we will tell you more about this remarkable remedy. Your money back unless the first bottle relieves you. D.D.D. Soap keeps your skin healthy. Ask about it.

WEDDING BELLS

BANKS—FLETCHER.

A very pretty military wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Fletcher of the Township of South Monaghan (Rensfort), on Wednesday, Nov. 22, 1916, when their youngest daughter, Eva E., was Robert H. Banks of the 236th Battalion, (Peels Pride), Toronto, he being the fourth son of Henry Banks, Esq., Toronto.

Promptly at the hour of 3 o'clock Miss Jean Finney presided at the organ, and the groom, clad in khaki, took his position under a beautiful arch of evergreens, which was banked with a large Union Jack.

The ring-bearer, little Velna Nurse, preceded the bride, who entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, she being attired in a travelling suit of navy blue serge, with a large hat trimmed with fur to match.

The bride, having been presented for marriage, the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. L. Wicket (Pastor of the bride), in the presence of a few of the immediate relatives and friends.

After congratulations had been extended, the guests were invited to partake of the bounties of a sumptuous dinner, after which the happy couple left amid showers of good wishes on an extended trip, and on their return Mr. and Mrs. Banks will reside at 337 Quebec street, Toronto, (West).

The presents were numerous and useful. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of lynx furs, and among the many other gifts, was a variety shower by members of the Church and Sunday School, and a cut-glass dish by the choir, of which the bride had been organist.

FOOD PROBLEM

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25.—How to increase and, if possible, more equally distribute the nation's food supply and thereby combat the ever rising prices was subjected to Government study to-day. It is held by administration officials and others very close to the President that the food problem is one demanding the closest and most careful study.

Public Pays More For Food

Government Gets Supplies For the Soldiers 68.69 Per Cent Cheaper

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 25.—Where the Government pays 33.70 cents for the foodstuffs for soldiers in Ontario, the public pays 55.94 cents for the same amount of foodstuffs when buying at retail prices. This amounts to 68.69 per cent. more than the Government has to pay for the soldiers' food, according to the figures of the Toronto Daily Star food expert to-day.

Former Peterboro Woman Resumes Her Stage Work

NEW YORK, Nov. 25—Phil Peters, Dan Coleman's running mate in Harry Hastings' Big Show, will retire from burlesque at the end of the present season and will go to Europe to fill a long vaudeville engagement. Mrs. Peters, who formerly worked with him, but who was obliged to retire from the stage because of rheumatism, has fully recovered and will be able so resume her stage work with him. They are planning to make their "new stage" debut at Hartford Christmas week, when they will put on their new vaudeville act at a big Christmas party, which is already being planned. The chorus girls are each contributing ten cents weekly toward the Christmas fund, and the principals twenty-five cents. Mr. Peters, who is treasurer, already has $90 in hand for the celebration.

Mrs. Peters was formerly Nettie Martyn, born and raised in Peterborough, and took part in many local entertainments in the old Opera House. She was known throughout the larger cities of the United States as the Canadian nightingale.

Special Address At S. A. Temple

Evangelist J. K. Andrew, of New York, who has been connected with the Y.M.C.A. movement among the boys at the front, and has had two years in the trenches, will sing and give a special address at the Salvation Army Temple to-morrow evening at 7 o'clock.

This will be a splendid opportunity for everybody to hear the noted evangelist and worker among our boys at the front.

Legislature To Sit Earlier

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 25.—It is officially announced that the Ontario Legislature will meet from two to three weeks earlier in the coming year.

Usually the Legislature assembled early in February, but next session may be called as early as the middle of January. This will probably necessitate holding of by-elections early in January.

PASTRY CAKES ARE NOW FORBIDDEN BY FRENCH FOOD LAWS

PARIS, Nov. 25. — Two meatless days a week were decided upon by the Cabinet. After consultation with traders, it was agreed that the two days should be Thursday and Friday, and a decree to that effect will shortly be issued.

It was also decided to prohibit altogether the making of fresh pastry cakes and rolls and fancy bread. The smallest loaf will that of two pounds weight.

Crackers and kindred edibles of a dry character will be the only form of cakes permitted.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures "give us away".

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orthine in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orthine taken at meal-time gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no dieting is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.25 postal note or money order. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can.

Belgians Treated As Babylonian Slaves

Belgian Minister of Munitions Denounces Deportations as Crime of the Ages—Men Are Herded Like Cattle and Taken as Captives into Germany—Neutral Powers Protest.

OVER 200,000 DEPORTED

HAVRE, November 27.—Mr. Emile Vandervelde, Minister of Munitions in the Belgian Cabinet and president of the Executive Committee of the International Association of Socialists, has written to the committee concerning the deportations of Belgian workingmen to Germany, as follows:—

"We might have believed that, after submitting to invasion with its violences and occupation with its miseries, our people had suffered all that a people could suffer, but worse was still to come. Despairing of being able to keep that which it had taken in disregard of its faith and its word, the German government appears determined to treat the Belgians as the conquered were treated in the ages of Assyria and Babylon.

"We receive every day at Havre messages which make our hearts bleed. The deportations in Flanders, at Charleroi, at Mons and in the largest part of the country are more numerous and agonizing. The men are of every age and condition, but particularly youths and workingmen.

HERDED LIKE CATTLE.

"They are gathered up, herded and numbered like cattle and taken as captives into other provinces, into Northern France and into Germany, without their kindred knowing where they are being taken. They are forced to make fortifications, to construct strategic railways, to make cement and other materials used in building trenches or to replace in other work labourers who are being sent to the front or into munition works."

Mr. Vandervelde said that the Belgian Minister at The Hague telegraphed on November 17 that more than two hundred thousand Belgians already had been deported and that the German authorities had posted orders in Brussels announcing that the deportation of men from the capital would commence on November 18. In his letter the Belgian socialist leader cites an article of The Hague Convention of 1907 prohibiting belligerents from forcing enemy nationals to participate in operations of war against their country.

"Baron von Huehne, the Military Governor of Antwerp," the letter continues, "authorized the Cardinal of Malines in October, 1914, to say to the populations who fear to re-enter Belgium:—'Youths need not fear that they will be sent into Germany, nor enrolled in the army nor employed in forced labour.' Field Marshal von der Goltz and after him Governor General von Bissing made additional agreements. Nevertheless, to-day, regardless of indignant protests the German military authority organizes a civil conscription of Belgians against their country and for the benefit of the enemy.

NEUTRAL POWERS PROTEST.

"Before this crime not one neutral power has thought it advisable to

French Troops Made Some Small Gains

All Enemy Attempts to Recover Lost Ground Were Repulsed—Artillery Busy at All Points

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, Nov. 27. — French troops made a violent attack at 4a. Mihiel sector and made some small gains. German attacking parties were active over the week and all attempts to recover ground were repelled. Allies' artillery busy at all points. No infantry activity. One of the allied airships lost in scouting. The Germans made attacks on the lines of Verdun. In other parts nothing important to report.

CHICAGO MARKET WEAK.

Wheat Declines on the Question of Embargo.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Wheat values took a fresh downward swing Saturday, largely on account of advices indicating that the question of an embargo on foodstuffs was leading to a sharp struggle in Washington. On the resulting break in prices some buying on the part of houses with seaboard connections took place, but the check on the decline was only temporary.

The effect of comparative strength in Liverpool quotations was offset by weakness in the market at Winnipeg.

CATTLE MARKETS.

GRANDECOURT ROAD IS GERMAN ARTERY

Until British Can Cut It Supplies Will Go Down to Forces Holding Ancre Lines—Village is Fortified Like a Miniature Metz—In Daytime the Road is an Empty White Dead Stripe Upon the Brown Dead Lands From Grandecourt Down to No Man's Land.

BRITISH HAVE A FOOTING

(By Percival Gibson.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY ON THE SOMME, November 27 The long road above the marshes of the Ancre, which shows itself in the distance as a string of shell-splintered poplar stumps, crooks a sharp elbow where it enters the village of Grandecourt and is converted from there on to the purposes of a broad village street.

It is or was before big shells did their work a quiet thoroughfare, running between eyeless house fronts of Oise and Picardy village farms, whose barns and cow houses show their backs to the street, making the outer wall of the courtyard, with the dwelling houses at the inner and further side of the square of buildings. Pozieres was once like that, and Beaucourt-Hamel and Beaucourt-sur-Ancre.

In the daytime that road was an empty, white, dead stripe upon the brown dead lands from Grandcourt down to No Man's Land. The British guns searched it with shrapnel and high explosives were planing from its surface whatever life moved upon it. The guns were so masters and governors of it that by daylight not a pickelhaube or outze could lift its crown under the penalty of being squashed like a fly on a pane.

But at night it awoke and along it poured the blood of life for the German front-line positions, south of the Ancre, men for reliefs, ammunition, food for the men, and the like. It was the carotid artery of the front line.

A few nights ago the current flowed as usual, but the following afternoon, following a dawn attack from Staff anad Aegina trenches, bombing parties of British soldiers crawled and clambered through the piled ruins of the houses on the southeastern outskirts of the village and blazed their way up the road with grenades till they reached the elbow, and there behind fallen walls that sprawl across the street in heaps of broken brick they hang on. Until the carotid is cut, Grandcourt is not taken, but the mere fact that the British have a footing within lends special eclat to the operation of which their dashing thrust was a part.

VILLAGE NO LONGER REMOTE.

Grandcourt, by some quite illogical operation, though, has gained for itself a character of singular remoteness. It is not merely that it is fortified like a miniature Metz, but from the points at which one could see it is peeped above its sheltering bosom of hill distantly and shyly.

But Grandcourt is no longer so remote—"Nous les aurons" in the good phrase of our good ally.

The barrage went over in dark, splashing, brief, new constellations against the beard were only the tip of the point of an advance which lifts the solid main fighting line nearer to Frandcourt by pretty well 800 yards.

The attack took place on a front of about 500 yards from the British positions upon lines of the recently captured Stuff and Regina trenches. A thin snow fell, bitter as acid in the long, stagnant cold of night, and as the darkness thinned toward the dawn, while the men behind their parapets stood by for the word to go over, it showed a landscape suddenly become unfamiliar to eyes so long accustomed to the prospects of unrelieved brown mud.

The barrage went over in dark, splashing, brief, new constellations against the sullen sky as the shrapnel of creeping fire twinkled and glittered. When the moment came for the waves to flow over the parapet the snow was even of some use, since the dim shine of it let the shapes of men be seen and made it easier for the platoons to keep in touch upon right and centre.

The objective was gained in the usual manner—rushes, rushes forward behind the barrage till the moment when the bombers went for the trench and the bayonet men came through them and went down to their work in the trench. Very many prisoners were taken. A thousand are spoken of, but there is nothing official yet about the figures.

"Upon the left of the sunken road which runs from back of the British line near its centre, through the German positions, (Stump Road is its local title,) there was a deft arrangement of machine guns which held up the advance and occasioned the chief part of the British losses. Left of that, again the British got through, and it is thence that the bombers groped and crawled and dared their way up to Grandcourt.

Upon the right a portion of the attackers carried their objective thrust on as far as Grandcourt trench, the great main line of the German position, in front of the village. Those who went forward to this point are men and officers of a famous formation who have never been lacking when hand-to-hand work was forward, and there was some savage bayonet fighting in the portion of the trench which they attacked. They found themselves, however, out in advance of their own line, holding an end of the trench with the Germans for neighbours.

NEW STYLE OF TRENCHES.

As at other points upon the Somme front, the Germans have developed here their system of sowing the earth with little trenches with both ends in the air, the sum of which builds up a vague but very formidable system of defense.

I talked to wounded Saxons of the 126th and 127th Regiments. The latter included men who had been occupants of such an island trench and had found themselves surrounded. Upon that their officer, an ober-Lieutenant had surrendered them and himself. Those Saxons, save for one of them, were the poorest human specimens I had yet seen, flimsy and undersized. The exception was a big good-looking lad of 21 who had been in service since March. They had no losses from the barrage, they said They had all been sheltered underground while it passed.

As to food, they always did very well, while they were up in the line. There was plenty to eat and in good variety. But back of the line it was "ein Biachen knapp." (a little short.)

Those who surrendered in time had no grenade wounds, but seven of them had been hit about the head or faces by the shrapnel. Each testified enthusiastically, and, it seemed to me, with relief and surprise, to the good and humane treatment he had received.

North of the Ancre the British patrols, who went beyond Bois d'Hallande, reported the Puisieux ridge positions strongly held. None the less the thrust here resulted in the British entering the main trench upon the ridge after some brisk fighting.

The prisoners taken two days ago included some intelligent men with reasonable theories upon the situation and its possibilities. All of these expressed their opinion, speaking of it as one commonly held in their army, that Germans might conceivably be obliged to yield ground here and there before being actually driven out of it. In such cases, they said, they would fall back upon the line of Puisieux ridge. Therefore, more than casual significance is to be attached to the fact that the British have the south end of the ridge, which has an important bearing upon the fate of Grandcourt.

When asked about the tanks, the Saxon lad of 21 whom I mentioned, had actually seen one rolling hot across the craters. He was boastful of it

"I saw it with my own eyes," he persisted.

"And what did you think of the little thing?"

He shook his head seriously. "Wunderbar! Unglaublich!" ("Marvelous! Incredible!")

The Roumanian Situation Is Still In Doubt

The Question is Where Are the Russian Reinforcements and What Are They Doing?—British Aviators Arrive on the Scene

NEARING BUCHAREST

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 27. — News from German sources caused a renewal of hope here to-day that Rumania may, after all, extricate herself from the precarious position in which her Wallachan forces have been placed by Von Falkenhayen's concededly brilliant strategic campaign.

One prime basis for this hope was the utter lack, in all the German official reports, of any claims of large captures of prisoners or war munitions. Furthermore, it is known here that the Rumanians succeeded in removing all of their artillery from Craiova before that city fell into the hands of the enemy.

There was no disposition, however, to disguise the fact that Rumania is still perilously placed. If it were summer weather and if the terrain were not rainsoaked or muddy from half-frozen slush, the crossing of the Danube by the Teutonic forces in an effort to turn the flank of the Rumanians might prove immediately successful.

The question is, where are the Russian reinforcements, and what are they doing.

AVIATORS ARRIVE.

Bucharest, Nov. 27.—A large number of British aeroplanes have arrived here, with British aviators to assist the Rumanians in scouting. The Roumanian forces have continued to hold the Teutons in new positions, and large Russian armies are said to be on the way.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—The War Office says that Von Falkenhayen's troops have effected a junction with Von Mackensen's, in Roumania, and are now forty-seven miles from Bucharest.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"Your hand was right slim then, an' now it's hard from work. To me, there ain't no other hand as beautiful, mother, but there's no use denying that we can't hold out much longer unless the children stand by an' help us."

"They will, Tom. They will. Ham may talk, but he won't desert."

"I know that, but the question is, have we got the right to hold them here? Is Ham raving, or is he right? That's the question you an' me have got to decide, mother."

"Do you think, Tom," she demanded, rising and anxiously looking at him, "do you think that even if we had all the things that money could give us—we'd be any happier in the long run? Life's been hard with us, but it's always been wholesome."

"I'm contented mother, but what does well enough for old blood may not satisfy the young. It ain't the first time that I've thought about this thing. They're quittin' all round us, an' they're quittin' because they are beat. I've always thought this country could be redeemed. If boys like Ham thought so, too, it might be done, but it takes young blood, an' if a feller's heart ain't in it, he can't do it."

Her answer was only a sigh, and he continued: "We have still enough laid by in the bank to live somewhere for a few years an' give the children decent educations. If we stay here too long maybe we can't even do that. What shall we do?"

For a while they sat without talk, and then the mother brokenly suggested: "Let's hear what Ham says, and let's make up our minds slow."

Together they rose, and blowing out the lamp, went up the stairs. As they passed Ham's door they paused, and the father whispered, "I don't want the boy to think I'm hard on him."

Inside there was no light, but they could hear the eldest son thrashing restlessly about on his bed, and they knew that he was not sleeping.

Outside the snow was still falling, with quiet relentlessness. It was wrapping deeper and deeper the white slopes of the mountains and piling feathery drifts against the windward sides of the sighing pines. Here and there a burdened branch creaked under its travail. Now and then the wind that drove the snow rose to a gusty whisper and a stark limb scraped the eaves of the house with grating, lifeless fingers. But between the occasional stress-cries of the storm there came the low, dirge-like monotony of the sifting snowfall. And always in old houses there were the little voices and the minute nameless stirrings of the night. The ghost-moan of drafty chimneys and the creak of warped timbers became audible accentuators of the silence.

Ham heard them all and to him they were like the wretched echoes of a gaol where the small clicking night-sounds creep into dreams and poison them with reminders of confinement. His brain was hot with a fever of restiveness and beyond his cell like room he saw the world from which he was barred, the world which the tongueless voice in his heart kept heralding to him as his own world to conquer.

In another bed across the carpetless floor rose and fell the even breath of Edwardes, who was sleeping as a man sleeps after fighting a blizzard. Under the boy's hot cheek was the rough ness of a slipless pillow and his limbs thrashed between coarse sheets that covered a lumpy mattress.

Out beyond the barriers of the snow-stifled mountains stretched endless continents and seas inviting his soul. Men of alien races and alien thought trod lands where palm trees nodded along white beaches and where the sea was blue as sapphire. Thousands of miles away were deserts aglean with gold and caravans swinging between the burning arch of the sky and the scorching sands. Great cities rose before his eyes, beckoning him, calling to him; brooding cities of gray turrets and foggy streets, strange cities lit with sunset fires on domes and minarets; laughing cities gay with festivals. All these things he was hungry to see; to see as a master of the world walking its varied ways, achieving its affairs. Through his waking dreams marched a parade of great figures, Hannibal, Cæsar the Corsican, Talleyrand, Disraeli, Montagu Pitt, the men with whom this tongueless voice proclaimed his brotherhood; the men who had found life granite as hard as that which lay heaped about him, who had conquered it and chiseled it into monuments of history. His hand slipped under his pillow and closed on the dollars he had made. His troubled face smoothed into a smile.

"Slivers Martin paid me ten dollars," he murmured to himself, "an' I bought the lot of 'em for seven."

CHAPTER IV.

When young Jefferson Edwardes set out the next morning for his winter's imprisonment in the shack where he must fight the white spectre of slow death, amid the white isolation of the snow, he left behind him a household to all outward seeming as quiet as it had ever been. But all that morning and afternoon while Ham was away at school, Tom Burton sat deeply engrossed in calculations involving scraps of paper upon which he was laboriously figuring and frequent consultation of a slender bank-book. And Ham, as he trudged back across the snow, came with a face set for combat. Hitherto he had obeyed and now the time had come when his inherent power of leadership must assert itself. If the world could not conquer him—and he was utterly certain it could not—he must not flinch from the task of riding down the first opposition he met—even though it be the opposition of his own blood. Afterward his family should know only tenderness and ease and luxury, but now they must acknowledge his mastery.

Of the possibility of failure he never dreamed. His star was in the heavens and Destiny had spoken. Just as the cork plunged to the bottom of the pail must inevitably rise to the top, so he must rise. He was of the oligarchy of the great, of the chosen of the gods, and now the voices of Destiny were calling him to the undertaking of his mission. To-night the question must be thrashed out, yet when he arrived at the house he went quietly about the round of monotonous chores and after that sat through the evening meal with no mention of the things in his heart. It was his father who first broached the subject and he broached it bluntly, while his family sat about him, in the spirit of the primitive family council.

"Ham," he said slowly, "I've been sittin' here all day turnin' your notions over in my mind. You want to go away from here and to abandon this place where you was born; where your mother and me started housekeepin'; where we've lived for twenty years. If we decided to do that—an' it wouldn't be no easy thing for either your mother or me—what plans would you aim to carry out?"

The boy shook his head. He did not shake it in the abashed fashion of one confronted with a question for which he has no answer, but with the frank manner of one brushing aside a trivial and irrelevant question.

"I don't know yet. First I've got to have an education, then I'll decide what I'm going to do, and when I decide I'll succeed."

The father's brows knitted themselves gravely and with displeasure. "Then, after all your talk and bragging, you have not got no definite plan. All you argue for is cutting loose from the roof over us an' livin' up our little savin's."

"I know that I can give you big things in the place of little things." The lad's voice again mounted and into his face came the flush of assured inspiration. "The thing that tells me is something you wouldn't understand. I can't any more put it into words for you than I can tell you why the moon swings the tides, but it's just as dead sure as that an' I can feel it here." He clapped his hands over his heart and went on with quiet certainty: "I don't know no name to call it by, except 'a feelin' of power.' There's only one thing in God's whole world that can stop me, an' that's ignorance and lonesomeness. You call it all dreamin'—well, give me a chance and I'll make it all so real that you can't have any more doubts."

"I thought," said Tom Burton a bit wearily, "that maybe you might have some sensible argument, but all you have got is moonshine. I've been sittin' here figurin' all day so that if you could convince me, I'd know where I stood with the bank, but it don't hardly seem worth talkin' about."

"I can't make you understand," declared the boy unwaveringly, "because you are thinkin' in hundreds, where I'm thinkin' in millions. You ask me about details. All I know is that I've got a destiny to be as great as any man can be an' that success is goin' to be my slave. I don't know what I'm goin' to do because I haven't seen yet what battlefield is best worth winnin'. When I see what's the biggest—I'll win it."

"So you want us to take what we have saved and gamble it all on your good opinion of yourself. Do you realise, my son, that we ain't got very much and that we're saved what we have got by goin' without all our lives? When that's gone we won't have nothin' left to gamble with a second time. Ain't it a good deal to pay for learnin' the folly of self-conceit?"

The boy's answer was direct, and swift and confident. "One chance is all I need. It's only a coward that wants a guarantee of more chances, if he fails once. What sort of a farmer do you think Paul will ever make? He couldn't heft a second growth log of timber. But out there in the world where a man's rated higher than a mule maybe Paul's got it in him to be great. Some day Mary's goin' to be a woman and a beautiful woman. She has got a right to life. Don't you ever see the difference between life and just livin'? It's the difference between havin' a soul and havin' nothin' but a belly."

"Do you suppose," the father spoke petulantly despite his resolution to hear his son to the end—"do you suppose we've always been poor because we liked it?"

"If you stay poor," came the very prompt retort, "it's because you will not let me change it. We're stayin' here an' slowly starvin' our hearts an' brains an' souls because Money's got us bluffed. I'm goin' to make money my slave an' not my master—an' if you'll trust me you can have it to play with."

"You tell me that you are one of the almightiest great men that was ever born, an' that somethin' keeps on tellin' you so. You tell me that I can't understand the voice you hear," said Tom Burton slowly. "Don't you know that all the lunatic asylums are full of Emperors of Germany and Kings of England—an' they all hear them same kind of voices? That's why they're there."

"But there's one Emperor of Germany and one King of England outside them places—an' they're on thrones. All the masters of the world have felt their power an' folks have laughed at 'em—at first." Ham spoke with desperate seriousness that made his eyes glow steadily and forcefully. "And yet the big things have been done by those men, and from the first they knew that they were different. You say I've been braggin'. Did you ever hear me say one word before yesterday about bein' different from any other boy? I'm sayin' it now because there is not any use in lyin'. I know just as well as if I'd already done it that I can look down on other successmen as far as a mountain top looks down on a little hill. I have done my work here on this farm, and I haven't ever shirked. Now I want my chance—an' I don't want my family to go to seed. I want the blood of the Standishes and Hamiltons to climb up and not to run down hill and die out in a rotting puddle at the bottom. I want these things and I'm going to have 'em—. This farm an' you have fought for a lifetime an' the farm's whipped you. I tell you there just one thing in God Almighty's world that can whip me—just one thing that I'm afraid of—an' it's this farm. If you stay here I reckon I can hardly desert you, but I'd rather you'd kill me outright. That's all I have got to say."

Tom Burton rose from his chair and took two or three turns across the frayed strips of carpet. His eyes were no longer the eyes of a father irritated by the insubordinate fret of a fledgling son begging permission to test his wings. His bearded face bore the seamed uncertainty of his deeply vexed spirit. Perhaps in that moment there came to him some sense of conversion to the prophet-like assurance of his son. Perhaps he felt the dread of transplanting and a vague wonder whether the gifts of wealth, if they came, might not bring disaster in their wake. At last he turned, cramming his hands into his trousers' pockets, and swept the little family circle with eyes in which flashed something of patriarchal fire.

"Mother," he demanded, "you have heard what the boy says. Does it sound like reason to you or is it just a stripling's restlessness?"

Elizabeth Burton looked from her husband's face to that of the eldest child. It seemed to her that the father's eyes were wistful and sorely distressed, and that the son's face was tightly drawn with a feverish burning of the eyes. Suddenly she felt like an arbiter called to judge between them. Her boy with his Cæsar ambition was breaking his heart to go. Her husband, with much of life behind, could only yield with something like a break in his own. Her eyes moistened.

Two Men Held on Murder Charge Following Tests.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Largely on evidence gathered through the microscope and test tube, indictments for murder in the first degree were returned against Guiseppe Matteleone and Cincenzo De Stefano, fruit vendors, charged with strangling eleven-year-old Tillie Brocker in the cellar of a tenement on Oct. 10 last.

It is said to be the first time in the history of the New York police that the testimony of scientists has played such an important part.

The two men had a stand in front of the house where the girl was found dead. When they denied guilt the police, instead of using third degree methods, sent for experts of the Standard Testing Laboratory. When their examination had been finished the experts said:

"You have got the right men."

Descending on the Son.—A benevolent looking old gentleman was walking along the street when he came upon an irate parent lecturing his offspring. "Now, you young rascal," said the angry father, "out off home, and before you go to bed to-night I'll give you a good whipping." The old gentleman mildly remonstrated. "My dear sir, perhaps I have no right to interfere but remember the wise old saying—'Let not the sun go down upon your wrath.'" "Don't you trouble yourself about that," was the reply. "I won't do anything of the sort. Oh, no. What I'm going to do is to let the wrath descend upon the son."

All the chickens that will bring in fairreturns should be hatched by the end of May.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S.

"I was a great sufferer on account and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Nase, Lunenburg, N. S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is as soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

SWEET ST. HELENA.

One day I thought I'd take a trip to Berlin by the way
And have a talk with Kaiser Bill
about the coming day,
When Tommy with his allies having won the final fight,
Are marching into Berlin shouting with all their might.

Chorus

St. Helena, sweet St. Helena,
Surrounded by the sea,
Sweet St. Helena, with your Katrina,
How quiet you will be in St. Helena.

We found old Turpitz sitting there
moaning to himself,
They've captured all my submarines
and now I'm on the shelf,
Hindenburg says we're beat my lads,
we're whipped without a doubt,
The Tommies are in Berlin and the Kaiser is en route.

Chorus

We're going to make the terms of peace in Berlin don't you see,
And Bill won't have a word to say bout what the terms will be,
They won't be scraps of paper that he'll tear up with a sneer,
He'll be down in St. Helena, Hell—we wouldn't have him here.

Chorus, ek.

SUFFERED WITH BACK FOR TEN YEARS

Women are the greatest sufferers from weak, lame and aching backs, owing to the continual stooping, bending and lifting so necessary to perform their household duties.

The cause of the backache comes from some derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back would be strong and well, and without a pain or an ache.

Doan's Kidney Pills will take out all the stitches, twitches and twinges, limber up the stiff back, and give perfect relief and comfort to all poor, weak backed, suffering women.

Mrs. Chas. Thibeau, Church Point, N.S., writes: "For ten years I suffered with my back, and was so weak I could not do my washing or any hard work, just a little around the house. One day a friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and they helped me so much that after I had taken two boxes I could do my washing and since then I have been in perfect health.

Doan's Pills are the original kidney pills. Do not accept any substitutes put up under similar names. See that you get the oblong grey box, the trade mark a "Maple Leaf."

Price 50c. or Three boxed for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Specify "Doan's" if ordering direct.

WAR-TIME WARDROBES

How One Mother Makes Children's Clothes Last

An Englishwoman writes of war-time economy in children's clothes as follows: One hears a lot just now about the sin of buying new and unnecessary clothes in war time, and though this wise counsel may be necessary for some of the lucky ones, the possibility of buying new clothes, either for myself or the kiddies, hasn't arisen for a very long time—so I just manage with what there is.

I have two boys, one eight and one five, and I pass all the older one's clothes to the little one as soon as he grows out of them or makes them very shabby. Boys are so terribly hard on their knickerbockers, especially at the knees; so when Bob has made a pair quite unwearable I cut them down for Dickie. I measure the length at the outside of the leg from the waist to the knee on one of Dickie's knickers, then I cut off the extra length from Bob's which always removes all the worn shiny part. Then I rip up the seams, lay the pieces on the table, and cut off as much, taking the same amount from each seam, as is necessary to make them fit Dickie. It is quite an easy plan if you rip up an old pair of the smaller size and put the pieces on the one to be cut down. I do practically the same with the coats. Making the sleeve smaller generally cuts away the shiny elbow part, especially if you take all that is necessary from that side.

My three girls are even easier to deal with when passing on. A shortening of the skirt, which can be done in quite a decorative way by running a tack or two over the hem, and taking the bodice portion in at the under-arm seams generally secures a good fit, while a too short shirt can be lengthened by adding a hem of sateen or any stout cotton cloth, and covering it with braid, velvet, a length of ribbon, or even a strip of contrasting material.

I take a piece of the oilcloth which is sold for covering kitchen tables and shelves, and cut a sole from this to fit each shoe, and then put them in smooth side downwards. This makes the shoes practically waterproof, as it is impossible for any damp to penetrate. This hint is also excellent for business girls, and now with so much damp weather it would be a wise plan for girls who have to go out every day to line their boots and shoes with oilcloth soles.

ENGLISH BATTLE FURY

Enthusiastic Wounded Officer Tells of Cowing of Huns

A wounded English officer, fresh from the front, said: To see those chaps of mine tackling the Boche with their bare hands was worth living for—or dying for. It was meat and drink to me. They just tore their men down; and wrenched their own rifles from them. One big section commander of mine was just like a terrier with rats; except that he didn't wait for killing. He was too busy. He went for his men like a blooming lumberjacker; smashed 'em down; grabbed 'em by the slack of the breeches and the neck, and chucked 'em over the parapet, to roll down into the remains of their own wire. "Fall in there! Fall in!" he kept yelling, and goodness alone knows what he meant by it. But he put them out of business all right, and I sort of rounded 'em up from the little shell-holes where I lay; and in a way they did fall in, in a cluster, lying on the ground. They were docile enough; mostly stunned; and I'd my revolver in my left hand. And then my lads cleaned out the dug-outs, mostly using German bombs. We left nothing alive in that trench; and I don't believe the Kaiser's got a platoon in all his Prussian Guard who could have lived in the face of those chaps of mine, with their bare hands, on Friday. It was a great do."

STRANGE FRENCH FIGURE

Polka In Red And Blue On Canadian Streets

"Oh, ma, look at the circus man!" exclaimed one little girl as she caught sight of a small man in uniform in front of the C.M.R. recruiting office at Hamilton. The man in question, however, was not a circus man, but A. P. Duries, a private in the 163rd regiment of the French army, who obtained a discharge and came to Canada to seek employment. He was dressed in the uniform of the French army, with red breeches, blue tunic and puttees of the color, and the peculiar shaped hat of the French with its bright coloring of red and blue. He explained that his dress was not the service uniform, which is grey in color. For sixteen months he was in the trenches in the Argonne and Champagne districts.

GERMAN "VERACITY"

From a London correspondent: "The German Newsagency for Foreign Policy" publishes the most colossal lie about Zeppelin attacks on London yet achieved by the German Press. Its Christiania correspondent interviewed a Norwegian merchant, "who says that he spent the night shivering in the cellar of his business offices near St. Pancras in the company of the King, the Queen, and the Duke of Connaught, who could not get to Buckingham Palace because the streets were torn up by Zeppelin bombs. The merchant adds that the King remained for an hour and a half in the cellar, only speaking three words. The same liar says that London is a maze of underground bars, business offices, shops, and theatres, all advertising themselves safe from Zeppelins. He also says that practically every house in London is an ammunition factory.

"NO MAN'S LAND"

What it Means to Get Lost in Between the Lines

A London paper says: Seven men, including a N.C.O., went out to explore an enemy sap. The Boche awaited them. The Boche threw bombs. Five of the party got back. It was assumed that the other two had been killed or wounded. Two days later a lone figure was seen walking about between our own and the enemy lines. Both sides fired at him. The man rushed like a scared rabbit into a big shell hole. Five days later a worn, dishevelled, khaki-clad, dirty, unshaven man came over the parapet. Rough but kind words of cheer greeted him—as well as a stretcher. The poor fellow was light-headed. For a week, without either food or drink, he had been in "No Man's Land." The only food he had had was grass and daisies. Think of it. A week in "No Man's Land" without either food or drink, with a big bombardment going on intermittently from both sides and both friend and foe—your identity unknown to either—firing at you!

Odd Boots

The London Daily Mail says: Odd boots for disabled soldiers and sailors are becoming a regular feature in the retail boot trade. For many years the business was practically monopolized by a retailer, who specialised in providing odd boots for one-legged men. In addition to his regular business. He sold rights or lefts at half the price of a pair, and many cripples from all parts of London patronized his shop. Since the war boot firms have begun to announce "Footwear service to disabled soldiers and sailors," and as the customers for rights about equal in number those for lefts the odd boot business presents few difficulties.

The Cause of Appendicitis Now Definitely Known

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. Every doctor says so. When you require physic, don't use a cheap drastic pill—get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made from the private formula of one of the greatest physicians. Dr. Hamilton's Pills strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, lift depression and drive away weariness. No medicine so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Repairing Battleships

So satisfactory is the organization of ship-building and repairing, that after the Battle of Jutland, within ten days, even the most seriously damaged warship was able to return to sea. Before even the ships reach their base, the Admiralty are fully informed of the extent of the damage to each particular ship. By the time that ship reaches her base, plates and new parts of machinery were already in progress of construction. Most of the ships came out of the action without a scratch, though they had inflicted tremendous damage on the enemy. In no case was there disclosed any defect in the machinery.

Nicknames For "Tanks"

Here are a few of the names invented for the "tanks": land dreadnought, old ichthyosaurus, giant toad, water monster, jabberwock, bush-rat (referring to the secrecy preceding its debut), moving fort, traveling turret, whale, slug, boojum.

HOW TRAWLERS FIGHT

In the Trawler Section of the R.N.R. there are three classes: Patrol Boats, Patrol Boats and Drifters, and Minesweepers. It is no exaggeration to state that there are over 2,000 of these boats available for duty, which means that not fewer than 40,000 men are serving in various capacities. The number of boats comprising a Patrol Flotilla varies according to the particular duties. There is more merchant traffic over some sections of the North Sea than others. Some boats must be convoyed, and others need not be.

Each flotilla has a leading boat called number one. All vessels carry guns, but the leader is also fitted with a wireless installation, and is commanded by a man who has been given the rank of lieutenant in the R.N.R., who before the war was either a captain or officer in the Mercantile Marine. Every boat in the flotilla has its number and allotted place. If for any reason the leader is put out of action or withdrawn upon a special mission, number two replaces number one, and the others correspondingly move up. At work, when number one is filling her place the other boats play the schoolboy game "follow my leader." Wherever the leader goes the others follow without question. Each of these other boats is in charge of a skipper who, in pre-war time, was also skipper of a steam trawler.

PEACE AMID WAR

Farms Within Zone of Fire Remained Undamaged

A Canadian soldier writes: There is a big bush all around us, and the country is quite hilly. One or two farms, still under cultivation, are nearby. The country shows no evidence of warfare; there is hardly so much as a shell hole to be seen. The bush is, as bushes go here, a new one. It is very pretty and furnishes a nice quiet place to roam about in, and there are plenty of delicious berries and nuts. It sounds kind of funny, does it not, to get an hour's leave to pick berries and nuts, and have the former served with cream (procured from a farmhouse 100 yards away) for breakfast?

Last night we went to this farmhouse and had eggs and coffee. It seemed a bit queer to be having lunch and watch people milking the cows practically on the firing line. I don't know, but I should judge there are several batteries in position and in action once or twice a day on various parts of that farmstead. Yet the people are happy and feel perfectly safe. Their stock and beildings are undamaged, nothing is stolen by the soldiers, a good trade is going on, and still the section has been in the zone of shell fire for two years. The conditions that exist speak well for the coolness and nerve of the civilian population, and also for the discipline of the British soldier.

Colonel of Kitchener's Own

Colonel Read, who raised the 244th Battalion, which was organized as a tribute from Canada to the Organizer of Armies, Lieut.-Col. Fred M. McRobie of Montreal (took extraordinary steps to recruit a corps that would be representative of the whole Dominion.

Reason For Exemption

"Expansion of the lungs," was the ground on which a man asked for exemption.

"What is that?" asked the doctor.

Applicant: "I can't say. I ain't my doctor."

Captain: "Get into khaki and expand the chest to fit the lungs."

Applicant: "Right O!"

COSSACKS ENTERTAIN WAR CORRESPONDENTS

The "Little Colonel" Could Feat It With His Men—Novel and Jolly Experience With Fine Russians

A special correspondent with the Russian army writes: I little thought, when I heard "Tipperary" sung by the British troops of the "first seven divisions" on the road between Cambrai and Le Cateau, that I should ever join in singing it at a Cossack officers' mess in a Polish village just behind the Russian front. Yet that is what happened.

It was not a long dinner so far as the dishes were concerned. We had caviare and pickled herrings; soup with a huge meat pasty; Caucasian "shashlika," which are small pieces of mutton grilled on a skewer and served on it with small pieces of ham in between; Crimean bottled fruits. We could have got through easily in half an hour. But that is not the hospitable Cossack way. From the very start there were toasts, each one with what old-fashioned writers still call "musical honors," contributed by the officers themselves. To do us honor they had composed a number of little verses, which they sang from scraps of paper, passing these about from one to the other with jolly schoolboy smiles and amused glances at us. This kind of thing:

We are glad to see you;
You represent the Press.
We drink to you and your efforts
To make the world progress.

Clinking and Dancing

Every now and then there was a kind of "General Post." We all rose, walked about the room, and did not sit down again until we had clinked glasses with every other person present. Dinner at last over, we went outside and watched the dancers, and suddenly we saw the little colonel in his full-skirted riding coat reaching almost to the heels (the Cossack uniform) rush into the ring formed by the soldiers, the front row kneeling and clapping hands to beat time, and begin to shake a leg himself. Very neatly and nimbly he footed it, skirts flying, spurs jingling, the expression on his face quite serious, as he pirouetted and spun.

Helps Discipline

I can see the astonishment of British officers, especially colonels, when they read this. I can hear them ask, "How the blazes can discipline be kept up in such a regiment?" Well, strange as it sounds to those who wear King George's uniform, the discipline of a Cossack regiment is kept up by these very practices which so horrify them. The men see nothing undignified in the singing and dancing of their officers. They are not tempted to be unduly familiar. They respect and admire their colonel all the more because he can dance as well as any of them. No one can lead Cossacks save a man who makes them feel "he is one of us."

HUMORS OF THE "TANKS"

Iron Caterpillars Can do Everything But Fly

In the Daily Chronicle Mr. Gibbs said: A tank is walking up the high street of Ytres with the British army cheering behind. Some other achievements of "the tank" mentioned by Mr. Gibbs are as follows:

It "leaned" against a broken wall until it fell, and then crawled over the debris. It went irresistibly through High Wood, the trees crackling like match sticks before it. It went up to machine gun emplacements, "crushed the gun under its ribs," and passed on, spitting death at the demoralized Germans. It "stamped" down a dug-out as though it were a wasps' nest. It "sat on" heaps of ruins and fired down a village street. It went right through the old German trenches. It smashed through broken barns and houses, "straddled" a dug-out and fired enfilading shots down German trenches.

They can do nearly everything that you expect them not to do. The Germans know that they can cross trenches and navigate a crater-pitted field as successfully as they roll along the Albert road, and as for rifle and machine gun fire—they like it!

If you lashed one of them to the muzzle of a giant howitzer, it would be more than dented, but the direct application of big howitzer shells is a contingency that is extremely remote.

Trees do not bother it—they are mowed down, like corn. The worse the obstacle, the more persevering the "tank." If you saw one at a distance you would think of the pictures of prehistoric monsters; at close range you would marvel at the ingenuity and security of its shell. But it has its limitations. It cannot fly.

ECZEMA ON FACE
WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

TOMMY COMPARED WITH JACQUES AND BEPPO

Neatness and Gaiety of New Armies Strike Lord Northcliffe—What He Found in Italy

Lord Northcliffe, from somewhere in Italy, writes: To speak of our British Tommy—with whom, of course, I include his Australasian and Canadian cousins—the French Jacques, and the Italian Beppo as the three chief Allied fighters on the western front is not to overlook that other heroic figure, the Belgian Jean. Tommy has proved an altogether unexpected character, even to those who thought they knew him. He is not in the least like Kipling's soldiers, who represented a past generation. One essential in which he differs from all the soldiers of the world is his neatness and smartness. Neatness and smartness are akin to physical well-being, that is to say, to health, and with armies as with cities health comes first.

For sheer coolness and bulldog tenacity there is no one to approach him. In the horrible days of the early part of the war, when we were practically unprovided with shells or guns, he stood the appalling German artillery bombardment in the trenches round Ypres for days in a manner that made the Huns think him almost superhuman. Now that he is provided with guns of all kinds and especially with bombs, in throwing which he is a master, he has come into his own.

Gaiety of Poilus

Jacques' habits are altogether different from those of our men, and in many ways his character does not resemble ours. In such homely, simple matters as a chanson or a fragment of harmonized verse the differences in national characteristics may often be revealed. The songs of the French soldier are quite different from ours. The French march with a quicker step, and very good marchers they are, and throw out their jokes right and left to every passer-by, and especially when a pretty girl is in sight. I once drove behind a very fat chauffeur through the French lines, and the poor man was almost chaffed off his seat by the poilus. All the strength, energy and jocularity is largely produced by soup and bread, with a comparatively small modicum of wine.

Beppo a Worker

Beppo, the typical Italian soldier, wears a steel helmet similar to that of the French, very smart grey clothes, and is immensely strong. He has done most of the heavy work in the Western hemisphere for the last quarter of a century. Come of a nation that has given the world some of its best masons and quarrymen, we are not surprised to find him a wonderful trench builder and road maker. He is able to withstand heat that neither the Englishman nor Frenchman could endure for long. And he can, and does, endure for seven months in the year a degree of cold rarely felt in any part of the United Kingdom. He has been patient for years. He comes of patient stock, and he is fortunate in the possession of one of the greatest generals of the war. His means to get rid of the Austrian menace once and for all.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre With Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HOW SAILORS SALUTE

One of the first things taught to the Naval recruit before he goes on board his ship is that he must "salute the quarterdeck" when passing onto it when on board his ship at any time whether from a boat or direct from the shore. This is an ancient custom and is carried out by every officer and man whether he be the commander-in-chief in his own flagship or the ship's cook's youngest boy assistant.

The Naval salute is different to that used in the army, the upper arm is not raised at right angles to the body, but to an angle of about 45 degrees from the perpendicular, while the palm of the hand instead of being turned to the front is kept turned towards the face, the forefinger nearly touching the peak of the cap in line with the eyebrow. As in the army the "off hand" is used for saluting. The "able bodied seaman" is equivalent in rank to the private in the army, and is expected to salute all officers, naval and military, in uniform, the same remarks apply to the sister service and all soldiers should salute naval officers when in uniform.

SCOTT'S EMULSION
RELIEVES SORE, TIGHT CHESTS

Weakened By Anaemia
Doctors Gave No Hope

Said She Was Threatened With Consumption, and Gave Her Three Weeks to Live

Anaemia is indicated by thin, watery blood. The gums and eyelids grow pale, there is great weakness and fatigue and digestion fails.

Since Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood, it is naturally most suitable as a treatment for anaemia. This latter proves its efficiency in the most severe cases.

Mrs. J. Adams, Port Hope, Ont., writes: "About six years ago I was taken with very weak spells and though I doctored with the family physician and used other medicines for two years, I got very little relief and, in fact, continued to grow weaker. I was so weak I could not wait on myself or raise my hand to my head and decided to go to my daughter in Toronto. When examined by Toronto doctors they pronounced me to be in a dangerous condition, threatened with consumption and other ailments and said I would not live for three weeks. One day I was looking through Dr. Chase's Almanac and read about the cure of anaemia by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I began the use of this treatment at once and am now well on the way back to health, after having used the Nerve Food for six months. I want my friends to know that my cure was effected by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food alone and after my discouragement from the use of other treatments, I feel it my duty to let everybody know about this remarkable cure."

As a restorative for persons who are pale, weak and run down there is no treatment to be compared to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Gradually and naturally the red corpuscles are increased in the blood, the color is restored to the cheeks, and the strength comes back to wasted nerves and muscles. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

HEALTH OFFICERS' CONFERENCE.

THE annual conference of Ontario Health Officers for 1916 was held on the last two days in May. It was, in point of numbers, importance of papers presented, and general interest, perhaps, the most interesting meeting of medical officers of health we have ever had.

One of the most instructive papers was read by Dr. W. H. Park, who for many years has been Director of the Laboratories of the Health Department of New York City. Dr. Park is an expert upon Diphtheria, and in his address he outlined the methods of his Department in the diagnosis, prevention, and treatment of that disease in which he and his associates have been specializing. The City of New York is divided into sections, and the children grouped in order that tests may be carried out to discover those who are carriers of the disease, and to obtain more thorough information as to the causes for the spreading of the disease. Dr. Park said that the scheme has been productive of wonderful results. Regarding the use of antitoxin he said that from practical experience he was of the opinion that the full amount of antitoxin required should be given in the first injection; another way to obtain prompt results was by injection of the remedy directly into a vein so as to reach the blood stream at once. He advocates single large doses.

Dr. Cruickshank, M. O. H. of Windsor, gave a most instructive paper upon tonsils and adenoids in children. The doctor is one of the best of our Health Officers. He has been engaged in making tests in this subject among children in the Windsor schools, and has come to the conclusion that tonsils and adenoids are responsible for a good deal of disease among children. He advocates their removal, and in addition suggests that the abolition of baby comforts, the provision of proper ventilation in school and sleeping rooms and the proper care of children's health would prevent a lot of disease. There is sound wisdom in his remarks.

A timely discussion, in view of the great prevalence of the disease during the past season, was carried on in reference to Measles. It was pointed out by various speakers that Measles is most difficult to control from the fact that it comes on like any ordinary coryza or cold, and that the most contagious period of the disease is probably before the rash appears. The present quarantine period (three weeks) was regarded by the officers present as being too long and failed to do the good expected of it. The consensus of opinion seemed to be that two weeks, which would cover the period of incubation and contagion, is long enough. It is probable that this discussion will be given due weight by the Board, and lead to a shortening of the quarantine period.

There was considerable discussion regarding the question of allowing the breadwinner of the family to go to work while his child is ill of Measles, or other communicable disease. This is at present a matter of discretion with the M. O. H. and is usually allowed except, of course, in cases where the man of the house is a teacher of pupils at some school, or is engaged in the manufacture of food or clothing. It is very unlikely that these diseases are carried by a third person unless he or she is a "carrier."

These annual conferences have had a very marked effect upon the efficiency of the various medical officers who are regular attendants. In almost all cases our medical officers of health are seen at every meeting, where there is ample opportunity for the discussion of the problems which are met by them in their various municipalities.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

J. C. B., Welland. Sanitoria expenses of indigent.

Q.—What provision is made for the care of a poor patient with consumption?

A.—The local Board of Health and the Medical Officer of Health may, under the regulations for the control of Tuberculosis, send to a hospital or sanitorium, an indigent who, in their opinion, endangers the health of others in the same house or in personal contact with him. The expense of this patient's care must be borne by the municipality where he has had his usual place of abode. The Ontario Government pays $3.00 per week toward the maintenance of such patient.

keep silent. The Pope has protested. Holland, Spain and the United States have protested. If the International does not protest in its turn, our enemies will have reason to believe it is dead."

Mr. Vandervelde goes on to say that only part of those deported are without work.

"On the other hand, 600,000 persons in Belgium are now without work," the letter concludes. "If half the population must resort to the assistance of the others, it is because the Germans, after having invaded our country, have ravaged, devastated, oppressed and heaped up requisitions, confiscations and fines; because they have taken and are taking into Germany machinery and materials and because they forbid municipalities to employ their inhabitants in public works. It is because an immense majority of the workers, to their eternal honour, prefer to endure all—death, privation, prison—rather than to leave the soil of their country."

Business Dignity Against Background Of Court Procedure

Dignity is characteristic of court procedure. It is a tradition, and was probably an early expression of the people's awe and respect of the authority represented by the bench. Moreover court machinery moves with measured tread, smoothly and with a stately poise that usually accompanies the unhurried. In that respect it may be considered as a diametric opposite to business that whirls and eddies, noisily and with the apparent confusion of the mob each grasping for himself with no thought of method, but with the idea of acquisition uppermost.

But a feature of a recent case before Mr. Justice Kelly presented business on a higher plane losing nothing in comparison with the procedure that investigated it. The letters between Mr. E. B. Fowler of the Canadian Hood Haggie Co., and Mr. Samwell of the Dominion Supply Company, were notable for their dignified tone, especially those of Mr. Fowler's. Pressed by his customers, even threatened with court proceedings, his letters to Mr. Samwell, who had failed him, never departed from the concise and considerate language of previous letters when the market contributed no perturbing alarms and difficulties. The expressions of those letters even to the last when Mr. Samwell was notified that court proceedings would be undertaken were on a loftier plane than that in which business usually moves with staccato spatterings. Had not Mr. Fowler's letters been so exceptional in that regard there would have been nothing to merit this passing reference.

GROCERS CUT OUT BREAD

Will Not Handle It in Hamilton, They Decide.

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 26.—When the Hamilton bakers recently jumped the price of bread from eight to nine cents a loaf they made no provision for dividing the profit with the grocers. The result was that the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association Thursday night unanimously decided that hereafter bread would not be handled in grocery stores.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST

By Anabel Worthington.

A new waist that leaves nothing to be desired in the way of smartness ... short ... chosen to ... this ... which ...

blouse, in this design is truly a vanity collar, cut square and reaching almost to the waist line at back.

The vest front is an attractive feature and trimming bands of self material in novel outline give added interest to the model. Buttons, now in high favor for embellishing waists and dresses, are used freely and in an artistic manner in this instance.

The fringe following the edge of the collar and the flare cuff may be employed if satin, silk or like material be selected. For a morning tailored waist there is a wide range of materials from which to choose. The design is especially interesting because it may be reproduced in fabric that will stamp it for either practical or dressy wear. If you decide to reproduce it you will be tempted to make more garments at home.

The waist pattern No. 7,975 is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inch bust. To make in size 36 will require 1¾ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of contrasting goods. Or in all one material 2¾ yards.

To obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the ... size of pattern required, and age of a child.

KITCHENER'S CANADIANS

Battalion as Nation-wide Tribute to Late War Minister

A tribute to Kitchener in the form of a crack battalion for overseas, was the idea upon which a group of energetic Montreal officers worked in the organization of the 244th (Kitchener's Own) Overseas Battalion. The "K. O." went into barracks in the autumn of 1916, although only half up to strength, but determined to set a high standard of efficiency. In making the regiment and its tribute to the Organizer of Armies a national one the officer commanding, Lieut.-Col. Fred M. McRobie, of the Victoria Rifles of Montreal, had the support of Sir Sam Hughes. Assurance was secured from the Militia Department that the battalion would not be broken up overseas but would go into the trenches as a unit and not as reinforcements for any other unit. It was felt that it would be derogatory to the name of the late Earl Kitchener and a blot upon the name of Canada if Canada's specific offering of soldiers to the memory of the great soldier did not become a permanent body.

Kitchener's Own shared the privilege possessed by few infantry organizations of recruiting from anywhere in Canada. The wealthy supporters of the Victoria Rifles and the 244th were able to guarantee from the very first free transportation to Montreal from any part of Canada to prospective K. O. men who had been attested by a doctor for overseas service. This offer was taken advantage of by many who wished to join a distinctive unit and recruits came in by ones and twos from the Pacific coast, the Peace River country and the Maritime Provinces as well as from the Montreal district. These men had never heard a recruiting speech on behalf of the 244th but had long wished to join an all-Canadian unit and were specially drawn by the idea of at once paying a tribute of respect to Kitchener and preparing for overseas service in a unit that would be likely to be more than temporary in character.

HOW SOUTHAM DIED

Revenge For Major of 40th "Sportsmens" Battery

A letter was received in Hamilton by A. Kirkpatrick from his son, Driver P. G. Kirkpatrick, of the 40th battery, from "Somewhere in France," giving particulars of the death of Major Gordon Southam, the former Toronto 'Varsity rugby star and sergeant-major Harvey, the Orillia hockey star. Driver Kirkpatrick said: "You have heard of the two casualties we had. Our battery, along with the rest of the brigade, was doing special work, therefore our guns moved forward slightly, and while we were getting prepared Fritz put over a few coal boxes, as we call them, and it was one of these that struck our major and sergeant-major.

"Major Southam had just given orders to vacate, and it was while he was seeing that everything was O.K., before leaving himself, that it happened. It certainly threw somewhat of a gloom among the boys, as the two best men were taken, but then I think there is a slight bit of Indian nature lurking around, and the voice of the crowd was 'revenge.' While this was going on I was up to our forward observing station with Mr. Scott, so I am thankful to say did not see it.

"Major Southam was a boy amongst the boys, and when we were in tight corners (and we have been in a few of them) he was the head always, and would ask no person to do anything or go any place he would not do or go himself. As much can be said for Sergt.-Major Harvey, as he certainly was a prince with the boys, and a man when on business. Their deaths were caused purely by self-sacrifice, on the part of both. Two other men were slightly wounded, one being a headquarters' man."

THE "UNCANNY" NAVY

Whiteway of Fleet Opened Eyes of a Canadian

A writer in the Westminster Gazette says: The keeping of the seas by our navy appeals to each of us in a different manner. Our food table is a marvel; our foreign correspondence is likewise wonderful. We cannot help appreciating the power of our fleet. A Canadian subaltern told me the other evening that until he came across with his contingent he had not thought much about the navy. His fleet of transports was convoyed by a cruiser from the Canadian shore, and the word was passed around that she would be relieved at noon on a certain day. Eleven o'clock came, but there was no sign of the new boat. Half an hour later smoke was visible on the horizon, and as 12 prompt No. 2 cruiser had swung round and taken her place at the head of the line, whilst No. 1 turned about. "Uncanny," was his word.

MOURN LOST GERMANS

Emigrants Actually Change Old Names, Lament German Society

A German society which has for its main object the purification of the German language from foreign elements appeals to all Germans living in foreign countries not to give their children any but German names and not to change their own names under any circumstances. The society says:

"Bismarck once remarked that the German generally is not satisfied to jump out of his own skin, but has to crawl into a strange one. This is an unfortunate truth. The German immigrant in the United States, in France, in Canada or in South America at once translates his first name into English, French or Spanish and in many cases also changes his family name. To their children these immigrants mostly give entirely foreign names.

"This may seem trivial, but is really a serious matter, because with the German name the German character disappears invariably. The immigrants who try to fit themselves into their new surroundings not only lose their individuality, but become ridiculous in the eyes of the people whom they try to flatter by aping. This does not prevent him from becoming a loyal citizen of the country in which he makes his home."

BEAUTIFUL SPIES

Russia's Successful Use of Fascinating Women Spies

In the secret service of every country, beautiful, fascinating women are largely employed; but no Government makes such successful use of them as that of Russia. Our ally, says Tit-Bits, chooses her spies from the fairest of Russia's daughters, and, without exaggeration, it may be said that the charm and beauty of these accomplished Russian women is almost hypnotic, even more so, perhaps, than that of the fair ladies of France. One of the most successful of Russian women spies is the beautiful widow of an army officer. She has travelled all over the world for the Russian Government, and once, when in Japan, nearly lost her life by being given poisoned sweets.

Another beautiful Russian spy has masqueraded for years as a dancing girl on the Russian border, although in reality she is of noble birth. Her beauty and seeming simplicity have won the heart of many officers in the Greek, Turkish and Bulgarian armies, and many of these affairs have resulted in valuable information for the Russian Government. But the dainty, careless dancing girl is never suspected.

A Russian countess who is in Russia's secret service has in the course of her career successfully masqueraded as an American, learning the tricks of language and mannerisms perfectly. When in Japan, too, she adopted that country's costumes and language without arousing suspicion. She mingled with Japanese officials and was received in the best society. A Japanese statesman, from whom she got much information, implored her to marry him, but as soon as the Russo-Japanese War was over she took herself to another land.

RATS IN THE TRENCHES

Twelve Hundred Dogs Trained to Destroy These Vermin

Trench rats seem to go for everything. They have rendered captive balloons useless and even attacked sleeping soldiers. The evil is all the more serious because the rats are active propagators of diseases. The military authorities have made several attempts to get rid of the plague. There was a talk of utilising the virus which the Pasteur Institute produced thirty years ago, and which gave excellent results everywhere. The virus which inoculates the rats with a fatal malady has only been employed in isolated cases in depots and sheds.

During the war, after laborious researches, the Pasteur Institute has produced a poison which is causing havoc among the rats while it causes no inconvenience to men or dogs. In one night it destroyed in the corner of one single trench no less than 420 rats. But the rats are wily. They will not go to the same bait twice and it is necessary to vary the lures. But the fight against the rats will go on mercilessly and the rat fighters will be reinforced by 1,200 dogs which have been mobilised by the military authorities.

SPOILS OF WAR

Great Prices Have Been Paid For Curios

Keepsakes in time become relics, and relics become, if not sacred, often very precious—in terms of hard cash, that is. It is not everybody that recalls the fact that Gambetta had a glass eye. The real one was removed whilst he was still unknown, but a pupil of the great surgeon who performed the operation took possession of the real optic and put it in a bottle.

Presently the original owner of the eye took the eye of the public, and became the "observed of all observers," the idol of the French nation. Then the young man who possessed the eye of the idol traded Gambetta's optic to an American millionaire for a great price.

One would think that any relic of Cromwell would go like hot cakes, but some of the Great Protector's baby clothes, including a cap with the words, "Sweet Bab, don't cry—1599," embroidered upon it, only brought $180.

It is surprising how many locks of Napoleon's hair are about. Surely his barber made a point of sweeping up when his imperial master had had a crop, a bit off the top, and doling out the chips to his customers at a franc a time!

There is a slump in these days in the price of Napoleon lovelocks. They used to bring as much as $150, about $1.25 a hair, but the last time a lock was put up to auction it only brought $3.25.

But evidently the sword is mightier than the hair, for at the selfsame sale the sword of the conqueror of Germany brought the noble sum of $3,250.

Relics should be cheap after this war. We read in Southey's well known poem about the ploughshare turning them out on the field of Blenheim! Just think of the millions of fragments of all kinds of war material which must be buried in the hundreds of miles of trenches along the two great fronts. They will be turned up for ages to come.

War's Effect on Health

War conditions have influenced the public health in different ways, says a medical officer of health in his report. Improved labor conditions have favorably influenced the care of children, but in spite of abundance of money and food war conditions have been unfavorable to health. Excessive emotions, especially grief, unfavorably influence all, especially women, and through them the children. The effects of the lighting order have been to interfere with ventilation, and this may be one reason of the increased mortality from respiratory diseases. Overwork has no doubt been a contributory cause, shortening the lives of those already feeble.

How we dislike to meet a man who acts as if our time were his.

Love may be blind but it is seldom deaf or dumb.

DR. R. A. MACGREGOR MAY SECURE PAROLE BY NEW YEAR'S DAY

BAD AXE, Mich., Nov. 25.—After a conference here between Governor W. N. Ferris and Governor-Elect Sleeper over the case of Dr. Robert A. MacGregor, the young London, (Ont.) physician now serving life sentence at Jackson State prison for murder, it was announced that while no definite decision had been reached, the probabilities strongly point to Dr. MacGregor being granted parole by Christmas, or at the latest, New Year's Day.

In addition to his talk with Mr. Sleeper, Governor Ferris also saw Judge Beach, before whom the famous Sparling poisoning case was tried and who passed sentence upon Dr. MacGregor.

"This case has caused me more worry and anxiety than any other case in which I have been asked to exercise executive clemency," declared Governor Ferris. "I have had several interviews with Mrs. Carrie Sparling, mother of the youth alleged to have been murdered by poison, and she has always maintained stoutly that Dr. MacGregor was innocent of any wrong doing."

Governor Ferris plainly fears there has been miscarriage of justice in Dr. MacGregor's case, and says so, but at the same time does not want to act until convinced that such is the case.

BAD COLD IN THE CHEST.

"I am happy to tell you that I used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and was promptly cured of a very bad cold in the chest," writes Mrs. Josephine Gauthier, Dover South, Ont. You can depend on Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine to relieve and cure all inflammations and irritations the throat and bronchial tubes.

VILLA FORCES REPULSED.

JUAREZ, Mex., Nov. 25.—Francisco Villa renewed his attacks on Chihuahua City yesterday and was again repulsed, and his forces driven from their positions outside the city, it was announced at military headquarters here this afternoon. The fighting was for the possession of the first and second line of Government trenches, it was announced officially and resulted in a victory for the de facto forces.

Those who are not going to help His Majesty's Government and their fellow countrymen are going to help the enemy.—Mr. Duke, M.P.

Retiring Roumanian Army Is Fighting As It Falls Back

Taking Advantage of All Natural Features of the Terrain Petrograd Announces--Bucharest Admits Retirement From the Alt and Also From Topolos, While Berlin Claims That the Teutons Are Now 15 Miles Beyond the Alt River and That Alexandria Has Been Captured.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 27.—The German-Bulgarian forces in Roumania are advancing steadily, consolidating their positions as they go, while the Roumanian forces are as steadily retreating.

Statements to-day from German, Bulgarian, Russian and Roumanian capitals agreed on this general view of the Balkans campaign. Berlin reported the capture of Alexandria and hinted at the driving of a bolt across the only line of retreat left for the Roumanian forces, bottled up in the southwesternmost part of Roumania.

The Bucharest statement admitted a retreat from along the Alt. This was amplified by the Petrograd statement's explanation that the retiring forces were taking advantage of all natural features of that section to resist the enemy advance.

If the German statement is accurate, the Teutonic forces now control nearly 300 miles of the Danube, which forms the southwestern border of Roumani.

PARIS, November 27.—The sanguinary repulse of a Bulgarian counter-attack made on the Serbian forces in the Cerna sector of the front near Monastir Sunday night, was announced in to-day's official statement.

On the Allies' left wing the Italian forces continue their progress in the mountains of the region about Dibovo.

BUCHAREST, November 27.—Retirement from the Alt, also from Topojos a little eastward, was announced in to-day's official statement.

LONDON, November 27.—It was officially announced to-day that the British Government has refused a safe conduct for Count Tarnow Tarnowjsky, recently appointed Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States.

THE ENEMY STEADILY ADVANCING IN ROUMANIA

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PETROGRAD, November 27.—The retiring Roumanian army in Western Wallachia is taking advantage of all natural features of that terrain to resist the enemy advances, according to the War Office statement to-day. Having crossed the Danube near Simnitza, the Teutonic forces have placed observation posts on the River Vede, occupying positions between Valent and Tusedewade.

More Wounded Soldiers Arrive in Canada

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ST. JOHN, N.B., November 27.—The Allan liner Corsican arrived here to-day with a military party numbering 575 of all ranks, a large civilian passenger list, and a heavy consignment of mails.

Included in the military party, eighteen were for London, Ont. district, forty-four for Toronto, thirteen for Kingston, eleven for Montreal district.

In all sixty-three were in class 1, ninety-one in class 2, and eleven in class 3.

The majority of the men are suffering from wounds received in the heavy fighting on the western front.

The National Service Commission's Objects

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, Ont., November 27.—The National Service Commission, under the chairmanship of R. B. Bennett, M.P., for Calgary, is still busy perfecting its headquarters organization and in securing statistics, and in an interview to-day Mr. Bennett said that the duties of the Board is to make investigation and formulate plans that will enable the agricultural and other essential industries to be maintained at the highest state of efficiency without impairing the public service of the country. "It is also the duty of the Board," he said incidentally, "in co-operation with the military authorities to assist recruiting."

Conditions Quiet On the British Front

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, November 27.—Artillery firing around LaBassee, but otherwise quiet along the British front, was reported by General Sir Douglas Haig to-day.

Lessard's Appointment Not Yet Confirmed

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, November 27.—There is no confirmation available at military headquarters here of the report that General Lessard has been appointed to the position of Adjutant-General of the overseas Canadian forces.

Atrocities Reported in Wallachia Now

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ROME, November 27.—Wireless reports received here from Petrograd, declare that the Germans "are committing horrible acts in Western Wallachia—pillaging and massacring the population."

Heavy Cannonading Along French Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 27.—Cannonading at various places along the front, particularly in the sector of Vaux, and around Fort Douaumont, was reported in to-day's French official statement.

PTE. JAMES JACKSON IS A PRISONER IN DULMEN, GERMANY

Parents Received a Cablegram from the Canadian Red Cross Society on Saturday —Missing Since Oct. 8th.

PTE. LANG THERE TOO

That Pte. James Jackson of the 13th Canadian Battalion, who has been missing for some time, is a prisoner in Germany, was the reassuring message received by his father, Mr. J. W. Jackson, 127 Maud Street, Saturday. The news came in the shape of a cablegram from the Red Cross Society stating that Pte Jackson, who was officially declared missing on Oct. 8th, has been located at Dulmen, Germany. Pte. Jackson, enlisted with a Guelph battalion, and on reaching England went over to France with a draft for the 13th Battalion.

Pte. H. P. Laing, whose relatives live on Morrow street, and who was unofficially reported a prisoner of war, is now officially reported at Dulmen, Germany.

THE "GEISHA"

Appears at the Grand Thursday and Friday.

The formation of another "Geisha" company advertised to appear in the Grand Opera House Nov. 30 and Dec. 1st recalls the report of the judge of the musical competition in the 1910 series of Earl Grey competitions, Mr. Howard Brockway, of New York, page 144, "The performance of the 'Geisha' by the Peterborough Operatic Company on Tuesday, April 5th in Toronto, calls for an enthusiastic commendation. To organize from amateur ranks in a town the size of Peterborough, a company which should give so creditable performance, is an achievement which arouses admiration and sincere praise. The performance brought forward one singer of most remarkable quality, possessed of an exquisite voice, most admirably trained; a fine musical sense and true histrionic quality. I refer to Miss Lavina Halahan, who sang the part of "O Mimosa San."

The general spirit of the performance, and the singing of the chorus in particular, impressed me as remarkable, and in the highest degree praiseworthy. I am moved to suggest to His Excellency that if it is practicable this organization should in some way receive "honourable mention."

Two weeks later Earl Grey, accompanied by Lord Lansdowne and Captain Ross paid a visit to Peterborough, when a gala performance of the "Geisha" was put on, and His Excellency presented Miss Halahan with a pendant, and Mrs. R. J. Devey ("Molly") and Mrs. I. E. Firth ("Lady Constance Wynne") with handsome bouquets, also heartily congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Devey on the splendid results of their training of the "Geisha" company.

RECRUITING DISCUSSED BY COL. ACKERMAN WITH MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Commanding Officer of the 247th Battalion Met Ministers This Morning--Resolution Passed---Lieut. M. R. Boyd of Bobcaygeon is Killed in Action--Another 93rd Battalion Man Wounded--Military Cross For Major Sneath Who Left Here With 8th C. M. R.--To-day's General Military News.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Association held in the Y.M.C.A. this morning, Lieut. Col. Ackerman, officer commanding the 247th Battalion, addressed the members on the matter of recruiting. At the close of the address and after some discussion, the following resolution was unanimously endorsed:

"We have heard with deepest interest the enlightening address by Lieut.-Col. Ackerman. We are convinced of the pressing urgency of the matter of recruiting in general and with the need of the 247th Battalion in particular. We assure Lieut.-Col. Ackerman of our heartiest support during the months before us, and we hereby commend to our people the splendid effort he is putting forth to accomplish the completion of the Peterborough Battalion, believing it to be the first duty of Christian citizenship in the present hour, to bring to a successful conclusion the great war in which we are engaged. Arrangements will be made to co-operate with the military authorities in this work."

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Daily orders by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, commanding the 247th Battalion, C. E. F., for Sunday and morning of Nov. 26th and 27th, 1916.

Parade, Sunday. All parades are cancelled.

Monday, All officers, N. C. O'S. and men, except those specially employed, will parade in drill hall at 9 a.m and 2 p.m.

Duties.—Orderly officer for Sunday, Lieut. Dunsford.

Orderly Officer for Monday, Lieut. Quinn; next for duty, Lieut. Johnston.

R. S. Brooks, Lieut.
and Acting Adjt.

MAJOR SNEATH HONOURED.

Major T. D. Sneath, who left here as a lieutenant with the Peterborough Squadron, 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, has been awarded the Military Cross, the official report stating that he "led his Company with great courage and initiative, and organized and consolidated his position." Major Sneath was with B Squadron during their training in Peterborough and left here as the officer in charge of No. 2 Troop. Since reaching the front he has twice been promoted, has been mentioned several times in despatches, and has been twice wounded. His many friends here will be glad to learn that his gallantry has been awarded by a decoration.

BELLEVILLE, Nov. 26. — One of the largest recruiting meetings ever held in this city took place this evening at Griffin's Opera House, which building was unable to accommodate all who desired to attend. The meeting was under the auspices of the 254th Battalion. Mr. E. G. Porter, K. C., M.P., was chairman, and the chief speaker was the Hon. A. Meighen, Solicitor-General of Canada, who delivered an inspiring recruiting address. Other speakers were the chairman and Brigadier-General Hemming of Kingston, commanding officer for No. 3 Military Division. The 155th Battalion Band, which has been attached to the 254th Battalion for recruiting purposes furnished fine musical selections. Col. A. P. Allen, commanding officer of the 254th, and his officers have during the past week secured a large number of recruits.

WHO MAN WOUNDED.

Pte. Ernest Wm. Smith, who left Peterborough as a member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded to-day, the thirtieth casualty in the 93rd ranks, since the battalion went overseas. Pte. Smith enlisted in Peterborough last winter, and was transferred to another unit after reaching England. His relatives live in the Old Country.

LIEUT. BOYD KILLED.

His many local friends will hear with sorrow that Lieut. Monson Richard Boyd of Bobcaygeon, son of Capt. Harry Boyd, Medical Officer of the 109th Battalion, and cousin of Mrs. W. H. Dunsford of Peterborough has been killed in action. Lieut. Boyd went overseas as a member of the 58th Battalion. His brother Lieut. Ormsby Boyd, was killed in Mesopotamia. A cousin, Pte. Thorton Boyd of the Princess Patricias, was killed

LIEUT. REG. STRATTON WINS MILITARY CROSS

Peterboro Boy at the Front With Royal Engineers is Rewarded for Gallantry in Going to Rescue of Sappers Left in Dugout During Heavy Bombardment

WAS THANKED BY GENERAL

A cablegram received by Ald. A. H. Stratton, last night, contained the pleasing tidings that his son, Lieut. J. Reginald Stratton of the Royal Engineers, Imperial Army, has been awarded the Military Cross, for bravery. The message was from Mr. Stratton's other son, Lieut W. W. Stratton of the Royal Flying Corps, and will be received gladly not only by Lieut. Stratton's many friends, but by the citizens of Peterborough, generally.

Lieut. Reg. Stratton is a true son of Peterborough, having been born and raised here, and the fact that he was serving with the Imperial forces when he won his decoration, makes the award all the more pleasing. Lieut. Stratton graduated from the Royal Military College, Kingston, in the spring of 1915, with Lieuts. Will Morris and Lieut. Harold Smith, both of whom have met death at the front. He was given a commission in the Royal Engineers and, after some further training in England, went to the front with the 257th Field Company.

The gallant feat which undoubtedly gained the young Peterborough officer his decoration, occurred in July last. Lieut. Stratton, with another officer and thirty-five non-commissioned officers and sappers were in billets when the Huns' guns got the range and shelled the place heavily. The officers hustled their men out and into a trench a couple of hundred yards away. When this point was reached it was found that two of the men were missing. It was reported that they were in a dugout, and as one of them was laid up with a bad leg, Lieut. Stration determined to go back after them. The shells were raining heavily on the ground to be covered, but Lieut. Stratton started back, and his Sergeant shouting, "You're not going alone, sir," sprang to his feet and went with him. The two ran back through the shell fire, and had just got into the square when a 5.9 inch shell blew away a sand-bag breast work they were behind, blowing the Sergeant off his feet. It was a close call for both, but they kept on and dashed into the dugout to find the men had just got out. Shells were dropping all around bt the party got back to the trench safely, making record time in dashing over the shell-swept ground.

For his brave action Lieut. Stration was personally thanked by Major General Lawford, commanding the 41st Division, who addressed the following communication to the Peterborough officer, itself an honour that few officers are privileged to enjoy

To Second Lieutenant J. R. Stratton, 257th Field Company, Royal Engineers.

The G. O. C., 41st Division, wishes to place on record his appreciation of your gallantry in returning under shell-fire to find two missing men who had been left in a dugout.

Major-General Lawford,
41st Division.

"I really don't think it was worth all this fuss," Lieut. Stration wrote home at the time. "I hope something comes out of it for the sake of my Sergeant, because I had to go back and he didn't."

Since then Lieut. Stratton was the recipient of a second congratulatory message of the same kind for a similar exploit, so that his military cross has been well earned.

SAYS HIS MISSION IS TO DESTROY THE ROUMANIAN ARMY

Von Falkenhayen Discussing Situation With United Press Says That the Main Task of the Invaders is not the Occupation of Bucharest.

NOTHING IS CERTAIN

Examiner Special:

(By United Press Correspondent.)

Headquarters of Gen. Von Falkenhayen in the Transylvanian Alps, Nov. 24—(via Berlin and Sayville Wireless.)—"Our task is to destroy the Roumanian army—and that we are doing as best we can."

So bespoke General Von Falkenhayen to-day his brows wrinkled, but his eyes sparkling, as he submitted to questions concerning the progress of his troops against the Roumanians.

"Our flyers," he continued, "report the Roumanian roads black with people and waggons bearing refugees, fleeing from little Wallachia toward the Alt river. That is the terrible part of the war. That soldiers should suffer is war, but that women and children should be put to such misery, that is terrible. But it was Roumania's choice. Roumania played with fire too long, and is now getting burned."

"How soon do you expect to get to Bucharest?" the German General was asked.

"Do we want Bucharest?" he responded immediately. "Every time we take charge of a city we have to feed the population. We are not bothered with that question, we are soldiers. Our task is to destroy the Roumanian army, and that we are doing as best we can."

The General's eyebrows moved up and wen and his eyes looked out sharply as only Von Falkenhayen's eyes can do.

"When will the Roumanian army be destroyed," I asked.

A few officers standing nearby smiled. But Falkenhayen looked straight at his questioner as he said, "Rain or snow, a railroad accident, or most anything an destroy the best made plans. I have been in this war two and a half years and can say only the certain thing about it is, uncertainty. I am only certain of one thing, and that is that we will win."

"Peterborough Deserves Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, NOV. 27, 1916

GREATER PETERBOROUGH

On Saturday the Examiner inaugurated a "Peterborough Prosperity Page"—a serial appeal that will be presented for some months, to the enterprise and public spirit of our citizens. The appeal is very largely to co-operation and co-ordination of efforts to induce material prosperity. But we must remember, that while this is important, it is not all or the most important. We have Scriptural warrant for another view. St. Luke tells us that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth". So a city's real life consists not altogether in the material things it has—great factories, broad walks and paved roadways—or even perfect water and light supply and sewerage systems. The most elaborate dwelling, marble halls and carved work, do not make the ideal home; but the little touches of ornament, pictures, draperies, etc., are needed.

We can't have the best city in all ways unless we have the ornamental and refining features that distinguish a city of homes from the barrenness and jumble of busy factory yards. We must have our streets and public places made beautiful with trees and flowers. We have the trees now—but not enough—and it is a pleasure to see that the city is taking a deeper interest. The City Engineer, Mr. Parsons is busy with the improvement of a city bylaw, having in view this improvement of our tree interests. And some of our citizens are contemplating the planting of boulevards with flowers and extending to the adjacent streets the beauty of floral decoration on their private open lawns.

Other places are thinking of doing likewise. The Horticultural Society of Woodstock has appointed a committee to look after the "planting of flower beds in different parts of the city"—on the grounds in front of factories, "if the owners give their consent". We don't want to be outdone by cities of lesser importance and more limited possibilities than Peterborough. We have the natural setting to make Peterborough one of the most beautiful cities in the dominion or on the continent. Only we must make it so by doing it.

The proposal to plant the boulevards on our paved streets to flowers is easily practicable. We may fear that they will be destroyed. They may be for a time; but soon custom and the growing appreciation of the public beauty will appeal to the thoughtless, and in time every citizen will become educated, converted to the cult of beauty and will in common with the body of citizen interested, take a pride in what is really their own; for street flowers and street trees are a common possession—contributing to the delight and comfort of all.

It is hoped that in the aim to make Peterborough commercially, industrially and substantially greater, sight will not be lost of the complementary condition of beauty of private homes and public places. There should be some organized effort in this direction, co-operation with the new road the city is giving. It naturally falls to the Horticultural Society to take the lead in this, as it has splendidly done in other things—not a mere sentimental lead, but a practical lead by making it easier for citizens to co-operate with them.

LOOK OUT FOR NUMBER ONE.

This is a selfish injunction, but amply warranted when detachment in minor things is one of the conditions of success in greater things. We must win this war; and as to Canada's part she must conserve every resource, direct every effort to adequately do our share. Every consideration is subordinate to that object. We must husband our own resources, whether of material or manhood, with the one object in view.

To accomplish this it may be necessary to take extraordinary measures. We are required—in honour bound, as in duty bound—to raise 100,000 more soldiers. Soldiers mean men, and in the last analysis, we must make soldiers of our men and, if necessary, resort to some measure of compulsion. We must keep our man material for our own use. With the abundance of demand for labour, there is no need for any Canadian to leave the country for employment. Apart from that we need every man at home for military purposes, for making munitions, and in order to get the 100,000 physically fit men, that we must provide. If Canadians, are emigrating to the United States, we must know the reason why; and if they are young men, as they are likely to be—eligible for military service—they should not leave the country, as they seem to be doing. According to United States official immigration figures, during the past six months 33,340 "male aliens" have entered the United States from Canada. Time was when such figures had relatively little importance; but having regard to the need of labour in munition factories, to the need of military material, it becomes a serious matter if the manhood of the country at the numerical rate of two or three battalions a month is leaving Canada. It is not to be assumed that all of the 33,400 who have left Canada in the past six months are eligible for enlistment; but there must be a very important proportion of men fit for service. If it can be done, we should take steps to preserve our manhood for ourselves and the empire, and it is not impossible that we shall have to take measures that will prevent emigration at a time when our manhood is of the highest industrial and military value.

There are complaints of the scarcity and high price of paper for newspaper and book purposes. No doubt the advance in price of the materials, the labour, etc., that enter into the production of paper is to some extent responsible. We need, however, to economize in the use of paper, and the press generally is acting upon a realization of the need of economizing. But the government goes on wasting paper in the old way, printing tons of worthless statistical literature—if not worthless per se, worthless as far as public appreciation and use of it are concerned. Tons and tons of "Blue Books" are printed at large cost, whose contents never met a human eye for purposes of reading or receiving information. Curtailment of this prodigal use of paper is especially indicated. Bona fide printers and publishers are economizing to the best, and the government should set the example—of economy, not of waste.

But if the government won't do this in regard to public printing, there is something that it can do to safeguard Canadian printing and publishing and, indirectly, popular interests. There is no need for a paper famine in Canada. We have the matter in our hands. We have the pulpwood material; we have the production—much more than enough to supply all our own needs. We export more pulp and pulp products than we consume at home. We should keep, not only enough for our own purposes, but enough to prevent the crapping of newspaper and publishing interests, with resultant inefficient service of the public interests. It may not be necessary to embargo pulp and pulp products, but there should be a limitation of exportation to the extent of leaving at home for ourselves a safe margin of supply for our own purposes.

We must look after ourselves first; especially in the matter of our own products and our own interests. If we have any pulp or paper to export, export it. If we need it ourselves, keep it; prevent its exportation. If we do not produce sufficient manufactured paper for our own purposes, the need to do it will give impulse to the enterprise of our manufacturers. At any rate, in looking out for ourselves we shall be benefiting ourselves and getting the good from the resources with which we are endowed and which were intended primarily for ourselves.

We must adopt the policy of Canada for Canadians all round the circle. We should build our own navy, build our own mercantile ships, refine our own nickel, manufacture to the fullest practicable extent all our own resources to the ultimate condition. We must give it this process the utmost possible employment to home labour and home capital. In a word, we must, if we would do justice to ourselves, and realize the fullest possible value of our resources, live up to the motto, Canada for Canadians. We then shall be greater in ourselves; a more worthy member of, a more important factor in, the Empire; a larger influence in the Empire, and through it a larger influence in the world.

TO PREVENT EXCESSIVE PROFITS.

The weakness of the new Dominion order-in-council dealing with the high cost of living lies in the lack of adequate means of enforcement. There is no hesitation or weakness about the enforcement of the customs laws. The Dominion Government does not tell the municipalities to investigate charges of infraction of these laws, nor does it leave them to be enforced by the Provincial authorities. As the manufacturer is protected by the Dominion Government so the consumer ought to be protected, and the Dominion Government ought to take the whole responsibility for enforcement, and organize a staff for that purpose.—Toronto Star.

THE WHITE COMRADE

The Examiner has received from the publishers, McClelland, Goodchild and Stewart, Toronto, a new volume of verse—a poetry—from the pen—no, heart and soul—of Katherine Hale (Mrs. J. W. Garvin), the author of a delightful poetical brochure, "Grey Knitting," which had a tremendous vogue the first year of the war, and found its way into thousands of homes as a timely and fitting Christmas gift. This latest production, "The White Comrade," by a Canadian author, who has won wide distinction for her literary work, gives her a larger claim to more than mere distinction for literary excellence—to poetical genius.

The motive poem of the little book is entitled, "The White Comrade." A Canadian soldier, severely wounded at Ypres, tells the story, with a thrill in every line, of leaving Valcartier, with the first overseas Canadian contingent, and "so across the bridge of water" to England! Then France, Neuve Chapelle, St. Julien, Festubert. He was one of three soldier chums. One fell at St. Julien, another was sore wounded, like him who tells the story and finishes it thus—

War, war, O hot hideous and hard,
The ways you lead, the deaths you make one die!
I have died fifty times this noon " So ran
The anguished brain within me, on and on,
All the long way of quivering mortal woe.
The world was gone. I, swooning, felt it go,
Was at the point of nothingness, when there,
Moving across the grass on hands and knees
I saw a brown-clad figure crawling slow
As if he were a part of the hot plain
And wondered if I'd last until he came.

Never that troop of angels in the air
at Mons, showed brighter wings or lovelier light
Than the worn whaki of that comrade dear
I felt him bind my wounds with tender touch,
And at his touch the ghosts of pain escaped.
I saw him smile above me, and I swooned
For joy of waking up not all alone.
I begged; "Stay with me till they come" and then Looked up into his face for the first time
And saw it was old Edward, who had died
At Julien. We left him lying there,
White in the moonlight, as we all rushed on.
We buried him, Edward, the loved and brave,
And now I stared through pain and saw his face;
I saw his eyes shining and lit with love;
The old eyes, staunch and loyal as they were
All through our youth together and these days
Of the great cameraderie of war.

* * * * * * *

And he laughed softly and I held his hand.
Looked at him long until the blinding noon
Came to bend down between us and his face,
Tender and brown and kindly seemed enwrapt
In a white light mysterious and strong,
Turning the khaki to silver. And the hand
Holding me fast was part of the great light.

This vision, may be thought overdrawn—pure poetical fancy—but it may have been the dilerium of pain, that seems as real as life—or death—taking the shape of the backward thoughts of a mind isolated from all present distraction. We can't know what comes to the soul of the stricken soldier in his hour of agony and loneliness; cannot know how heaven comes nearer, and in what guise, as earth recedes. We do know, in fact, what relief comes from living comrades; and when we think that the great Comforter, is everywhere—where pain and sorrow are especially, we cannot feel it inconsistent with probability, that he might, to a Canadian soldier writhing nambly with pain, take the form of a close comrade, "Killed in action." It is, anyway, a comforting thought to those who have sons or others dear to them, in the perils of battle, to know that Christ comes to them when all other help and comfort fail. There is poetical consistency in the idea and legendary precedent, if one recalls that tradition makes Flanders the scene of a miraculous appearance, as told in Balzac's "Jesus-Christ en Flandre." At least the wounded Ypres Canadian soldier believed he came, and plausibly accounts for it:—

And so my friends, this word I bring to you
Hot from the hell of conflict whence I come,
Where life and death, binding men's spirits close
Have sealed a certain knowledge on our souls,
Christ has come back to earth in these great days.

* * * * * * *

He has come back as in the centuries past,
He suddenly appeared upon the streets
Of old Judean towns.

The "White Comrade" is a splendidly strong and, at the same time, tender poem; the extracts made give a little and a little idea, of the beauty of thought, and the beauty of the words in which it is clothed, found in this poem, epic in its quality of conception and of spirit of thought and movement. The blank versification has a Tennysonian tunefulness varied by strong Anglo-Saxon directness and thrust of words. In it Katherine Hale is revealed as a writer of poetry of the best kind and quality.

"Equal in poetic merit, though differing in texture and tone, are the few short lyrics that complete the little book. It is difficult to differentiate their claims to quotation, but among the most appealing to those who feel most and most need comfort is—

THE HEARTS OF MOTHERS.

The hearts of mothers are hid things
In these the days of woe,
And troops of strange thoughts move therein
Silently to and fro.

They are not thoughts of yester-year.
Or thoughts of you and me
And that which we have done, or do,
By air, or land, or sea.

But these are thoughts steel-bright with pain,
And death-thoughts bare and stark
And shining thoughts of armaments
That glitter through the dark.

They move, old passions and revolts.
Fresh-called, yet still with scars.
To music crimsoned with the clash
Of endless ancient wars

And those who summon memories
From pathways of the sun,
When death spoke life most solemnly
Ere new life was begun.

They dream of a strange blooming
That dawns in greater birth:
The frail, bright flower of selfishness
Brought back again to earth."

They feel, the Givers of all Life.
Great need to give again
The utmost dower of womanhood,
All mystery—all pain

The "White Comrade and other Poems" is in paper with a dainty cover design by Dorothy Stevens, a Canadian artist. It is "printed in Canada"; Canadian all through, and worthy the reading by all Canadians, especially at this time. It will be a timely and welcome Christmas gift.

Boy Who Hit Girl Ordered By Court To Throw 1,000 Stones

LYNN, Mass., Nov. 26.—Because Leonard Crowder, ten years old, threw a stone at a girl and cut her scalp, he was ordered by Judge Lummus, in the Police Court, to throw 1,000 stones in the next two days.

It was testified that the boy also threw a stone last summer which permanently injured the eye of John Buchanan.

Judge Lummus ordered a probation officer to select a gravel pit and have Leonard throw 1,000 stones in the manner that boys generally throw them. He will not be permitted to toss them. He must wind up each time and throw with the full movement of the arm. The officer will count as the boy throws.

"This boy seems to have a mania for throwing stones," said the Judge, "and I guess we had better get it out of his system."

THE MARKETS AT A GLANCE

Cooked Meats Have Declined —Dried Fruits Holding Firm

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in the Canadian Grocer:

In the search for canned goods at easier prices one Montreal firm this week secured 5,000 cases of Spanish canned tomatoes in the 2 1-2-lb. size. Considerable quantities of American canned goods are coming into Canada. There is a good demand for most lines of canned goods despite the high prices prevailing. Prices generally are firm with a tendency toward higher prices on corn.

Flour registered a decline but went back again to the level of last week. Sugar has held steady with a slightly better consumption noted in certain quarters. Canadian beet root sugar is now on the market in competition with the cane sugar.

Butter, cheese and eggs have all registered advances. Lard has also been advanced a quarter of a cent. There seems small prospect in sight for easier prices in these commodities for some time to come. Butter is expected to go no much higher levels. American butter is looked upon as a probable factor in the Canadian market in the near future. Cooked meats such as hams, have registered a decline of 1c. per pound. Heavy summer consumption is now over and prices are easier as result.

Teas Firm.

All dried fruits are holding firm with a tendency toward higher prices in prunes. Currants from Greece are not expected to be in this market in time for the Christmas trade. Relief is anticipated from shipments of Australian currants now on the way, due to arrive about December 10. Teas are firm with advances recorded in some of the grades. Tapioca continues to be scarce on spot and prices are accordingly high. Beans are firm with advances in Indians recorded in certain instances. Package cereals are in a very firm market. Owing to the high cost of pulpboard and strawboard and dyes used in printing it is thought that for next year at least higher prices will have to be asked. Business has been fairly good during the week.

RE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Some time ago I saw where our worthy Mayor went down to Ottawa with several more delegates to address the government on the necessity of giving the municipality power to investigate the cause of the present high prices and if they were found unnecessary, remedy the evil. Well it appears our Mayor's eloquence awakened the Rip Van Winkles there to the extent of them issuing an order in council giving the power asked for. In a red tape bound round about way it is true, but still something. Since then I have been "watchfully waiting" to see our Mayor and Council make a move, but I am afraid that somnolent atmosphere down at Ottawa must have overcome our energetic delegate for no sound has come from him since. This is a pity for it is a subject we are all interested in and if he succeeded in reducing the cost, or even a few articles, he would earn the eternal gratitude of the citizens of Peterborough.

Surely he has not finished before he has begun, or is he like some people I have known who in time of peace when there was no enemy around, and no opportunity of serving their country were so fierce to the backbone; but when war broke out and the call for men came they discreetly kept silence. Wake up, Mr. Mayor and Council if there was a need to go to Ottawa to get the power given to you, there is surely a need to use it. Let us hear from you.

Yours truly,
GEORGE LEADER.

An Enthusiast on Canada

ONE might almost think that three million miles of travel would satisfy any man, but Mr. Burton Holmes, the famous American globe trotter, wanted more and spent three months this summer in crossing Canada from coast to coast as the first stage of his fourth million. The country was new to him, but it provided him with such a wonderful variety of beautiful pictures that he now declares he never spent three more interesting months in his life. He is lecturing now to audiences of two and three thousand at a time in the great cities of the United States, urging them to spend next summer either in the romantic, historic centres of Eastern Canada or the mountain fastnesses of the Canadian Pacific Rockies. His moving pictures of Banff, Lake Louise and the Yoho Valley are the finest of their kind ever produced, while the photographs in natural colors taken by Mrs. Burton Holmes are a revelation as to the possibilities of this new process of picture taking. Canada has probably never been drawn to the attention of our American neighbors in a more attractive fashion.

SING SING CONVICT SAYS BRITISH DETECTIVES ARE BETTER THAN AMERICAN

(From the Sing Sing Star of Hope.)

The detective force of London is operated under entirely different lines to that of New York. I might say it is superior, at least the members appear to be more intelligent. It is an institution entirely separate from the police force, although the police commissioner (Sir Arthur Henry) is at the head of it.

There are no bulldozing methods used. The London detective is courteous and obliging, as is the London bobby. I was very much surprised to see on one occasion a young policeman taking down notes of an accident at Ludgate Circus (a very busy traffic section at the extreme end of the Strand) in shorthand, which shows the efficiency of the force.

The accident I witnessed was the running down of a traffic policeman by a motor bus. There was no confusion or excitement, the officer's took the driver's name and number and other particulars and the bus proceeded on its way.

ISSUE LICENSES.

Every driver and conductor of the electric cars, motor buses and every kind of public conveyance is licensed by Scotland Yard. The licenses give the applicant's name, address and nationality and his photo. There are three of these licenses to each man. The license bureau keeps one. One is given to the firm by whom the applicant is employed, and the other is given to the man to whom it is issued. He must at all times keep this on his person and show it on demand.

For instance, should a passenger have an altercation with a taxi driver over his fare and think he is being overcharged, he will demand to see the driver's license and from that he will get the man's number, and if he should make complaint to Scotland Yard they will adjust the matter. However an American in London will seldom have cause to complain over the prevailing taxi rates. The ordinary ride in the west end, for instance from hotel to theatre, is one shilling—24 cents.

A peculiar incident occurred on my arrival at Euston Station, a large terminal depot. The taxicab I had engaged to take me to my hotel slowed down at the entrance of the depot and the policeman took down the number of the cab and where the driver was taking me. On making enquiries I found it was customary to do this and the practice is all for the benefit of the stranger arriving in London.

MYSTERIOUS MURDERS.

This great city has been noted for its mysterious disappearances and murders. Well-to-do people who come up to London on business and to shop are often never seen nor heard of again, except in some cases where the body has been picked up on the River Thames.

The majority of the murders committed in England are done in railway trains which is probably on account of the small compartments of which a train is composed and more often than not the bodies are found in the rivers. The criminal over there seems to have a mania for disposing of his victim's body in this manner.

But considering the size and the population of London there are practically few crimes of murder, and very few burglars resort to violence. Highway robbery at the point of a gun is almost unheard of, but so-called anarchists who are exiled from their own countries infest a certain section in the upper Shaftsbury avenue district.

It is a well known fact that a continental criminal can find a safe harbor in London provided he stays in that one particular district, but woe unto him who should venture out of it and be recognized in Mayfair.

A FAMOUS STATION.

The precinct station that comes the most under the public eye and which has the most renowned reputation is known as the "Vine Street Station." It is a small street put away from the blare of Piccadilly Circus, and a few doors from Regent street. This precinct takes in all the so-called west end, which includes all of the hotel and theatre district and that exclusive district known as Mayfair; it also takes in the foreign element of Shaftsbury avenue. It has its dead line in Hatton Gardens, the Jewelry district.

I believe the Scotland Yard man is more efficient than the Central Office man in New York. They are in every case exceptionally intelligent men and the majority of them are gentlemen. It is seldom through the ability of the New York detective that a man gets caught. They rely too much on "stool pigeons," or the man is given away by friends or walks into a trap designed by fate more than the cunning of the sleuth. On the other hand the Scotland Yard man goes after a case until he finds his man. I can vouch for this from experience.

A COURTEOUS STRANGER.

It was six months after the crime for which I was charged was committed, that a well dressed stranger handed me his card in Maison La Fitte France, and after introducing himself reminded me "that anything I should say would be used in evidence against me." He asked me if I would accompany him back to London, and on consenting I remarked that I should like to pack my bag. Curious to say, he repeated these words in court after being sworn. During the trip back to London not one word was said regarding my case and I found him a very congenial companion. We walked up and down the deck of the Channel steamer and no passenger could have suspected that we were anything but friends. No handcuffs were in evidence at any time.

On arriving in London he was obliging enough to go to an hotel with me and allow me to wash up, and then we had breakfast. This civility on his part saved me from a journey to the police station. By that time it was near the hour for our appearance in court. So we took a taxi and I was arraigned in the West London Court. After being asked whether I would have my case tried there or go to a higher court, I was remanded to Brixton for one week. There are no long delays as we have here. It is a well known fact that the public prosecutor in this country, having not sufficient evidence on which to convict a man, will hold him in the Tombs for several months in the hope that he will get discouraged and finally plead guilty to a lesser crime.

BRIXTON PRISON.

In saying a word about the committment prison in London, known as Brixton I must say that although the confinement is closely the treatment and the food are better than that of the Tombs. You are allowed to buy your food and newspapers, and you can also pay for a better cell. For one dollar a week you can have a spacious cell with writing table, washstand and carpet. It is kept clean by a convicted inmate. Smoking is not allowed but one can order with his meals one pint of beer or a half pint of liquor or wine each day.

They do not carry out the Bertillon system so explicitly as they do in New York; I only remember having my finger prints taken. But in Brixton, while out in the yard for exercise, we were all lined up every day and two men from Scotland Yard passed by and picked out "the old timers". I heard afterwards that these two officers were noted for remembering faces.

THE SILVER GREYHOUND.

There are two branches of Scotland Yard, one of which is devoted exclusively to government work. The members of this branch are known as "greyhounds", because of the small silver greyhound they wear pinned to their waistcoats. This greyhound indicates speed. They are secret agents of the government and you will find them in all four quarters of the globe. One would never connect these well-dressed, alert looking men with a detective bureau, but whenever you should see this small silver greyhound dangling from a watch chain or pinned to a waistcoat you can depend on that man being a member of Scotland Yard.

Before closing I must say a word about the traffic policeman. The traffic of London is handled in a very adequate manner considering the narrow streets and slushy weather. I have seen it in London pitch dark for three whole days and nights with a drizzly rain thrown in, and yet these traffic men kept the vehicles going. I have seen motor buses climbing up on the sidewalk and all horse traffic being led by the drivers carrying lanterns.

London still clings to a very old custom in case of an accident. The victim is carried away to the hospital on a kind of stretcher on two wheels. No ambulances are used.

THE RIGHT NEWSPAPER

The question of PUBLICITY is so important in the conduct of any business, that the merchant must continually study it from every angle—become expert on the subject in order that he may select understandingly just that particular newspaper publicity that he needs.

The cleverest and best advertising copy is not "Publicity" until placed in THE RIGHT NEWSPAPER.

Just what daily papers are more effective for his particular purpose is a matter every advertiser must determine for himself—not be guided by the advertising manoeuvres of his competitors.

Individuality is the very life of advertising; and to advertise in one certain newspaper for some good reason, is the right thing to do.

Study all the newspapers in your field compare them and get actual knowledge of their genuine value for yourself.

A Message From Sir Robert Borden

In his urgent appeal for National Service, on October 23rd, Sir Robert Borden said:

"Let us never forget the solemn truth that the nation is not constituted of the living alone. There are those as well who have passed away and those yet to be born. So this great responsibility comes to us as heirs of the past and trustees of the future. But with that responsibility there has come something greater still, the opportunity of proving ourselves worthy of it; and I pray that this may not be lost."

NEVER "CAME OUT" FOR UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

The students of irony must regret that the Holy Alliance never "came out" for universal suffrage. Wanting such a needed companion picture to the affecting tableau of Germany and Austria-Hungary proclaiming the freedom and independence of the part of Russian Poland occupied by the Teutons, he must content himself with the thought of Abdul Hamid proclaiming the Constitution of Freedom, Equality and Justice in 1876. That sublime charter lasted for a month or two, to be renewed a generation afterward. Kurd and Armenian embraced in Constantinople in 1908. The Armenian soon found his equality in death.

A reformed pirate is a beautiful character, especially when he restores the "swag" of a former associate and keeps his own. Two partitioners of Poland turn against the third, partly as a "gesture" mainly for military purposes. Prussia hangs on to Posen and West Prussia. Austria-Hungary allows autonomy to Galicia, where the Poles have been useful in checking the Ruthenians, but she doesn't surrender it.

"Under Russian domination," says that inveterate "semi-official" organ of Wilhelmstrasse, the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, "no Polish administration, no Polish schools, and no Polish army were admitted. Exactly as in Prussian Poland. The Polish provinces have been for years a thorn in the flesh of the Prussian Government. At the time of the insurrection of Russian Poles in 1863, Bismarck, incurring the hostility of the Liberals, then liberals in something more than name, sided with the Russian Government against the insurrection, and remonstrated with France, England, and even Austria. Ever since the '80s the contest between Poles and Germans has been acute in Posen, and even the previously contented Poles of Silesia, a million in number have since been drawn into the movement for a Greater Poland or autonomy.

A social and economic war, reinforced on the part of the Poles by a lavish use of the boycott, has prevailed. The Government has settled some 100,000 Germans in those provinces. The Landtag has passed restrictive and oppressive laws, a law of expropriation, a law forbidding the settling of Poles without the consent of the authorities, German colonization societies have sent in and helped German immigrants, farmers and artisans. The Poles, by banks of their own, by refusing to sell to Germans, by many devices, have gained more land than they have lost, in spite of the millions spent by the Prussian Government.

This struggle for the land is only a part of the bitter fight between Poles and Germans. For seventy years a Polish endeavor, which gathered great strength since the beginning of this century, has been going on. One of the weaknesses of Poland, one of the causes of its anarchy, violence, and feebleness, was the want of a middle class. A landholding oligarchy of nobles, the clergy, a mass of peasants, that was Poland. When one remembers how oppressively a minority of Poles ruled Russians, Germans, Lithuanians, Jews, one's enthusiasm for a restored Poland, for "the noble Pole" of the '30s cools a little, nor does the Polish treatment of Ruthenians and Jews indicate a regard for any other nationality than the Polish.

It is impossible not to praise, however, the skill and the zeal with which the programme of Polish economic betterment, of the encouragement of Polish culture, has been carried. A popular literature has been created, a powerful press, a wide ramification and intertwisting of societies, athletics, charitable, social, literary musical. The Polish insurrections of 1831, 1846, 1863, were of the nobility. The Polish movement of to-day is of the people, of a people steadily rising in the economic scale. "I had rather give up Westphalia than the Polish provinces," said Bismarck. The Germanization of those provinces was a task regarded as of vital importance by Beulow. Pole calls to Pole, the Russian Pole to the Prussian. The "Slavic peril" in a sharp form is right in these provinces of the marshes. Is it likely that Francis Joseph and William II., those strangest "zwei Polen aus der Polsecker," want to set up in earnest, and as a buffer State, a Polish kingdom which could be but a stimulation of Polish nationalism in Prussia?

The paper kingdom of Poland is of course a reply, or counterbid, to the Czar's manifesto promising self-government and civil and religious freedom to the Poles. The Russian treatment of Poles has been most blameworthy, yet before the devastation of the war the Russian Poles were thriving agriculturally and industrially. Their cities were growing. A middle class was coming up. And it is said that the Jews would prefer Russian to Polish rule.

Finally, it is to be said that the Zwei-Kaiserbund had better wait till its chickens are hatched before counting them. It is somewhat too early to hold a private Congress of Vienna, and the two Emperors have as much right to settle the fate of a part or all of Russian Poland as the Devil to give away the kingdoms of the world.

The Berlin account of the enthusiasm of Warsaw students to volunteer in the army, the stress laid in all the accounts on the army and military administration, seem to make it clear that the purpose of the sham kingdom is Polish soldiers to fight for the Central Powers, perhaps an extension of the Teuton lines to the eastward.

By the way, if the Kaiser wishes to demonstrate, that he is reformed and a freedom lover, why doesn't he re-establish the kingdom of Belgium?
—New York Times.

Heroic Conduct at Front Wins Citations.

Citation of dogs in regimental orders is now common at the French front. Fox, of the 19th Company of the 10th regiment, is one of these illustrious quadrupeds. The afternoon war bulletin of July 16 contained the following:

"An enemy raid directed against one of our small posts in the Paschendaal region failed under our fire." It is learned from an official source that the failure was due to Fox, who was thus referred to in next day's regimental orders: "Fox, Series F 4, No. 221, Kennel W., prevented a raid attempted on one of our first line trenches by the Germans. Taking advantage of the darkness, and when a gale was blowing, the enemy succeeded in reaching our barbed-wire without being seen or heard. The dog, Fox of the 19th Company, on sentry at the end of the trench, twice gave the alarm and thus allowed us to receive the enemy with grenade fire. The surprise attack failed."

Two other dogs, Diana and Cybele, have been distinguished in the same way, and all three have, besides, been introduced by moving pictures to the Paris public.

Anecdotes of occasions on which these "war dogs," as they are known, have saved critical situations during actual fighting by acting as despatch runners are innumerable, and staff officers have calculated that in one section of the front alone six thousand soldiers were saved from death or danger by these always modest auxiliaries.

TOO ENTHUSIASTIC PATRIOTS.

London Times (War correspondence): In a certain overseas unit a little while ago, when the unit went into action, it was decided to hold back at the base for a particular purpose, a few men, who, it was ordered, should be selected from the oldest and the youngest men. Four men held back consisted of two fathers with their respective sons—the fathers in both cases being found to be strictly too old and the sons too young to be here at all. Whether from love of the Old Country the fathers had persuaded their sons to misrepresent their ages on enlisting, or whether from desire of adventure, the sons had overruled the fathers, nobody knows; for each generation throws the blame on the other.

LONDON TAKES TO CLOGS.

Among the many interesting changes which the war is bringing in the habits of Londoners is that prejudice against clogs among the poor in some parts of the metropolis is giving way before necessity. The fact accentuates further the revolution in London's social habits and it is due to the great increase in the cost of boots and shoes. Clogs are dearer, too, but by only a fraction of the cost of other footwear.

The absolute refusal heretofore of the poor to wear clogs as reflecting their feeling that they were a sign of a disgraceful level of poverty or as stigma of charity has not until now been overcome even by their free distribution to the children in the schools by charitable organizations. Indeed the most ancient and gaping pair of shoes picked from a dust heap has been preferred to the best pair of clogs. There are one or two clog-shops in London, one of which is commending them to the public as "boots with wooden soles." Though their trade is small it is increasing now. Large quantities of clogs are being turned out by firms in London but almost exclusively for the country or colonial trade. One large factory here is turning out large quantities of clogs for France, this bein, captured trade from the Germans.

GUNNER DORRIS TELLS OF BATTERY CASUALTIES

Fritz got the Range on 4th. Canadian Battery and High Explosive Shells Killed One Peterboro Artilleryman and Seriously Wounded Six Other Members of the Battery.

NONE OF THE ORIGINAL

GUNNER AMBROSE DORRIS

Gunner Ambrose Dorris, a Peterborough member of the 4th Battery, who has been at the front for nearly two years, sends the following interesting letter to his brother, Mr. Albert Dorris, 291 1-2 Lewis street. The gunner he refers to in his letter is undoubtedly Claude Manley, of Peterborough, whose death was officially reported a few days ago:

Dear Brother and Sister,—Received two letters, also two parcels from you a few days ago. I am sure very thankful to you for same. Well, Bert, we had seven casualties yesterday in our battery, six seriously wounded and one killed. The young man killed is from Peterborough. I think you know his parents fairly well. I am not allowed to give you his name. However, you will most likely see it in the daily papers days before you receive this letter. He was instantly killed. He held my horses for me the night before while I unloaded ammunition, not fifteen yards from where he was killed. Two or three of Fritz's big shells got the seven of them. This young fellow is a gunner on the same gun as I am. He certainly was a good gunner and a good driver. I am quite sure there is not a man better liked in our battery, either officers or men, than he was. He was a dear friend to every man in the battery. I have not seen George Gauther as yet, but will inquire for him. I sure would love to see him. There was not one of the boys that left home with me among the seven casualties. They were all reinforcements. Well, brother, the cold, wet, wintery weather has set in and we are in mud and water most of the time above our knees. My feet have been wet and half frozen for over two weeks. It is really impossible to keep dry.

I have an extra good appetite. I have spent all of fifteen dollars in this last eight weeks on food, mostly canned food. If I ever get a chance again at a good home-cooked meal I know what I would do to it. Bully beef and hard tack is our regular ration. It is a very good ration, but oh, how tired I am of it. I can certainly get away with it with the best of them. It seems as though we are in hard luck in regards to rations. In the summer when it is almost too hot to eat we get stew, stew, stews. But now the weather good and cold and wet we get an issue of fresh meat about once a week. Believe me it certainly does get our goat. However, this will not last forever. Well, dear brother and sister, I will write mother and father as soon as I can. Hoping this finds you all in the very best of health, and good luck, as it leaves me here.

Your loving brother,
AMBROSE.

BIBLE AND FRENCH COIN SAVED HIS LIFE

Pte. Albert Brown of Ottawa Thinks Germans Will Soon be Pushed Out Out of Belgium.

A rather peculiar wish is expressed in a letter which Mrs. Harry Brown, of Ottawa, has received from her son, Private Albert Brown, when he says that he spent last Christmas in a hospital and would not mind doing so again this Christmas. This is an indication that the soldiers find the hospitals quite comfortable.

The letter, in part, reads: "Dear Mother: I have not received a letter from you for over a month, but it is no fault of yours for I know that you write me once a week. The mail must be held up at the battalion headquarters for me, I expect my mail every day.

"I spent last Christmas and New Year's in the hospital, and should not mind doing so this year. This is a fine hospital here and we are used the very best. We get good eatables, and we have good spring beds. It seems quite a change to have a bed after being so long without one. We are in tents holding 20 beds each, so you can see a fellow has not very much chance of getting lonesome.

"This is not a Canadian hospital, but that does not make any difference, for there are a lot of Canadians here and a great many 'Imperials' in the Canadian hospitals. No. 3 Canadian General Hospital is just across the road from here. I have not been over there yet but I will go soon, as I knew some of the doctors and sisters there. I met quite a few in England. My arm is all better and is just as good as ever. I am lucky to have no ill effects from shrapnel which is so full of poison that it sometimes leaves a very bad wound.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

"I must tell you how a bunch of papers, a French coin and a Bible saved my life. I had some pictures and papers in my pay-book in my upper left hand pocket. There was also a French coin and my Bible in the same pocket. When I was going down on the train I went to show the boys some of my pictures, when I discovered that a small piece of shrapnel had entered, passed through the cover and the pages of my pay-book, tore the pictures and papers, cut through the coin and was lodged in my Bible. I have kept all the contents of the pocket, even the piece of shrapnel, and will send them all to you as soon as I can. You may keep them, for I might lose them.

"I consider them interesting souvenirs to keep.

"We are having bad weather now. It has been very rainy during the last few days, and it rains now nearly every day. It is not very cold weather, which does not start here for some time yet. I hope it keeps dry this winter for the trenches are not very pleasant in the wet weather. I know what they are like in the winter, for I have had a taste.

EXPRESSES CONFIDENCE.

"We were in that big 'scrap' at St. Eloi last winter and the mud was up to our waists. I shall never forget that battle. I suppose you have read all about the Somme battles? We are surely giving him the dickens, and he is going back farther ever day. I wish we could give him one good push back to Germany. It is coming and I do not think it will be many more weeks until he is right out of Belgium. He is crying now, and will be crying a lot more before the end. I will go back up there again and will have another chance at him. It makes us feel good to see him have to get out of the places that it took him nearly three years to build.

"I will be looking for a letter soon."

The letter is dated October 7th and is written from No. 1 Convalescent Camp, at Boulonge, France.

Y. M. C. A. WORK AMONG THE CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Several Military Representatives of the Association Occupied City Pulpits Yesterday and Gave Eloquent Descriptions of the Splendid Services Rendered.

A TYPICAL STORY

In a number of churches in the city yesterday military representatives of the Y.M.C.A. laid before the congregations in an eloquent and convincing manner the work that the Y.M.C.A. is doing among Canada's soldiers at the front and in training in Canada and in England. Capt. J. A. Knoale for ten years a Y.M.C.A. military representative gave most interesting addresses at George Street Methodist church in the morning and at Trinity church in the evening. Capt Rev. T. W. Jones, Canadian representative Y.M.C.A. spoke at Park Street Baptist church in the evening and Evangelist J. R. Andrew was a speaker at the Salvation Army Temple.

"Here is a typical story of Y.M.C.A. work at the front—the story of a Y. M. C. A. dugout Secretary who wouldn't do similar work under other circumstances for $1,000, but does it gladly to serve the boys in the army.

Close to the ruins of a city in Flanders, the name of which will ever be historic, in Canada on a high road incessantly swept by German shrapnel and torn by German shells, beyond the reach of the Belgian civilian, and where no woman or child is ever seen, stands a sandbag dugout, consecrated to the service of man through the 0th Brigade, Canadian Y.M.C.A. under the direction of Captain W. T. Tait.

In size it is 10 feet long, 7 feet wide, with a semi-circular roof which makes it possible for an average-height man to stand upright, protecting he keeps in the centre, and with an opening at the end, which serves for both window and door. Planks laid across empty boxes for a counter, and separate the "staff" of one, from the visitors, who are many.

The trade done here is unique, but contrary to all, accepted standards of business for instead of minimum expenditure per man being insisted upon, it is the maximum that is set, for no man is allowed to spend more than two pence. It is "simple life" in business for only two articles are sold, cocoa, one penny per cup, and biscuits one penny per packet, and the sales are limited to one of each per man. Thus the Y.M.C.A. principles, free writing material and reading matter are kept handy, and there is the inevitable gramaphone for loaning out to artillery and other isolated units.

How does the man in charge occupy his time? Well, here is the time table for yesterday—and fair sample: 1:30 a.m. call out of bed to give direction to a ration party looking for the trenches, 8:30 a.m. aroused by three men entering seeking shelter from falling shrapnel, 6 a.m. called up by 8 men, advance party of a battalion wanting a breakfast lunch, started the "Prime" going, dressed while the cocoa warmed up, and then served them the usual. Then cleaned his dug's regular work. During the day he served 300 soldiers, British, Canadian, French and Belgian with cocoa, washing 360 mugs, distributing paper etc. In the morning cleaned over pieces of dirt from a man's eye and in the afternoon afforded a man who going on leave facilities for a shave. Discussed war and religion, and countries and politics, with men of every shade of opinion, shady and otherwise. Such are some of the much varied activities of a "Dugout" Y.M. C.A.

In the course of the day he received both flattery and censure. One early visitor said, as he drank a much needed cup of cocoa. "This is certainly a fine piece of work, You men who are doing this should have a D.C.M." (he meant Distinguished Conduct Medal not District Court Martial). But the next would-be customer on being politely told that "we have no cigarettes" here, asked: "What the—are you here for then?" One complimentary customer, as a German shell bursts close by and rocked the dugout said: "I wouldn't stay here for $1,000 a month". "Neither would I" was the pointed reply of the man who is spending his days and nights in this place.

This is a brief sketch of the work being done at what is perhaps the most dangerous Y.M.C.A. centre in the world. Picturesque? It may be at a distance, but close at hand—Well, it takes the Grace of God to enable a man to wash 300 mugs every few hours, and still be cheerful with a most depressing environment. The man whom Captain Tait has put in charge and who "batches" in this lonesome and sinster spot is an ordained minister from the prairies of Saskatchewan, who believes that there should be passed a conscription act for ministers.

Outside the turf-covered dugout is the familiar triangle sign "Y.M. C.A." and the first week it was out up it received two rents from German shell splinters. These are honourable scars, for they endorse the now well-known legend "Y.M.C.A." on active service.—B. E. F.

A Y.M.C.A. Membership is a great investment. Yearly fees are, Boys 10 to 15 years, $3; Intermediates 16-18 years, $4; Senior $6; Business Men's Sustaining, $10. Activities are adapted to men of all ages. Join during the contest Nov. 20-30.

AMERICA PRESENTS 5 NEW COMPLAINTS ON UNDERSEA WAR

Germany Argues the Vessel Was an Armed Transport and Used Her Cannon.

BERLIN, Nov. 25.—A period of complications may again be impending in American relations with Berlin. Conduct of submarine warfare has brought forth an abundant crop of American inquiries, of which Mr. Joseph C. Grew, American Charge d'Affaires, recently has filed no less than ten, five of them to-day. Six remain to be answered, including the cases of the Marina, on board of which Americans appear to have been killed, and the Arabia, the sinking of which, the American government declares, appears to be inconsistent with the promises of the German government regarding the treatment of passenger steamships.

The United States bases its attitude in the case of the Arabia on the assumption that it was unarmed and torpedoed without warning, and is unable to see that there was adequate justification for forcing the passengers into the boats. Washington believes the submarine commander, on ascertaining that there were women and children on the decks, should have refrained from making an attack.

In the four cases in regard to which replies already have made Berlin was found to have fairly convincing answers, which it is believed may put quite a different aspect on affairs. It is declared here, for example, that according to the testimony of her own passengers the Arabia was armed and used her cannon; that the sea was smooth and that other vessels were near. It is argued that the Arabia, having on board a large number of coolie war workers, should be regarded as a transport.

WAR FORCES THUNDERER BACK TO 3 CENT PRICE

London, Nov. 15.—The price of the Times will be increased to 1 1-2 pence after November 20th, and other important daily newspapers probably will follow suit, says the Weekly Despatch. Owing to the cost of production, it adds, a number of leading newspapers are being conducted at very heavy losses.

WORK FOR HUNS OR GO AWAY

Choice of Antwerp Citizens—German Tyranny at its Worst in Belgium Now—Spirit of Revolt Has Been Awakened

London. — The Common Council of Antwerp has refused to deliver lists of the unemployed to the Germans. As a consequence, the Germans are now calling men of all classes to the police stations for examination. The men are given the choice of a German labor contract of three to six months or immediate deportation to Germany. An official letter has been sent to all burgomasters demanding lists of unemployed under penalty of deporting citizens of all classes to Germany.

SLAVERY THROUGH STARVATION.

Under the title, "The Agony of Belgium: How Slavery was Prepared with Starvation as a Weapon," The Times says that rigorous measures are in force to prevent personal communications from the invaded part of Belgium reaching England. The following article is by a neutral commercial agent who has just returned from Brussels where he lived for many years:

"A spirit of revolt has been awakened, which has grown stronger month after month, especially among the laboring classes. When the entire output of a boot factory was commandeered in behalf of the German soldiers the master was aggrieved and the workman exasperated. They realized that they were assisting the enemy by presenting him with men's boots.

METAL TRADES SUFFER.

"The metal engineering trades have suffered the worst of all. The great Cockerville works were taken over indiscriminately after the fall of Liege, and since then all of the iron and steel and electrical works in the valley of the Meuse have fallen into German hands. M. Rensen, the director of important angular steel works, who refused to conduct operations for the invader, was made a prisoner and sent to Germany. The machinery of the International Electrical Company, and of similar concerns, was carried across the Rhine. All the stocks of copper and brass and enormous quantities of tools, were commandeered, and thousands of skilled artisans were thrown out of work.

ENFORCED IDLENESS.

"The latest requisitions of the German tyrant include all of the leather belting in the country. Idleness is, therefore, forced upon the people. The German statement that the people prefer to be maintained on public charity, is untrue.

"Look, also, at what was done in the agricultural districts. The Germans took the whole crop of seeds. There was a plentiful potato crop but the bulk of it was sent to Germany. Latterly they have carried off all the cattle, oxen, sheep, cows; even goats. Every week a thousand animals are passing through Liege from the frontier. Now you will understand why starvation is driving these industrious and thrifty people to desperation."

SCOTTY GOT NINE; WANTED A DOZEN

A good story is told in a letter from a British officer serving in France. "A Boche plane, chased by a British plant, was descending rapidly just midway between our front line and his own, right over the centre of No-man's Land.

"Naturally the men in the trenches on both sides were wildly excited about yelling encouragement to their respective airmen. Seeing this, a pawky old Scot began making accurate, but leisurely target practice, carefully picking out Boches 40 or 50 yards apart from each other, so as not to give the show away too soon. He did pretty well, but was bitterly disappointed when the Boche's Archibald forced our plane to rise just as the Boche airman managed to jigger his machine somewhat into his own support lines, and the spectators took cover.

"'Och, no, not altogether so badly, surr,' says Scotty to his Platoon Commander, 'Ah managed to get nine o' the faukkins bodies; but Ah'd hoped for the round dozen!'"

NEW EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA TALKS OF PEACE ALREADY

LONDON, Nov. 27. — Emperor Charles of Austria has issued a proclamation to the Austro-Hungarians, declaring his inflexible decision to maintain the war until a "peace assuring the existence and development of the monarchy," according to a Vienna despatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam. The despatch says the proclamation was printed in a special edition of the Wiener Zeitung together with an autograph letter addressed to Premier Koerber. The letter announced that the new monarch had taken over the government and confirmed the Premier in his present functions. After paying homage to the late Emperor the proclamation said:

"I will continue to complete his work. I ascend his throne in a stormy time. Our aim has not yet been reached and the illusion of the enemy to throw down my monarchy and our allies is not yet broken. You know me to be in harmony with my peoples in my inflexible decision to continue the struggle until a peace assuring the existence and development of the monarchy is obtained. I will do all in my power to banish as soon as possible the horrors and sacrifices of war and to obtain peace as soon as the honour of our arms, the conditions of life of my countries and their allies and the defiance of our enemies will allow."

Advertising Benefits Purchasers

Only a child under five years of age could fail to see that the man who advertises persistently, intelligently and truthfully is saving the money of those who purchase from him—inasmuch as he is making it possible for the SAME organization the same equipment, to do many times the amount of business that it would do without advertising. And he can take for himself 3, 4 or 5 per cent. profit on his sales—instead of 40 per cent. as the non-advertiser must do—and with his small percentage of profit he can become an infinitely richer man.

Nothing is more foolish than the fast-disappearing belief that when people buy goods they pay for the advertising." They do nothing of the kind. The advertising pays for part of the goods and makes it possible to deliver them cheaper.

09th Battalion Band Coming Home

LINDSAY, Nov. 27.—For some time reports have been in circulation to the effect that the 109th Battalion Band was on its way home to assist in recruiting in connection with the 255nd Battalion. An announcement is now been made that the organization has sailed for home, and is expected to arrive in Canada in the course of a few days.

Canadian General Dividend Increase

A DIVIDEND INCREASE

Directors of the Canadian General Electric Company Saturday place the common stock on an 8 per cent. basis by declaring a dividend for the quarters 2 3-4 per cent, payable January 1 to shareholders of record December 15. In the three previous quarters 1 3-4 per cent. was paid quarterly, or 5 1-4 per cent. in all. The 2 3-4 payment brings the total for the year up to 8, which will be the rate in future.

King Orders All Eligible Men On Staffs To Front

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The Times understands that the King has ordered every unmarried man of military age on the Royal staffs at Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Balmoral and Sandingham, whatever his employment, to report for service with the colours.

At the beginning of the war the King released as many men as could then be spared for service at the front, and under the Dermy scheme, all the remainder attested. The present action further depletes the Royal establishments.

WON'T DRIVE BELGIANS UP TO ALLIED CANNON

LONDON, Nov. 25.—A copy of a proclamation issued by order of the German commandant at Antonig, Belgium, giving instructions to workmen, has been received here. The proclamation says that after receiving their wages which will be workshops or on farms, in the fields given, workmen must feed themselves and adds:

"The German authority notifies the people that civilians must be forced to work if there are insufficient volunteer workmen, for example for work in factories saw mills, and in the building or railways or roads. The population will never be forced to labor on works exposed to continual fire. In case of refusal to work, the person so refusing will be condemned to penalties of a fine, imprisonment and enlistment in the prison battalion of civilian workmen with reduced rations. The communities may also be punished, either by limitations of trade or the imposition of a fine or taxes, etc."

CHILDREN OF ALL AGES

When sick the newborn babe or the growing child will find prompt relief through the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They are absolutely safe for all children and never fail to banish any of the minor ills from which little ones suffer. Concerning them, Mrs. Arthur Sheasly, Adanac, Sask., writes —"I have used Baby's Own Tablets and think they are splendid for children of all ages." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HAVE MERRY MUSIC FOR THE MERRY XMAS TIME

Will the home know the joy of music on Christmas morn? What a pleasant surprise to rouse the youngsters with the strains of some pretty melody. Then again, the world's greatest artists will be your companions on the long winter evenings—surely it is worth while to here the voices of Melba, Caruso, McCormack, Tetrazzini, Homer, Ferrar, Culp, Hempel, etc., that sing for the Victrola only.

Facts That Are Exclusive Victor Factors

The standard talking machine in the country.

Victor Victrola users are our best testimonials. Ask them.

Have recently placed on the market a needle that will play 400 times without changing. Four hundred times is its limit as it wears down to a small point. Something must wear—better the needle than the record.

No other machine has the graceful lines that characterizes the Victrola.

No other company present such a range of records; new numbers are issued every month.

The Victrola is easily operated; once you place the needle on the record your work is done; any meddling is unnecessary. Caruso's voice and expression cannot be improved upon.

SAVING A FAMILY

How the Canadian Patriotic Fund Kept the Wolf from the Door of One Home

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—A pathetic case of want that recently came to light in Montreal strikingly emphasizes the urgency of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and the splendid work entered upon by this national organization in the interests of soldiers' dependents.

A man who enlisted for overseas service in the British Fusiliers left a wife and four children, who were soon reduced to extreme poverty. The mother was able to earn $6.00 a week "charing" and the oldest girl, a mere child, secured employment at $5 a week. When found by officers of the Fund, the unfortunate family were living in a hovel, the children barefooted, delicate, underfed and without clothing.

The Government payments were at once expedited through the Imperial Pension Office, Ottawa. When clothing was provided it had to be piled in corners on the floor, most of the furniture, including bureaus and stands having long since been sold for food. The unfortunates were reduced to two chairs, the family being compelled to take turns in sitting down to their meals. Four persons were sleeping in one bed and one girl on a sofa. Medical attendance was provided for two children, who were in a very run-down condition due to adenoids and tonsilitis.

A Victorian Order nurse was placed in attendance and invalid diet provided. A better home was secured, arrangements made for water to be turned on, a gas leak stopped and broken windows repaired. All debts were paid, and the family placed on the list for "home baskets" provided by visitors. An improvement was at once noticeable in the general health of the children, due to proper nourishment and warmer clothing. Within six months thirty-eight visits were made to this family, a fact which illustrates in a most concrete form the character of the work being done by the Patriotic Fund.

Memorial Service In George Street Church

Stirring Addresses by the Rev. R. G. Peever and Mr. Duncan Walker--Heroes Are Not the Product of Any Special Age or Race.

BATTLEFIELD HERO'SM

"Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us.

Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

With these words, from Matthew, 12th Chapter, first and second verses, the Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., on Sunday evening, prefaced a sermon that was given in George Street Methodist Church.

The occasion was a memorial service, held in honour of the late Lieut. A. R. Ackerman, Sergeant H. G. Edmison, Lance-Coroporal Harold Losey, Pte. James English and Pte. Norman Darling. The name of the late Sergeant A. McIntosh was also referred to. Sergeant McIntosh frequently attended George Street Church, although he was really a member of St. Paul's Church.

"This is an hour of triumph and worthy appreciation," said the Rev. Mr. Peever. This is not time for a balcony view of life. These young men, who have laid down their lives, were not of that sort. Let us not be mere onlookers. Let us dedicate ourselves to the cause and suffer as Christ suffered. We must stand in the arena of life and be participants in the struggle. The young men whose names are before us to-night were not possessed of the mercantile view of life. They left home and material pleasures and made a choice of death, so that the Empire might be saved. They entered the conflict that we might be free. They possessed the true spirit of patriotism, which is willingness to suffer for cause and country. Their deeds bear witness to the miracles of God. They emphasized the principle enunciated by Christ: "He that loseth his life for My sake and the Gospel, shall find it!"

These men are not dead, said the speaker. They will live in their deeds and will live in our lives."

Mr. Duncan Walker.

Mr. Duncan Walker, principal of the Normal School, followed with a brief address in which he eulogized the noble character of the young men whose names were inscribed on the honour of the Church. "We meet here to-night, said Mr. Walker, to pay tribute to the memory of six members of this church, who, in the vigour of youth, have made the supreme sacrifice. They came from various homes and held different ranks in the fighting forces of the Empire. In our tribute we make no distinction. Heroes are not a product of any special age or race. What a priceless debt we owe to that glorious band of martyrs who have fought and died that the standard of life might be raised. Every age has its hero, real or imaginary. We cannot live without him. Of all forms of heroism that displayed upon the battlefield commands our greatest respect. Our heroes on the battlefields of Europe have paid the price, 'Greater love hath no man than this.' They sleep in soldiers' graves. Their names may be forgotten, but that for which they fought and died will ever remain with us. Their sacrifice has not been in vain. Their task is done.

LIEUT. M. BOYD BELIEVED KILLED

Enlisted in Lindsay With 45th Reg. in 1914.

BOBCAYGEON, November 27.—Mrs. (Dr.) H. O. Boyd, received a cablegram that her son, Lieut. R. Boyd, is reported missing, with the probability of being killed. Lieut. Boyd enlisted with the 45th Victoria Regiment in October, 1914, and was stationed in Lindsay until June, 1915. He was promoted to the rank of sergeant, and when at Barriefield was quartermaster-sergt. in the 59th. In the fall of 1915 he was given a commission with the 80th Battalion, and spent the winter in Picton with his company. He crossed over to England with the 80th in May, 1916, and was later attached to the 74th and being found a proficient officer was sent over to France in August, 1916, with a reinforcement to the 50th battalion, where he has been ever since. He has been in the thick of the fighting on the western front and if the report is true, another excellent young man of the village has paid the supreme sacrifice for King and country. His eldest brother, Lieut. H. O. Boyd, was killed in action in Mesopotamia last May. Dr. H. O. Boyd, his father, left with the 109th battalion as medical officer. We extend our sincere sympathies with the bereaved ones.

PATRIOTIC FUND'S NEW PRESIDENT

The Duke of Devonshire Becomes Chief Executive of Canadian Patriotic Fund.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—Th new Governor-General, the Duke of Devonshire, has manifested his interest in the work being carried on by the Canadian Patriotic Fund by consenting to become the President of the Fund. This position was held by the Duke's predecessor, the Duke of Connaught, from the inception of the fund until his parture from Canada and the present position of the Fund in National confidence and financial strength is largely due to his inspiration and personal devotion to its interests. The new Governor-General evidently proposes to take the same active part in promoting the welfare of his great national undertaking.

Making Both Ends Meet

Christmas Dinner and Holiday Luxuries Are Away Up in Prices This Year

There is little chance of any reduction in food prices between now and Christmas and in fact during December higher prices for necessities may prevail in Peterborough.

This is the opinion held by a majority of the local merchants. As far as could be ascertained the opinion of the merchants seemed to be that flour, butter, eggs, cheese and bacon would be the commodities that would be most likely to advance. It was no anticipated by many that meat would jump to any great extent from its present basis and among other household necessities the local merchants seemed inclined to think that sugar will drop some. The good wives of Peterborough have evidently done without making their usual large quantities of preserves this autumn as, according to a large wholesaler the demand for sugar has not been anything like that of previous years at this time.

Christmas Dinner Dear.

It is also going to cost considerable more to celebrate Christmas and New Years this season. The many imported delicacies and spices that go so far in making the festive board a cheerful and tasteful one on these glad occasions, are rising in price so far that they give promise of soon being out of sight. In this case the importers state that this is because of lack of freight facilities and that the goods are next to unpossible in some cases to get delivery of in Canada.

HOW TO GAIN FLESH

Remarkable Statement of a Woman Who Was Nothing but Skin and Bones

Laugh and grow fat is a homely saying, but Mrs. Elizabeth L. Morris of Hammond, La., tells of a more reliable method. She says:

"I cannot say enough in praise of Vinol, for it saved my life. I was weak, nervous, run-down, could not sleep, was unfit for work and was nothing but skin and bones. Three doctors had all failed to help me. One day I saw Vinol advertised, took courage and bought a bottle, and it soon made me feel better. I continued its use and such a change! I have regained my strength, flesh and health, am perfectly well, and the doctor was surprised to see such a change in me in such a short time." Elizabeth Morris, Hammond, La.

The reason Vinol proved such a wonderful strength creator in Mrs. Morris' case was because of the best cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, combined in a pure native tonic wine, which makes Vinol a most wonderful tonic.

DEATH BREAKS LINK WITH STORIED PAST

Mrs. de Lothiniere de Harwood Died at Vaudreuil at Age of 92—Was a Cousin of Mrs. A. D. Le Clair

The Montreal Gazette of a recent date, gives the following interesting particulars, in connection with its obituary of the late Mrs. de Lothiniere le Harwood, of Vaudreuil, Quebec. Local interest is given this event by the fact that deceased was a first cousin of Mrs. A. D. Le Clair, mother of Mr. L. J. LeClair, of 317 Reid street, this city, and who is now residing at the home of her son. The Gazette says:

"Of the old French noblesse living in Canada at the time of the conquest by England, there is since yesterday no descendant who talked with men and women alive in the year that Quebec fell. The last was Marie Angelique Lefebure de Bellefeuille, widow of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Antoine Chartier de Lotbiniere de Harwood, seigneur of Vaudreuil and deputy adjutant-general and her death yesterday at Vaudreuil, at the age of 92 years, seems to those who knew her to have removed the only Canadian in whom lived everything characteristic of the old French nobility. She had rare distinction of manner and even up to the time of her death the brightness, grace and charm of the age from which she came was evident in her manners and her conversation. The family from which she came has been prominent in Canadian affairs for more than two centuries. Mrs. Harwood's father was Antoine Lefebure de Bellefeuille, seigneur of St. Eustache and adjutant-general of Lower Canada, and her mother was a McGillis, sister of the late John Mc Gillis, laird of Williamstown.

Founder of Three Rivers.

"The de Bellefeuilles and Hertels were among the original founders of Three Rivers. One of the de Bellefeuilles moved in 1680 to Acadie, where his son, the Chevalier Lefebure de Bellefeuille, was seigneur of Pabos on the Baie de Chaleurs, commandant for the King and sub-delegate of the Intendant Bigot. He was quite wealthy, but after the British conquest the British fleet destroyed most of the fishing boats from which he drew his revenue, and he sold out his seigneurie to Governor Haldimand for a song. It ruined him, and he returned to Three Rivers. He had married Miss Hertel de Cournoyer. His son, Antoine, fought in the Revolutionary War of 1775 for the British, afterwards settling at St. Eustache, where he married the daughter of Lambert-Dumont, seigneur de Saint Eustache. This was Antoine de Bellefeuille, the grandfather of Mrs. Harwood.

Mrs. Harwood's husband represented Vaudreuil when Confederation was consummated. At the time he made a speech in favour of Confederation, which drew upon him the special commendation of Sir George Cartier. He was the head of the de Lothiniere family, and was a grandson of the last Marquis de Lothiniere. No children survive him. Mr. Edouard de Bellefeuille, K.C., is her cousin, and among her nephews are Dr. Lotbiniere Harwood, Mr. C. A. Harwood, K.C., Lieut.-Col. Reginald Harwood, Mr. A. de Lery Macdonald, and many others of a younger generation."

"ROUMANIA" SUBJECT OF EXCELLENT PAPER AT SOUTH CENTRAL SCHOOL

The Women's Teachers' Guild were entertained at a Roumanian Tea at the South Central School, on Friday. During the evening the following excellent paper on Roumania was given

"Roumania is a little country of 53,000 square miles, with a population of less than 8,000,000, or 140 persons to the square mile. It lies in the half embrace of the Carpathian Mountains. Like most of southern Europe, it owes its first civilization to the Phoenician traders. They brought ideas of progressive trade to Macedonia and Rome. As these states prospered they began to extend their territories and, in time, Rome controlled the Danube Valley. Fertility and natural fortifications made the land tempting to the emigrants until the banks of the Danube became only a lesser Italy. Traces of the Roman language are easily recognized in the speech of the people in isolated parts of Roumania to-day. The Roumanians are very proud of their Roman ancestry and take every opportunity of emphasizing it. By the middle of the 3rd century the country was too proud to escape the coveteous notice of the Goths, and at the first sign of the weakening of Rome they overran a great part of the land. Closely following them came the Huns. For ten centuries the Roumanians lived a sort of wandering, pastoral life in the Carpathians, always waiting for an opportunity to reclaim their old homes. Legends of their glorious past were told by father to son, which kept alive a burning patriotism, and an absorbing desire to repossess the fertile valleys. In course of time they had their wish. By the Treaty of Paris, 1856, two principalities, Moldavia and Wallachia, were recognised by the powers of Europe. Each was to elect its own king. By a rather unexpected turn of affairs both provinces elected the same king. He proved so unpopular that he was forced to abdicate after ten years, but he had brought into effect the coalition of the two principalities, and the Modern Roumania was the result. His successor was Prince Carol, of the House of Hohenzollern. About this time Roumania threw off her dependence on Turkey and called on Europe to recognize her neutrality. Shortly after, she entered into an alliance with Russia, giving Russia permission to pass through her country in time of war. But she was forced to give up Bessarabia, getting instead the small province at the mouth of the Danube—Dobrudja. But the Roumanians will never be satisfied until Bessarabia again becomes part of their country. In it are over a million Roumanian people.

The bulk of the people of Roumania belong to the peasant class, for there are comparatively few cities, and most of them are small. Two dissimilar types are found among the Roumanians: One, fair-haired, florid and blue-eyed; the other, dark, resembling the Italian. The average peasant is not given to the kind of thrift which leads him often to the savings bank. They have striking superstitions and primitive ways of looking at things in general. It is regarded as worthy of honour to be the head of a large family. Though their death rate is high they still have an annual excess of 116,000 births over deaths. The people are great for neighbourhood gatherings, and always there is a kettle of cornmeal mush and baked pumpkin and potatoes and pop-corn for the occasion. All hands join in combing, carding and spinning the household supply of wool or flax, while their tongues are equally busy, gossiping. The more uncivilized people are picturesque, indeed. About 1-3 of the country is inhabited by semi-civilized shepherds. In the winter the shepherd leads his flock down into the valleys, and in the summer, up into the Carpathians. He sleeps under the starry sky and lives alone. He wears his hair and beard long and has a coarse white woollen shirt and long mantles of wool-covered sheep-skin, the wrong side out, are twice the length of his legs, and fit with numerous wrinkles. His shirt hangs tunic-like over the trousers and is tied at the waist with a red belt. The Lowlanders wear high conical caps of lambs' wool or felt, but the highlanders prefer low, round hats.

Few peasants cling so tenaciously to their national costumes as do the Roumanians; white is the prevailing note, but it is generally gay with embroidery.

When a young Roumanian peasant lad's thoughts turn to love, and his mind begins to include forced marriage, he goes to his mother with his tale, rather than to his sweetheart. He confides in his mother, but not in his father. He perhaps feels that his father has passed the alarm realities of life so long that he has forgotten that he ever was a boy. The mother acts as ambassador to the father, and, if he can be induced to look with favor upon the young lover's choice, he calls in two of his best friends, and tells them of his son's dreams, and asks them to accompany the said son to the house of his sweetheart. Maybe the girl, herself, has not revealed to the youth a single hint of his love, but even so, as she sees the party near the house, she suspects the object of the visit. If it happens to be winter, the father of the girl invites them in, and, unaware of their mission, gives some hint as to his attitude by the way he looks after the fire. If he keeps it burning brightly, they know he is favourable; if he speculates, he is of open mind; when it goes out entirely, they know there is no use arguing. The boy's spokesman tells what a good man he is, how industrious he is, how good he is to his sister, etc. Finally some neighbor's flower is painted on the walls of a cottage which is the home of a girl of marriageable age.

The Roumanian peasant has a saying that he must dance on Sunday to keep the creak out of his bones on Monday. Most of the dancers are at the public house. The young men of the village gather there. There is very little drinking except on Sundays—that is the day of the tipsy man. When the girls reach a marriageable age, and have been sufficiently instructed in the household arts, they are allowed to attend these dances as participants. "She dances at the dance" is the peasant way of saying she is eligible for marriage.

The Roumanians are a deeply religious people. Five and one-half millions belong to the Orthodox Greek Church.

The peasant is much given to superstition and he has a sign for everything. If you have money in your pocket when you see the new moon, you will not "go broke." If a child sees its image in a mirror before it is three years old it will become a victim of the falling sickness, which will send it falling through life. If a sparrow takes a bath in the dust, it will be fine weather, etc.

There are about twenty thousand Jews in Roumania. The Roumanians treat the Jew very harshly. If the Jew has lived there for forty years he is an alien still. Jews are not allowed to be bankers, druggists, government officials, land owners, or tobacconists. But she does not regard him as an alien when she needs men for her army. Then he is a Roumanian from the crown of his head to the sole of his foot.

Buildings of more than one storey are very rare, even in the cities. The streets are very wide, and the many boulevards use up a large amount of space.

Although an act of 1864 endowed Roumania with free and compulsory education, the services of the children are deemed so necessary that the schools are slimly attended. If a boy does not intend to become a priest, the need of an education is not apparent. The institution that has attracted universal sympathetic interest is the school for the blind, endowed and protected by the poet-queen, Elizabeth, better known by her pen-name, Carmen Sylva. Her life was saddened by the death of her only child. When looking about to see if there were any others as unfortunate as herself she became interested in some blind children, so she equipped a model school and found some respite from her loneliness in brightening the lives of those doomed to unending night. She spends much of her time in reading to the pupils.

Roumania is the most prosperous state in the Balkans. In the foothills of the mountains are mile after mile of vineyards, producing excellent wine, most of which, however, is consumed at home. The great plains afford admirable pasture lands, where great quantities of sheep, cattle and swine are raised. It is essentially an agricultural state. The chief products are: Wheat, maize, cereals, plums, peaches, walnuts, apples, pears and grapes. Salt mining and petroleum raising and distillation are among the principal industries. The petroleum beds are a great national asset, particularly as the Roumanians claim that their product has a higher percentage of the pure oil than is found in the American or Russian wells. The industry has been developed to such an extent that Roumania stands fifth on the list of petroleum-producing countries in the world. The fisheries in the Black Sea and in the Danube are of great value. Roumania is also far in advance of the other Balkan countries in means of travel. Fast express trains run daily the length and breadth of the State. It is a noticeable fact that only one railway connects Russia and Roumania, while Hungary and Roumania are connected wherever commerce warrants. Ports on the Danube collect and ship the produce of the country to various ports. It has also a fast Roumanian steamship line.

The kingdom is a constitutional monarchy, having a Parliament of two houses. The Senate consists of one hundred and twenty members, elected for eight years. They must be worty years of age and have an annual income of eight-en hundred dollars. The Chamber of Deputies consists of one hundred and eighty-three members, elected for four years. They must be at least twenty-five years of age.

Military service is compulsory and universal. Frontier defences have been constructed, and the nucleus of a navy has been established on the Danube and Black Sea.

The entrance of Roumania into the war on the side of the Allies will materially shorten the war. Roumania is in the war for the spoils. It is simply a matter of bargaining. Had she not thought the Allies were going to win in the present struggle, she would, no doubt, have retained their attitude of not the benevolent neutrality. Their one great passion is a greater Roumania, that shall include Transylvania and Bessarabia, and it is natural for them, like other races, to indulge in dreams of a greater day. Yet the fulfillment of their ambitions seems remote beyond possibility, because they are not of the nature to make friends with their unlike neighbors.

This paper was prepared by Miss Norman of the South Central School staff.

PRETTY SCENE ON THE GRAVEL ROAD

A well executed half-tone picture of the pretty rural spot on the gravel road, near Carver's, about a mile and a half outside the city, appears in this month's Ford Times. The charm of this road scene is enhanced by a Ford motor car passing through under the arch formed by the spreading branches of trees and foliage which envelop the road.

Two Week-end Drunks Paid $27.50 Into Court For Their Spree

With two week-end drunks each paying $10 and costs of $3.75 into the Police Court this morning, it would scarcely be called a "blue Monday," except for the young men, both of them rather prominent about town.

The first of them was a Concession Street resident. Saturday night he left home about 7.30 o'clock, with a bottle of Montreal whiskey, which he had drained before reaching the river into which he threw the empty bottle.

"I hope you got ten dollars' worth of fun out of it," said the Magistrate.

"It's the last ten dollars I'll spend that way," was the reply.

The whiskey was bought a month ago. Witness drank it all. It was a "loner." About ten o'clock this young man had a lively "jag," and was gathered in by Sergt. Kidd.

Sunday Night.

About three weeks ago a Sherbrooke street young man developed a cold, and sent to Montreal for first aid, in the form of six bottles of whiskey. Sunday night the cold still called for treatment and the last bottle was called up to attack it. The young man had finished the other five and remarked that his father had no knowledge of the presence of the whiskey in the house. Sunday night, about 7 o'clock, he loaded up with about one-third of the final bottle, then hitched up his horse and went for a drive.

About 10 o'clock Sergt. Reid came upon a horse and buggy aimlessly wandering about the C. P. R. freight yards, bumping over rails, with the driver dead drunk. It was the Sherbrooke Street young man, knocked out by the whiskey which he had taken to knock out only his cold.

"You ought to be better by this time," remarked Chief Thompson.

"It's a lot looser this morning."

"You've got enough left for another drunk."

"Not for mine, Chief," was the answer.

"They all say that."

"This is the first and last time I've ever been here," said the young man.

Magistrate Dumble knew his father and told the young man he was surprised by this case. "It's an absolute waste of money," said His Worship, "a terrible mistake."

"Ten dollars, to be paid in ten days," was the fine imposed.

Chief Thompson pointed out that the Act required payment forthwith, but His Worship made an exception, and allowed the ten days for payment.

HERE FROM AUSTRALIA

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jones and their little sons George and Samuel, have arrived in the city from Perth, West Australia and will spend the winter with Mrs. Jones' mother, Mrs. McKinlay, Aylmer street. Mrs. Jones is grieved that she is not able to meet all the members of her family, as her father died last Spring, her brother Samuel was killed at the front, where he was a member of the 2nd Battalion and two other brothers, Pte. Willie McKinlay of the O.M.R. and Pte. Frank McKinlay of the 93rd are both overseas. Mrs. Jones is a native of Scotland, while her husband was born in Wales, but has lived practically all his life in the United States and Australia.

Speaking of the conditions in Australia to the Examiner, Mr. Jones stated that the country was pretty well depleted of men. Only those who are medically unfit for military service are allowed to leave the country.

NOVEL FINANCING BY ALLIED NATIONS

Short-Term Bills Being Issued by France and Britain.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—J. Pierpont Morgan and Co. announced that the British and French treasuries have each authorized the sale in this market of a limited amount of short-term bills running at various maturities from thirty days to six months. This is a novel form of financing by Great Britain and her allies in this country, as heretofore loans have been placed for fixed amounts. The treasury bills will be payable in dollars in this city. They will probably be available for purchase on or about December 1, at rates based upon the money market conditions, probably running from 3 3-4 to 4 1-2 per cent. It is understood, however, that the amount of the bills will be comparatively small.

A Talk on Rheumatism

Telling How to Actually Cure This Common and Painful Malady

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism, who wants to be cured, not merely relieved—but actually cured. The most the rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or liniment ever did or can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when this poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new, rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. The truth of these statements has been proved in thousands of cases throughout Canada and the following cure is a striking instance. | Mr. Henry Smith, St. Jerome, Que., says: "For upwards of a year I was a victim of rheumatism in a most painful form. The trouble was located in my legs and for a long time I was so bad that I could not walk. The sufferings which I endured can only be imagined by those who have been similarly afflicted. Doctor's treatment did not help me and then I began trying other remedies, but with no better results. Finally I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and although I had begun to lose faith in medicine, I finally decided to give the pills a trial. I am very grateful now that I did so, for after taking eight boxes of the pills the trouble completely disappeared. I was free from pain and could walk as well as ever I did in my life. I have since taken the pills occasionally as a precautionary measure, and I cannot speak too highly in their favor."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all the troubles due to weak, watery blood or broken down nerves. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail postpaid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Kitchener's Interpreter To Marry in Detroit

Right-hand Man to Warrior in Soudan Weds Nurse.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—Michael Galati, one of the most nearest to Lord Kitchener during the Soudan campaign, and who acted as his right-hand man and special interpreter to that great military genius, will be married on Sunday evening to Miss Angela Phidaki, a Red Cross nurse, who has just returned from the battle line in Macedonia. The wedding will be unique in the history of Detroit, in that hundreds of guests, speaking twelve different languages, will attend the festivities at 174 College Grove.

Nine years ago Galati came to America and settled in New York, coming to Detroit two years ago. Since his arrival in America he was in communication with the late British chief and received a number of letters, which he cherishes. For the past two years he has been engaged as interpreter at the Ford plant.

Rev. Geo. Getdidis, the pastor of the Greek Orthodox Church, will officiate at the services.

Chatham Is Asked For $60,000 To Be Levied In Taxes

Canadian Patriotic Fund Executive Makes Request — Wealthy People Evade—Issue Debentures and Assess Citizens Proportionately.

CHATHAM, Nov. 27.—The Chatham City Council will be asked to contribute the sum of $60,000 to the Canadian Patriotic Fund next year, the amount to be raised on debentures to be spread over a period of ten years. A resolution to the above effect was passed at a meeting of the executive of the Chatham branch.

It was clearly shown that there was a certain class of wealthy citizens who had not subscribed to the extent they should and in some cases not at all, in campaigns, to raise funds in the past. It was felt that raising money by assessment was the only equitable way of sharing the responsibility by citizens. In addition, a personal canvas for funds will be made of the citizens who are not assessed.

To-night the city council will also be asked to contribute $4,000 to the British and Canadian Sailors' Relief fund.

7TH. ANNIVERSARY OF THE CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART

Day Spent in Special Services —of Thanksgiving—Bishop O'Brien Addressed Congregation in the Evening.

REV. DEAN McCOLL'S SERMON.

The seventh anniversary of the dedication of the church of the Sacred Heart celebrated yesterday was marked by a large number of the congregation receiving holy communion in the morning, by adoration of the Blessed Sacrament throughout the afternoon and by Pontifical vespers in the evening. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was unable to attend in the morning because of his increased duties at the Cathedral, arising out of the scarcity of priests. At the conclusion of vespers he addressed the congregation congratulating the parish upon its continued progress. Rev. J. J. O'Brien had announced in the morning that there had been forty-three thousand communions during the past year, an evidence, Bishop O'Brien said that the spiritual life of the people was strong and flourishing. The anniversary should be a special occasion of gratitude and thanksgiving to God for his many favours and blessings. In a year of many special demands the church debt had been satisfactorily reduced, the annual social accounting for a goodly share of the reduction. His Lordship remarked that in a parish in which the devotion of the people is so apparent there should be vocations and he exhorted the parents to encourage the children who exhibited the special sign of God's design in that direction. During a passing reminiscence Bishop O'Brien remarked that the years since the opening of the church had not been without their difficulties; but these were outweighed by the happiness the sacraments had brought to to the families of the parish. Children had been baptised and confirmed, the sacrifice of the mass had been celebrated daily, marriages had been blest and the dying had received the last sacrament and His Lordship hoped for the day when the Church of the Sacred Heart would have some of its boys ordained to the priesthood. He commended to the people the practice of monthly communion, especially the first Friday devotion and urged more frequency where possible.

The vesper psalms and hymns were splendidly sung by the choir, solos being taken by Miss K. Masterson, Miss J. Collins, Mrs. H. Laplante and Mr. Ed. Bartley. Bishop O'Brien's desire for the broader practice of congregational singing was behind his suggestion that the Benediction hymns should be sung in that manner as at the Cathedral where it has already been adopted.

SERMON ON FAITH.

The vesper sermon was preached by Rev. Dean McColl on the text—"So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God", St. Paul to the Romans 10th Chapter, 17th verse.

By the use of reason we learn the truths of science which Dean McColl illustrated by examples which he said forces themselves upon the intellect. A man would have to stultify his reason if he did not admit that the whole was greater than its part. But there are many things that cannot be known by the use of reason. We can know little about the world beyond ours. Supernatural truths are learned by faith and by divine faith, as firmly believe everything God has revealed to us. We also have human faith in our fellowmen. This is necessary for the working of the things of this world. When we go to the physician we believe in his honesty and ability and the child at school must have faith in its teacher. We do not regard it as an indignity, nor as degrading to our intellect to believe other men. We feel honoured to receive learning from others.

DIVINE FAITH

Divine faith is a higher virtue than this. While men may deceive us we know that God cannot. Hence we believe without doubting. Without revelation, we should know something about God. Looking at the world around us, we know that its natural wonders come from a great power and intellect and thereby we come to some knowledge of God. History tells us that two thousand years ago lived a man, the most wonderful the world ever saw, the most talked of, and who left the greatest number of followers. Even those who have pretended not to believe in His divinity, speak of Him as the best type of humanity, and as a preacher of the highest morality. But we know that Jesus Christ is God. As Nicodemus said, "He did the things that only God could do. He restored sight to the blind, raised the dead to life, calmed the storm at sea, by His very works proved Him self God and finally arose from the dead. Reasonable beings cannot deny the divinity of Christ and we know that when Jesus Christ speaks, God speaks. Hence we believe the truths Christ revealed as God's truths. When we believe what Christ taught, we have divine faith.

Proceeding, Dean McColl said that history went farther telling us that Christ established the Kingdom of His church upon earth. Christ said that those who heard His church heard Him. If the Catholic was not divine it would have been destroyed ages ago. "We have divine faith" Dean McColl said, "We believe without doubting all the truths Christ revealed and He cannot deceive nor be deceived. That is the certainty upon which our faith is founded. The greatest dignity God could confer upon us was to enlighten us by His revelation. Faith expands our knowledge and perfects our intellect."

Implements that have been used for some time should be inspected and the worn parts adjusted or replaced.

CAPT. SUTHERLAND IS RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Capt. Jas. T. Sutherland, of Kingston, at present on active service, has been re-elected president of the Ontario Hockey Association, by acclamation. Nominations closed on Saturday for O. H. A. officers and the custom of giving the president two years in office was observed. With Capt. Sutherland as the front the duties of his office will devolve upon the first vice-president, Sheriff J. F. Paxton, of Whitby, who has been re-elected by acclamation.

Other offices were also returned without an election, the complete list being as follows:

President—Capt. Jas. T. Sutherland, Kingston.

1st Vice-President— Sheriff J. F. Paxton, Whitby.

2nd Vice-President—R. M. Glover, Peterborough.

A.A.U. of C. Convener—Francis Nelson, Toronto.

Treasurer—Dwight J. Turner, Midland.

Secretary—W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

Executive Committee—A. E. Copeland, Midland; Geo. B. Dawson, Sarnia; Frank Hyde, Woodstock; C. L. Macnab, Orillia.

Past President Chas. Farquharson, of Stratford, and life member J. Ross Robertson, of Toronto, are also members of the executive, together with two members to be appointed later by the acting president.

New clubs desiring admission to the O.H.A. should send in their applications to the secretary before the annual convention, so that they can be passed upon by the Executive Committee the night before, and arrangements made for the grouping of the clubs. All clubs have been requested to send delegates to the annual convention, as there are a number of important subjects to be discussed, including the proposal to abolish body-checking, which is sure to be keenly debated.

Nov. 30.—George Street vs. St. Andrew's.

Dec. 1.—Trinity vs. St. John's.

The rest of the schedule has already been drafted and will be published as soon as it is approved by the executive.

All series are played on the Y.M.C.A. alleys and start at 7:45 p.m. sharp

BOWLING

W. D. Bishop won last week's prize with a total score of 617, the individual games being 208, 231, 180.

The Printers meet the Business Men to-morrow night in a League game.

The men of St. Andrew's church who would like to enjoy a game of bowling are asked to be present at the Y.M.C.A. bowling alleys to-night at 8 p.m.

Big Cut Coming In Baseball Salaries

The most important question over which the National League magnates will ponder when they meet here early next month will be the players' salaries. That a big cut is coming in the pay envelopes of the high-priced players is admitted by all the club owners, and when the next baseball season comes round the market for baseball talent will be normal again and all the high salaries brought about by the Federal League invasion will have disappeared.

Most of the contracts, which were for terms of two or three years, which were practically forced upon the club owners by the players a few seasons ago, expired with the end of last season, and new contracts will be signed before the season opens in April. Many of the club owners faced a situation during the Federal League reign which gave them no other alternative than to concede to the players' demands or lose their services. Even to players who did not demand more money, the club owners gave increased salaries, fearing that they would jump.

The baseball folks still have losses to make up which date back to the Federal League war. While baseball came back to its own to a certain extent last season, there are still many old scores to settle. The final money settlement with the Federal League has not yet been made by Organized Baseball and it is going to cost a large sum. The National and American Leagues have hesitated in their settlement on account of the suit brought against them by the Baltimore Federal League club. As all this money will have to come from the pockets of the club owners, they are all determined to start a retrenchment policy as soon as possible and the cut in salaries will be the first move in this direction. For financial reasons also, it is not likely that the National League rule limiting the number of players to twenty-one will be changed.

The National League club will move to reduce their expenses before the next season by dropping a number of old players who have been carried for the last few seasons. Spring housecleaning in all the clubs, will be in order. Of the Giants, some of the old fellows will go. Hans Lobert and Mike Doolan will probably be dropped. Nap Rucker has quit in Brooklyn, and among the Brooklyn players whose contracts will have to be renewed will be Daubert, who held out for a big salary. Chief Meyer and George Cutshaw. Mowrey is another veteran who may be dropped next season, if Brooklyn can dig up a new third baseman. More than one of the National League clubs last season was forced to carry veteran players on account of long-term contracts when their positions would have been better taken care of by younger and cheaper players.

With no Federal League now to use as a club over the magnates' heads, the high-priced players will be brought into line at the club owners' own terms. The players have had their day and now the owners will get in their little work.

The Chicago Cubs were ruined last season because of the Federal League hold-overs the club was forced to carry. There will be a general overhauling of the Cubs next Spring. The St. Louis Cardinals carried many players with inflated salaries and as their contracts have all expired there will be some housecleaning in Miller Huggins's club.

There is certain to be a revision of many American League salaries next season, also. Lajoie, who draws a big salary from the Athletics, may be among those who will give way to the younger generation of ball players. The Cleveland Club shouldered part of Lajoie's salary with the Athletics after he was released to that club. On the Boston Red Sox were many players who last year drew high salaries. There is sure to be a cut in this salary list now that the club has been taken over by the new owners. H. H. Frazee and Hugh Ward.

The general renovation of both leagues will undoubtedly improve the standard of major league ball, which last season was at a low ebb. There is room for more ambitious young athletes, and next Spring's training trips will bring out more new major league material than ever before, as the club will be rid of most of the high-priced veterans they have been forced to carry on account of the Federal League invasion.

HIGH PRICE OF HORSEFLESH

Germans Petition for Disabled Army Horses for Food.

The German papers are not all sound and fury, albeit those are predominating characteristics of most of them nowadays, says the London Express. Hidden away in obscure corners one frequently comes across quite illuminating scraps of information as to life under war conditions in the Central Empires, and since these little paragraphs are not written to influence opinion either in Germany or aboard, they usually have the merit of being truthful.

The Rheinisch-Westfalische-Zeitung, for example, has this little item about horseflesh:—

At Dusseldorf a pound of horseflesh, which in peace times cost 6d. without bones, now fetches 3s. 3d. with the bones weighed in. Horse fat commands the same price. This is so notwithstanding the efforts of the military authorities to lower the price of the meat by seling disabled army horses to the local butchers as cheaply as £12 a head.

The result is that horseflesh has become even dearer than beef or pork. The people of Dusseldorf have therefore resolved to petition the military authorities to sell the army horses to the municipal authorities only, and to instruct the latter to establish a sales department adjacent to the town hall, so as to put a stop to the activities of the profit-hunting butchers. At the present rates horseflesh is a luxury in which none but the wealthy can afford to indulge.

ANOTHER HILL COMMITTED FOR TRIAL FOR CATTLE THEFT

William Hill, Working Under the Name of "Murphy" Drove Cattle to Hastings and Sold Them—Hide Identified by Wm. Davis of Dummer.

WARNING RE SUBPOENAS

William Hill of Dummer, was committed for trial this morning by Magistrate Langley, on the charge of stealing a heifer from William Davis, a Dummer farmer, some time in September. Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution and Mr. Howard R. Armstrong, representing Mr. G. N. Gordon, appeared for the prisoner. Provincial Inspector Boyd's handiwork was again shown in the apparent compactness of the evidence upon which the case was based. He has, of course, been materially assisted by County Constables Moore and Bullied.

William Hill is a brother of Davis Hill, who a few weeks ago was committed for the theft of four cattle, and who appears for trial before Judge Haycke to-morrow.

Identified Hide.

William Davis, the first witness, said he had identified a hide of a red and white heifer, which he had seen at Perry's store house as that of one of his cattle.

Harold A. Perry, a local dealer in hides, said he had been in business here since last May. On October 10th he bought five hides from Robert Simpson of Hastings. Mr. Moore and Mr. David had visited his store house and the latter had identified a hide which was one of the bundle received from Simpson.

Enter "Mr. Murphy."

Robert Simpson, a Hastings butcher, said he had carried on business in the village since April 20th, having come from the vicinity of Castleton, where he had farmed. On October 6th, Warkworth fair day, witness bought two head of cattle from a man who said his name was Murphy. They were a pair of six cattle he was to bring in, two at a time. Witness paid $75 for them. He identified the prisoner, William Hill ,as the "Murphy" individual who had sold the cattle. Witness skinned the cattle and identified a hide exhibited in court as that of one of the two cattle bought from "Murphy" on October 6th.

May Simpson daughter of Robert Simpson also identified Wm. Hill as the man who had partaken of breakfast at their home on Oct. 6th. She was told he had brought in two head of cattle and because her father had to remain home to kill them he had to cancel the outing to Warkworth fair with his daughter.

Richard Walsh, a grocer residing in Hastings, stated that his slaughter house was used by Simpson. He saw William Hill some time in early part of October, leading several cattle into the slaughter house yard.

Warned by Court.

Walsh was not present at the previous court. He admitted receiving a subpoena. Then he went to Buffalo and when he failed to dispose of his cattle there, was still there on the day of court. Mr. Hatton warned the witness that this was a serious matter and Magistrate Langley said he would issue a warrant in any case the Crown desired it for neglect to respond to a subpoena.

Berlin Announces Capture of Alexandria

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, November 27.—Alexandria has been captured from the Roumenians in Wallachia, according to to-day's official statement. Teutons are now fifteen miles beyond the Alt River and are still progressing.

in action. Three other cousins are overseas. Lieut. W. W. Boyd, with the Canadian Artillery, Flight Lieut. Boyd of the Flying Corps, and Lieut. Herbert Boyd with the Mechanical Transport.

Writing to Mrs. Stanley, 455 Stewart street, to acknowledge a parcel of comforts, Pte. Harry Dawkins, of Peterborough, says:

Dear Mrs. Stanley,—I received your parcel to-day all O.K. and a thousand thanks from everybody. We certainly received them at the right time, for we had just come out of the trenches and it was certainly some treat to have a nice dry pair of Canadian socks to put on.

We were sorry to hear about your son but never give up hope for he may turn up yet. It is getting rather quiet over here now and lots of mud, but one good thing it can't last [illegible], and I don't think any of the boys would be sorry to get back home again.

Will have to ring off, for news is scarce. Thanking you once more for the parcel, and wishing your club every success, I remain,

Yours,
H. DAWKINS.

P.S.—Please thank the rest of the ladies for us for their kindness.—Harry.

What did you do in the great war in Europe? What did you do for the cause of freedom, justice and democracy? These are two questions that will be asked of many men after this world-wide struggle. What will your answer be? Maybe you will say you were too old or you were too young, or that you had other responsibilities but you will never be able to say with any degree of truth, so long as you are physically fit, that you were too short, for the fact of the Bantam Battalion, the 216th, will be against you. Until nine months ago the short man had that excuse or reason for not enlisting, but not now. Any man who has been rejected for lack of inches, or who has never tried to enlist because he was too short, need fear no longer that he cannot take part in the defence of the Empire's honour. The 216th "Bantam" Battalion will equip him for the man's part in this great and grave issue. There are many persons who cannot fight or take an active part in the war, who know of others who can. If those persons will kindly acquaint Private Maurice with the name and addresses of such men, the service will be greatly appreciated, and will be treated as strictly confidential. Address Private P. Maurice, 216th O. C. Battalion, Simcoe Street, Peterborough.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion will meet the business men of Peterborough at a meeting to be held in the Patriotic Fund Offices, Simcoe Street, to-morrow night, at 8 o'clock, to discuss the recruiting problem with them. All business men in the city are invited to be present.

The 216th Battalion officers met this afternoon to organize a hockey team for the Battalion. Peterborough's soldiers will be represented in the Intermediate O. H. A. series.

Citizens who have claims against the 247th Battalion for boarding members of the Battalion are asked to present their accounts to Captain Lipsett, the Paymaster, to-morrow, (Tuesday), Nov. 28th.

BRITAIN TO CONTROL THE COAL INDUSTRY.

The government is proposing to take over the control of the coal industry of Great Britain in the near future the main purpose of the scheme of nationalization being to give a certain power of control over the neutral shipping which coals at British ports. Coal owners will be allowed to take their present profits if the plan goes through, but the government will control the distribution of coal for home consumption, for export and for shipping. For some time back the government has used its authority over British shipping to direct its courses most beneficial for the nation, but neutral steam shipping, though dependent on Britain for coal, has not recognized a resulting obligation to this country.

The plan is that if the government owns the coal it will be in a position to stipulate the use the customer shall make of it and to require him to call for his return cargo at specified ports. In that way it is believed the whole of the shipping in British ports may be organized and directed

COAL STRIKE IN THE WEST

Special to Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 27.—With the official order to strike today in the hands of coal miners of Eastern British Columbia and Alberta, Western Canada, was face to face with one of the most far-reaching strikes in its history. With coal already very short because of a car shortage during the Summer, much suffering is anticipated.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—Messrs. Carter and Gorham, the representatives of the Crow's Nest miners have arrived in the capital and had a conference this afternoon with Hon. C. J. Doherty and officials of the Department of Labour. It is hoped here that an agreement may be reached on the basis of an increase in wages for the miners sufficient to cover the increase in the cost of living.

Three Presentations At Coldsprings

On Tuesday evening, November 14th, the people of Coldsprings spent an enjoyable time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Huston, in honour of two of Coldsprings Sunday school teachers, Miss Susie Close and Mr. Herbert Peters, who were recently married. A variety shower was given and many useful and valuable presents were received by the bride and groom. Miss L. Bennett, superintendent of Coldspring's Sunday school, told them in a few words with how much pleasure they gathered for a social evening and on behalf of the Sunday school wished them much happiness for the future. Mr. Peters, although surprised, thanked all for the many presents and also for showing them what a large circle of friends they had.

Light refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in games and singing. Three cheers were given for the young couple and also for the kind host and hostess. All joined hands and sang 'Auld Lang Syne' and 'God Save the King.'

Class Entertained.

On Friday evening, Nov. 17th, Master Donald Rose entertained the two intermediate classes of the Sunday school, of which Mr. and Mrs. Peters are teachers, and presented them with a beautiful fruit set, cream pitcher and sugar bowl, and two splendid addresses. The address to Mrs. Peters was read by Miss Stella Huston, and the presentation was made by Miss Rosanna Tully. The address to Mr. Peters was read by Master Harry Huston and the presentation was made by Master Carl Wilson. After ice cream, which was provided by Mrs. T. Rose, had been freely partaken of, the classes joined in wishing their teachers many joy and happiness in years to come.

A Variety Shower.

On Monday evening, Nov. 20th, the ladies of Coldsprings gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Rose to present Miss Annie Peters with a variety shower on the eve of her wedding. On the arrival of Miss Peters the favourite song, "She's a Jolly Good Fellow," was heartily sung, and the beautiful and costly presents were presented to Miss Peters. Miss F. Bennet on behalf of the Sunday school, expressed her regret upon losing one of Coldspring's prominent teachers and wished her every happiness in her new home.

Miss Peters, although taken by surprise, made a suitable reply. After refreshments were served and games were played, three cheers were given for the bride elect and also for Mr. and Mrs. Rose. The friendship circle was formed and 'Auld Lang Syne' and 'God Save the King' were sung

PAGE LES DARCY— HE IS WANTED

Dodging Recruiting Officers, Kangaroo Pup is Headed for the U. S. A.

VANCOUVER, Nov. 27—When the good ship Makura, Captain J. D. S. Phillips, arrived from Sydney via Auckland, Suva, and Honolulu, further light was shed on the mysterious disappearance from his country of the great Les Darcy, Australian middleweight champion boxer, which demonstrated beyond a doubt that Darcy has shaken the dust of Australia from his shoes and has escaped, temporarily at least, the lure of the recruiting sergeant.

It was discovered that when the steamer reached Auckland word of Darcy's absence had been cabled to the New Zealand port, with the result that Auckland immigration officials made a most careful search of the ship, from stem to stern. A careful scrutiny was made of all the members of the crew, but no Darcy was found.

That the Australian authorities are making such an effort to find the boxer, who is said to have skipped just after he had attained his 21st birthday, is not remarkable. He was the most prominent Australian by long odds, not excepting the statesmen of the country, and was the shining example looked up to by the youth of the Commonwealth. His enlistment would have been a great stimulus to recruiting to this land of the Southern Cross, while equally as well his flight from the country would give the whole boxing game a black eye in the land where it is just now held in such esteem.

Cables from Australia of late have suggested that Darcy had left on a steamer bound for one of the South American ports, Santiago, Chili, being the one held as the most convenient place to land, but it is evident that nothing is being left to chance, and that all avenues of escape are being watched

Already the American boxing promoters are on Darcy's trail, for within the past few days letters have arrived in Vancouver from different quarters asking certain citizens to keep their eyes peeled for him. The manager who gets Darcy's signature on a contract for a bout with Mike Gibbons will have control of the greatest boxing attraction in a generation.

A Gutter Magdalene
SYNOPSIS
Fannie Ward, who created a sensation in the world of motion pictures by her performances in "The Cheat," "Tennessee's Partner," and other Lasky photoplays on the Paramount Programme, is the central figure in a new photoplay to Willard Mack, author of "Kick In" and other successful plays, which gives a vivid picture of a phase of city life and is replete with stirring adventure and romance. In "A Gutter Magdalene" Miss Ward as Maida, finds redemption in her allegiance to the Salvation Army. As a worker for this great cause her path re-crosses those whom she knew in other days. Temptation is thrown in her way again. The manner in which she successfully combats these temptations forms the remainder of the story.

WEDDING BELLS

DAIGNAULT—McDONOUGH.

A quiet wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, when Mr. Joseph Daignault, of Peterborough, was united in marriage to Mrs Margaret McDonough, also of the city. The contracting parties were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beyette, the latter a sister of the bride. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was partaken of at the home of Mrs. Beyette, 188 Lake street. Mr. and Mrs. Daignault left on the 11.40 G.T.R. train for Hamilton and other points. On their return they will reside at 182 1-2 Hunter street.

OBITUARY

MRS. NATHANIEL PEARSON.

In loving memory of Jane Mooney, beloved wife of Nathaniel Pearson, Hall's Bridge, Ontario, who passed away Saturday morning, Nov. 18th, in her 80th year.

Mrs. Pearson was a native of Harvey township and for many years a resident of Hall's Bridge. She was well known and highly respected by all who knew her. About two years ago her health commenced to fail and about four weeks ago she was forced to resort to her bed as a means of rest and quietness in the midst of intense pain and weakness, which was borne with patience and fortitude, until the Angel of Death relieved her that she might enjoy peace, perfect peace, and rest.

Those who survive are: Mr. Nathaniel, affectionate husband of the deceased, Mrs Vernon Orsham, Hall's bridge, and Miss Gladys at home.

MRS. McCOY.

Mrs. Amanda McCoy passed away at the residence of her sister, Mrs. J M. Parrott, Napanee, Ont., on Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock, November 23rd inst., after a prolonged ill ness.

Mrs. McCoy was a resident of Peterborough for some years, and moved from this city to Carman, Manitoba with her son Frank, who was an Electrical student in the C.G.E. at that place.

Mrs. McCoy and her son won many warm friends during their residence in Peterborough and we will regret to learn of her demise.

Sir Sam Hughes Not Talking

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Sir Sam Hughes isn't talking now—at least to the newspapers.

The former Minister of Militia passed through Toronto to-day, and the hour he spent here was devoted to a conference with his legal adviser Hon. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., a conference that lasted until the train for Lindsay began to move out of the Union Station, and the General ran to board it.

A reporter boarded the train with Sir Sam. "Does this conference with Mr. Nesbitt bode something big about to happen?" he queried. "No, no, merely private business," replied the former war lord.

"What do you think of the changes in the system of recruiting and organizing battalions?"

"I have no opinions."

And the General executed a strategic retreat toward friendly shelter of a seat.

After returning to Ottawa and Lindsay he will go south on a motoring trip with his family.

It must be a great relief to some men when their wives become widows.

ELDERS WERE ORDAINED IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

Yesterday morning a service of a unique order was held in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church when five members were ordained elders—Mr. Jas. Hunter, Mr. Peter Ferguson, Mr. Jas. McDonald, Mr. Jas. Dutton, and Mr. J. Albert Johnson. The pastor, Rev. Robt. Pogue, conveyed his instructions to the newly ordained elders through his sermon, the text of which he chose from Peter, 5 Chapter, 1-4 Verses. The elders, which are among you I extort who am also an elder, and a witness of the sufferings of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory that shall be revealed. Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not by constraint but willingly, not for filthy lucres but of a ready mind; neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples of the flock, and when the Chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away.

CONFLAGRATION IN TORONTO HOSPITAL

Special to Examiner:

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—Two thousand dollar fire at Grace Hospital this morning. Patients carried out, but nobody hurt.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it formed stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The French Military System Is a Model, Says Will Irwin

America Should Get Instruction There, Declares Writer Back From Front—French Army is the Greatest For Democracy and Technique in the Universe—Visited Both the Verdun and Somme Battlefronts.

WILL RETURN IN A SHORT TIME

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Reporting bad weather from the time she cleared Liverpool, on November 18, the Philadelphia, of the American line, reached New York with eighty-nine first, 127 second and 109 third passengers. Her consignment of mail was small.

Mr. Irwin, the well known writer, who was one of the passengers, has been on the western firing line in Europe for ten months. The trip was his third one and he had several interesting things to tell to America. He told of how the fierceness of Verdun was overshadowed by the great battle of the Somme; how on that front the Prussians have lost their artillery "eyes" because of the accuray of the British aeroplane attack and how the re-election of President Wilson has been acclaimed in England, showing a decided reversal in sentiment and opinion.

"This trip I spent ten months in Europe," began Mr. Irwin. "I went to Verdun and I went to the battle of the Somme. I used to think that the Verdun battle was the greatest that this war possibly could produce, but I have learned differently at the Somme. There I saw artillery fire that could not possibly be greater. On a twenty-eight mile front thousans of guns belched forth flame and destruction. Verdun faded before the sight. That particular section of the battlefield which lies between the first line trenches of the enemies which is termed 'No Man's Land' was a barren waste. The land was furrowed as if by great agricultural machines had ploughed through. With a glass it was possible to distinguish the dead here and there. In the first line communication trenches the soldiers are waist deep in mud and slime. It is impossible to pen a vivid poture of conditions.

Democracy in French Army.

"I must say of the French army that it is the greatest for democracy and technique in the universe. They have taught the British. The French technique is wonderful and the Americans, instead of believing that they should look to Germany for this military asset, had better go to school with the French. There they will become masters. As to the democracy that I spoke of, it is one hundred per cent. in the French army. Jean is a private and Jacques is a lieutenant on the battle field. Each knows and keeps his place. After the hard work under fire they are both men and brother fighters and enjoy the cafes side by side. To show the difference in the German army—and although the British army was far behind in democracy they are now learning—I'd like to cite one little instance on the Somme front.

"An American Ambulance man, running out on the battle field after a charge, found three wounded Germans. Two were privates and a third an officer. He ordered all three placed in the same ambulance, whereupon the German officer objected, stating that the other two were privates and he an officer and a baron. 'That's nothing,' replied the American Ambulance man; 'I'm an American and a plumber.'

"The re-election of President Wilson was received with great acclaim in England, despite evidences of dislike before election day. The Englishmen took the stand that the election of Mr. Hughes would mean a triumph for the German vote in the United States and they rooted for Mr. Wilson. The first news of Mr. Wilsons' defeat was received with deep gloom, but when it was stated finally that he had been re-elected there was no end of enthusiasm.

Putting Out the Prussians' "Eyes."

"There is one important thing with regard to the battle of the Somme that you might mention. On the German front along the Somme the German army has lost its eyes. I mean that so effective has been the attacks of the British aeroplane corps that on one occasion no aeroplanes and only one captive balloon was seen for a week. The Germans are concentrating their artillery fire on positions where they believe the enemy to be and are using maps to do so. This very important part of their service has been badly used on the Somme. They are without eyes."

Europe is the rumour shop of the world, Mr. Irwin said. All sorts of wild reports emanate every day from unknown sources. He heard recently, he said, that Lord Kitchener is not dead but is a prisoner in a German military camp.

Mr. Irwin will return to Europe, he said, after a brief rest. He is optimistic about the chances of the Allies, but says that there is a feeling of unrest because of the Prussian successes in Roumania. The flower of France, and of Prussia have been thrown into the combat already, he believes, and it is up to England to fill up the gap with men.

THE POTATO SHORTAGE HITTING IRELAND HARD

Worst Crop Since 1847—Fears of Famine Declared to Be Well Founded—Food Chief's Chance—Should Keep the Supply in Emerald Isle Away From Higher Prices in England.

IRELAND AGHAST

An Irish weekly has the following: "The dangerous situation in regard to food has been recognised, and Mr. Runciman announces measures equivalent to a food dictatorship will be taken. The question now is, will a food dictator undertake to save Ireland from famine, or will his measures, dominated by regard for England, conduce to famine? Will the Irish people depend upon him? Or will they take matters into their own hands?

"There had been suggestions all summer that the crop situation in Ireland was not what could be desired. Spring was cold and wet and the planting season was late. In autumn another long rainy spell set in, and presently the much dreaded blight appeared. For years past they have been trying to overcome the adverse influences of weather conditions upon the potato crop and various devices have been attempted to with the idea of diminishing the losses. Certain varieties have been found more resistant than others, precautions in planting and spraying have been found useful, and different soils have been found to give different results.

Failure Established.

"The net result of the bad spring weather was a reduction in potato area of 6,150 acres. Bad summer weather resulted in a small crop of small potatoes. Bad autumn weather resulted in blight, rot, and failure to save a good part of the crop. In many cases it was observed that after the crop had been saved and the potatoes had been stored in pits as usual, they began to rot in the pits. The crop is already selling in the town of Nenagh, says a letter from that place, written on October 23, at one pound per barrel, or one shilling per stone, (14 pounds).

No Power to Stop Export.

"As soon as the position was established, and it had been conceded that the crop would be one-third to one-half less than last year, Captain Donelan M.P., brought the matter to the notice of Parliament, where, in answer to his question, Mr. T. W. Russell said the anxiety did not warrant the term 'failure' being used as yet. He added that the Irish Department of Agriculture had not power to prohibit the export of potatoes. This did not satisfy Capt. Donelan, who asked: 'In view of the fact that potatoes are the staple food of the Irish people, will the right honorable gentleman recommend that the exportation of potatoes shall be suspended pending further investigation as to the extent of the disease?' Mr. Russell said the question must be regarded as an open one. If it ever did arise it would have to be very carefully considered. A later statement seemed to indicate that if the power to prohibit export was not with this department it might exist in another, whereupon a correspondent to a southern paper asks: 'How many deaths from starvation will it take to convince Mr. Russell that it is necessary now?' Mr. Russell's own figures for last year indicate a crop of 3,710,463 tons, of which there were available for export only 250,000 tons. If the crop as been reduced one-third then the potato shortage amounts to about a million tons. If there is only a half crop, then the shortage amounts to a million and a half tons.

Whose Food Is It?

"When we remember that the diet of the Irish poor is based on potatoes, these figures are staggering.

"The matter is complicated by two further facts. It will be difficult, perhaps impossible, to get potatoes in from other countries with which to make up the shortage. That is one consequence of the state of war, which has reduced the amount of available shipping to a point where the greatest anxiety is now conceded in all the allied countries. As compared with 1915, the imports of all kinds of foodstuffs into England in 1916 show a considerable falling off. Secondly, England will naturally, in the course of business, seek to satisfy her own wants by buying potatoes from Ireland, thus further depleting the stock of food which stands between the poor of Ireland and starvation. Because, as the Cork Examiner points out, 'despite the official allegations of increased prosperity the masses of the people in towns and cities have not to any appreciable extent participated in the prosperity that permeates Great Britain, and which has been brought about by the glut of employment and the higher wages that have resulted from the widespread establishment of munition works and factories.' After two years of war they are still stalling off Ireland with soft speech and unkept promises, when ammunition making is mentioned.

Ireland Aghast.

"While there is no Irish authority that can be called upon to cope with the danger, at least with any expectation that regard for the welfare of the Irish people will inspire to doubtions, the Irish press is by no means unconscious of the risks that are being run. The Belfast News says: 'From Clare to Donegal, and from Dublin to Sligo thoughtful men are asking, What will happen if the people's food is sold and exported There is only one answer—Famine. Unhappily, the masses of our people in town and country do not consume much Irish beef or mutton. The prices of potatoes and bread are their principal concern. If this crop is sent away, some millions of people will be practically foodless before St. Patrick's Day. So far as the bulk of Irish wage-earners are concerned the difference between total failure this year and the exportation of the crop that has escaped the partial failure would be nothing whatever.'

What Is to Be Done?

"As to what must be done, the first answer obtained in Parliament was that there was no power to do anything. As the London correspondent of one paper points out, the Defence of the Realm Act evidently does not cover the defence of Ireland against famine. A Home Rule Government would have been about it, but there is no Home Rule Government; far from it. There remains voluntary association, which involves some prospect of conflict between those farmers who have potatoes to sell, and the poor who want potatoes to eat. The temper of one side may be inferred from the following from the Donegal Vindicator:

"'The crisis has found Ireland as unprepared as the war found Great Britain. The potato famine is upon us and so also are the exporters. In the famine years there was plenty of food to support the people, but it was exported. Let not the mistake occur again. The farmer who sells his potatoes for export to-day must be restrained by his more sensible neighbours. There is a food crisis, and it can only be prevented from becoming acute by prompt action. If necessary, vigilance committees for the preservation of the people's food should be organised at once, and the stern coercion of unpatriotic farmers taken in hand. In time of war little head will be paid to a starving Ireland. Read deeply, study history, and stop the exportation of food.'

Two Zeppelins Destroyed By British Aviators

One Was Brought Down on the Durham Coast and the Other Nine Miles Off Norfolk—Both Were Headed Toward the Sea When Hit

LAST NIGHT'S RAID

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Two Zeppelins of a large aerial fleet which raided English east counties last night were brought down by British aviators. Lord French, commander of the British Home forces, said one of the Zeppelins was brought down aflame on the Durham coast. The second was destroyed nine miles off Norfolk. Both were headed toward the sea when hit.

Last night's air raid was the twenty-seventh air raid over "eastern counties" since January first. Last raid was on Oct. 2nd, by an aeroplane.

Judging from official statements, the two Zeppelins bagged last night brings the total number so far destroyed over and around England by British patrols up to six, at least three of these being of the latest super-Zeppelin type. Eight others destroyed elsewhere. The official statement of last night's raid said that the Zeppelins passed over northern and eastern counties, and that no casualties or damage had been reported.

FELL FROM LOFT, HURT, THEN WELL

How a Man Who Landed on Woodpile and was Sore From Head to Foot Found Quick Relief.

Once upon a time Edwin Putnam, who lives in the quiet, pretty hamlet of Wendel Depot, Mass., climbed up into a loft to get some building material, just as many another man living in the country must often do. Suddenly he slipped and fell. Ten feet below was a pile of wood, knotted and gnarled. It was a nasty tumble, and Mr. Putnam was injured painfully in the back, he was covered with bruises, and was sore from head to feet.

The next day he bought a bottle of Sloan's Liniment which had been recommended to him. Within a very few hours the soreness had vanished and the lameness had disappeared. He was an active man once more.

Sloan's Liniment can be obtained at all drug stores. 25c, 50c and $1.00

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"If he feels called into the world, Tom—" she began, then halted. The husband waited, and then she went on again. "If he feels it so strong, maybe it must mean something. It's mighty hard to say. But, Tom, I know Ham better than anybody else does. He's not the kind of a boy to leave us alone. If we need him he'll stay."

"That's not the question mother." The father who yesterday had been dictatorial and intolerant was now the just judge who refused to be beguiled by personal preference. Only his pupils betrayed the pathos of his inward suffering. "It's a right hard question as I see it. This place means home to me, but I am about played out. If we stay it's Ham that's got to wear the harness, an' I know just how very heavy the harness is. It would gall him an' blister him even if he wasn't already chafin' with discontent. It seems like he can't do it willin'ly. Can we let him do it any other way? We are lookin' back, mother, but I reckon life runs forward."

"It ain't just my life I'm thinkin' about——" broke in Ham's voice, but his father stopped him with an uplifted hand.

"You've had your say, son, for the present," he reminded; and the boy fell silent.

Tom Burton turned to the maiden aunt who sat under the lamplight with her sewing on her lap. He saw that her lips were intolerantly compressed and that her needle came and went in protesting little jabs. "Hannah," he quietly inquired, "what do you think?"

The elderly woman whose sternness of view had been tempered by neither maternity nor breadth of experience shook her head.

"I don't know as I'm called on to express what I think, Tom," she replied with cold disapproval. "I've always held that it is a sinful thing to be dissatisfied with what God wills. He put us here as I reckon if He had not meant us to live here He'd put us somewhere else."

"I guess, Hannah—" Tom Burton's eyes for just a moment lighted into a humorous smile—"we couldn't hardly expect God to move us bodily. But if we do go away from here you can have the comfort of figurin' that if He hadn't wanted us to go there we wouldn't be there." He looked over at little Mary, who alone had not spoken.

"Daughter," he suggested, "you're too young to have to decide such things, but you might as well speak up, too. It looks like the day has come for children to lay down the law to their elders. What do you think about leavin' the old home, the only home we've ever known?"

The child, surprised at being called into the council, dropped her eyes, then, suddenly glancing up and meeting Ham's gaze, she felt a courage beyond her own, and stammered. "I'd like to see the world and—and—well just to see all the wonderful things—and to know everything."

Tom Burton's lips stiffened. "A long time ago a couple of people lived in the Garden of Eden," he said shortly. "And I reckon what Eve said wasn't much diff'rent from that. Well they moved away all right."

There was a long silence in the room, and the father at last broke it with his eyes fixed on his eldest son.

"Those great men you talk about, Ham—" he spoke with deliberate gravity—"them fellers you seem to think are sort of brothers of yours—most of them came to times when they saw things topplin' down all round 'em. They sent your Napoleon to St. Helena an' a lot of others didn't do much better in the long run. Julius Cæsar was pretty great an' pretty ambitious. He fell. There's a heap to be said for livin' straight an' simple. We're self-respectin' men an' women with clean blood in our veins that don't have to bow down to no man. We've lived honest an' worked hard, but sometimes when spring comes on an' I'm followin' the plow an' the blackbirds are followin' me along the furrow, I feel like God ain't so far away. When they buries me out there amongst those I've loved an' been true to I reckon I'll rest.

"Your father," the son reminded him, "wasn't a young feller when Lincoln called for volunteers, but he didn't stay there because he wanted to rest. He went' an' now he's restin' down there at Shiloh. I want to answer my call. I'm willin' to take my chance of restin' where death finds me."

Outside, across the ice-locked lake and through the snow-burdened forest swept the wolf-like howl of the wind.

Inside, there was the silence of a deeply troubled indecision. At last, Tom Burton said:

"It's a right hard thing to stake the welfare of a family on a boy's notion of his own greatness—a notion that ain't never been tried out. There's just one thing you've convinced me of, and it's this: You may not be able to do anything worth while in the world outside. You may be a failure there, but I do pretty sure in your frame of mind, you'll be a failure here. The man that makes a fight here has got to have his heart in it an' he's got to love the soil. That don't fit your case. I ain't ready to admit yet that I ain't the head of my own family. I ain't made up my mind yet what we'll do. Maybe we'll stay right here an' maybe we'll go away." The father ran one hand wearily through the thick hair on his forehead and shook his head. "I've heard you out, an' we'll all think on it an' dream on it. I've found right often when a feller's perplexed he can't reach a conclusion he goes to sleep an' wakes up with a clearer judgment. Once a mistake is made, it can't be unmade; but I don't want you to think that I ain't pondering this question."

Ahead of him Ham saw Paul and Mary slip up the stairway and his aunt rise, and with the stiff disapproval of silence, and leave the room. He himself remained only a few minutes longer and then with a low-voiced good-night he pressed his father's hand, and felt the grip of warm affection on his own. He took up and lighted the small lamp that was to light him to bed, and as he climbed the bare stairway, the shadows wavered on the walls at each side, and he heard the wail of the wind around the eaves.

When he got the lamp out and began undressing he realized for the first time the gnawing weariness of muscles that the day had taxed with chores and tramping. To-morrow morning he must rise while the windows still let in only the chilling gray of dawn. Yet he stopped with half his clothes removed, and, going to an improvised shelf in the corner, took down a battered volume. It was not until the lamp warned him of the spent hours with its dying spatter that he laid aside the resonant sentences in which Carlyle had been talking to him of heroes and their worship. In another room across the hall he had heard stirrings for an hour after the silence of sleep had fallen on the rest of the house.

There Mary, unable to compose herself at once, had been snipping at the pattern of a gown with which, in her fancy, she was to charm those men who did not wear lumbermen's socks and neglect their razors. But now even Mary was asleep. It was cold in the room, and outside the world was bitter, but Ham was far from sleep. In his mind still worked and seethed the unresting ferment which had become a torment. The annals of the great had fired him to passion. The littleness of his room and of his life stifled him. He wanted to breathe freer, and, drawing on his mackinaw, he tiptoed noiselessly down the stairs and let himself out into the night.

There he found a frozen world, shut in by low-drifting clouds and swallowed in a smother of darkness. Even the snow was gray, but at least there he could look out across space.

As though his eyes followed a compass needle, he slowly swung them until his gaze set toward his desire, and because vaguely he thought of New York as the centre of the great outer world, his face was to the south.

The wind moaned about him and somewhere far off he heard the rippling groan of an overladen tree giving way under its paralysis of sleet. In himself he felt something also breaking away from its place. He felt forces moulding their bonds and straining for freedom, and it almost seemed to his burning eyes that while he gazed toward that spot hundreds of miles away which he had never seen, there slowly kindled in the sky a pale and luminous aura, such as hangs over the spires and shafts of a great city. His fancy pictured the unsainted halo that gleams above thronged and never-sleeping streets; streets that always beckon. Vague echoes of sounds came toward him, warring in the path of the wind; sounds of the many voices and the many clamors that merge into one dull, insistent roar; the voice of the city.

So he stood there shivering and not realizing that the frost was shrewdly biting him. His spirit was the spirit of a hatching eaglet impatiently rapping at the shell which too slowly opens to give it freedom.

"What I did to Shivers Martin," he told himself, "I can do to the rest of them. There ain't much difference between doin' big things an' little things, except that you've got to be where there are big things to do an' you've got to know you can do 'em."

PART II.
THE BOOK OF LIFE
IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.
CHAPTER V.

It was eight o'clock, and the year as well as the day was in its morning. The watch which young Carl Bristoll drew from his pocket was very thin and exquisite, and he did not look at its face. Instead he touched a delicate spring with his finger-nail and listened to the tinkle of its low, silvery chime. This watch might have spoken the hour to a blind man as well as to eyes as clear and engaging as those of its present possessor.

In some Swiss shop, where for generations an hereditary skill of subtle fingers had come down from father to son, a master of his craft had toiled long and lovingly over this thin disc of gold which epitomized in its small circumference a perfection of accuracy and beauty. Because it was a prince's plaything and because the young Titan of finance who employed Carl Bristoll as his confidential secretary had brought it back by way of an affectionate gift from his last trip to the Continent, the lad prized it above other possessions. To young Bristoll, who was no unwilling wage-earner, but a hero-worshiper in all the intensity of strong youth, it had been as if an emperor had pinned on his breast the insigna of personal regard.

He put the trinket back into his waistcoat pocket and strolled to the windows that gave off over the Drive and the Hudson. The softly arching sky found its color echo in the blue of broad waters and beyond them the Palisades were already beginning to show tenderly green and allaring in spring's resurrection. Out in midstream lay the crouching hulk of a battleship, and its sombre gray was the one note that contradicted the softness of the morning.

Bristoll turned his face again to the interior, where a flood of light from the broad window at the back filled the place with eastern glow. He never tired of that room, the library, where his chief despatched those matters of more urgent business that pursued him even to his home. It was a room that might have served a potentate as a council chamber with its treasury of almost priceless art, yet it reflected everywhere the quiet of faultless taste and the elegance born of a restrained and sure discernment.

"And all of it," Carl Bristoll murmured to himself, as he awaited the coming of its master, "he made for himself in a scant ten years, and he stands only at the threshold of his career!" That often repeated formula was a sort of daily tonic with which his ambition reminded itself that life holds no prize locked behind impossible barriers for him who has the courage and the resolution to grasp it. Yet had he been older he would have added, "The impossible is only possible to the child of Destiny."

He heard a quiet movement behind him and turned to find the butler standing at his elbow with a tray of early mail, into which the secretary plunged, separating the purely personal from these letters which the great man saw only through his subordinate's eyes.

"I'm not at all sure, Mr. Bristoll, that the master will rise early," volunteered the servant. "He was with his sister until midnight, and after that Mr. Paul came in and I heard him playing the piano, sir, as late as three o'clock."

"Carl laughted. "I had a call from him on the 'phone an hour ago," he answered. "He spoke of a busy day ahead and suggested an early start. There are some men, Harrow, who find rest simply in changing the brain's occupation."

"Yes, sir, quite so," admitted the butler dubiously. "Still, as the poet says, sir, it's sleep that 'knits up the ravelled sleeve of care,' sir. Sometimes I have apprehensions that the master will overtax his strength."

BE PATRIOTIC— WEAR RUBBERS

British Government Has Given You Rubber at Low Price, So You Can Wear Rubbers and Overshoes to Protect Your Expensive Shoes.

Before the war a cow cost sixty dollars; now a cow's hide costs as much. This means expensive shoes—the same quality as before with a price fast approaching double that formerly paid.

"What's to be done?" asks the man or woman in moderate circumstances.

"Buy Rubbers and Save your Shoes" is the answer the British Government gives.

The British Government has put the price of rubber down so that you may benefit. Think of this and think of the rise in the price of other staple articles. Then, be patriotic and wear rubbers—rubbers made from British Government rubber—and save your shoe leather from winter's snow and fall rains.

KIDNEYS FAIL TO WORK

Odette, Que.

"My husband used GIN PILLS for Backache and Kidney Disease which severely troubled him for a great deal. The pain in his back was dreadful and the kidneys failed to do their work properly. After taking one dose of GIN PILLS he asked them to be directly what he needed, and after taking two boxes of GIN PILLS was completely cured. I cannot highly recommend GIN PILLS as every opportunity to any friends and relatives."

GOING AFTER SHORT SKIRTS, LOW NECKS

BALTIMORE, Nov. 27.—Representing 39,000 members in the United States and Canada, the delegates to the second biennial convention of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae formally opened the session to-day, which will continue until Sunday night. Cardinal Gibbons offered the invocation and delivered a brief address.

Dress reform, the drama and modern literature will be discussed and the feeling among the delegates was that strong resolutions relative to these matters would be passed before the convention's conclusion. Short skirts, low necks and other of the present-day modes of dressing are expected to come in for criticism.

WEDDING "DOT" DISAPPEARS IN FRANCE IN WAR

The war promises to end in France what has constituted in the past the greatest obstacle to general marriage, namely the "dot" that is exacted of every girl who wants a husband.

So deeply is the custom implanted in French life that any girl whose parents are not able to provide her with a "dot" has such a small chance of effecting a marriage as to render it unworthy of either consideration or hope. Frenchwomen who have come from families of modest means often have declared that the necessity imposed on them from the earliest moments of childhood to save every penny in the hope of acquiring a "dot" by the time they reached marriageable age really robbed them of all that goes to make up girlhood in the real sense of the word.

While it is generally conceded that this necessity of having a "dot" has made the Frenchwoman the most efficient and economical home manager in the world and also has relieved her of "slavedom," yet it has greatly restricted marriage in France. It has entailed also the disadvantage of limiting every girl's choice to that particular class in the social and intellectual scale to which her "dot" will admit her.

Since the beginning of the present war an active propaganda has been carried on in France to put marriage on the American and English basis—a basis purely of love, on which the husband also assumes the full responsibility of providing for his wife and children.

Where the hopes of these people to establish "dotless" marriages in France based solely on the success of their propaganda they probably would not succeed. A mother who consented to her son's marriage to a girl of modest "dot" has just withdrawn her consent, saying:

"My boy has since won the Cross of the Legion of Honour and the Croix de Guerre, and he is therefore now worth more."

Fortunately for the propagandists, they have recently been able to establish that they can count upon a certain great phenomenon that has been repeatedly noticed in past wars and that promises to settle the question of dots in France regardless of

Good Old Home-Made Family Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind—Healthy and Cheaply Prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you would hardly have in them all the curative power that lies in this simple "home-made" cough syrup which takes only a few minutes to prepare. Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for $2.50. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and sugar syrup preparation goes right at the cause of coughs and gives almost immediate relief. It opens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes that line the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, so quickly and easily that it is really astonishing. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, be sure to ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

City Dog a Menace To Public Health

By WOODS HUTCHINSON, M.D.

The World's Best Known Writer on Medical Subjects

One of the most charming pastoral sights of the great city is trim lady's maids or beautifully dressed women leading waddling dwarf canines down the steps of palatial apartment houses to set a good example to children in daffling parkings and sidewalks. For half of which indecency near their property they would promptly demand the arrest of any street Arab.

As dogs are subject to or harbor the germs and parasites of at least a dozen human diseases, it can easily be seen what a menace to public health is the tracking into homes and houses upon shoes and skirts of this offensive and infectious material scattered, broadcast over our streets.

Another canine feature which even the tiniest toy dwarfs retain is the power—and the inclination—to bite and carry hydrophobia. That this is no mere figure of speech may be seen from the fact that from 4,000 to 6,000 people are bitten every year in New York City alone, over one half of them severely enough to require medical and even hospital care, with an average of five or six cases of hydrophobia resulting. Although it might look at first sight as if the smaller and lap dog varieties would be much less dangerous in this respect than the larger dogs, this is far from being the case. Partly because they are, if anything, more peevish and uncertain in temper, partly because they usually dislike children, and because children on account of their diminutive size have little fear of them, at least until after they have been bitten. Moreover, their devoted owners usually take the position that their darling pets have a perfect right to bite any tiresome child who happens to come near enough to annoy or alarm them, or interfere with their comfort. As one good lady explained, writing in furious resentment to the newspapers when her adored terrier had been subjected to to the outrage of arrest and examination for hydrophobia by the Board of Health, because it had severely bitten a child: "A pestilent urchin picked up one of dead Dodo's playthings, and of course got a nip for his pains!"

Another source of danger to the public health from city dogs is the way in which they run about among and scratch dirt over and pollute baskets and boxes of fruit or vegetables, or other food products which happen to be standing upon or displayed for sale upon the sidewalks.

One of the worst features of the keeping of pet dogs in the city is the disagreeable and highly undesirable frame of mind which they seem to engender in their owners of both sexes. First, selfishness and utter indifference to the rights of others whenever the welfare of their precious darlings is involved. The idea of any one daring to object to Fido being brought into a crowded street car or complaining of his barking at night when the poor dear had insomnia! Secondly, the bitter dislike which sooner or later they seem to develop towards children as the natural enemies of their pets. "Brats," "urchins," "ragamuffins" are their warmest terms of endearment, and a number of them even go so far as to publicly declare that children ought to be muzzled on the streets rather than their darling pets!

Stomach Was Very Bad Much Dizziness and Pain

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver or bowels the food remains undigested and as a result it ferments.

This gives rise to poisonous gases which crowd about the heart, and cause dizziness and choking sensations as well as irregular action of the heart.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and apoplexy.

The earlier derangements of the digestive system are such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rochon. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be just exactly what I needed and before the first box was all used I was cured, and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines, and recommend them above any doctor's medicines."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, twenty-five cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

the tenacity of tradition and the ambitions of mammas with marriageable sons.

Statistics have established that following every great war there comes a marked increase in the number of male births over female. The propagandists for "dotless" marriages have therefore been doing a little investigating and find ample cause for rejoicing. In one of the maternity hospitals in Paris in a single day in May there were twenty-three births, of which twenty-one were boys. In another hospital on the same day there were seventeen births, of which sixteen were boys. This has been established as being about the average for Paris at present. The same investigation in the rural districts is even more encouraging.

While, therefore, the propagandists realize that immediately following the close of hostilities the dearth of men brought about through military and naval losses, will place the groom very much at a premium, yet they figure that by 1940 and 1950 they can count on such an abundance of potential grooms that such a dearth of potential brides as to place the latter at a premium regardless of "dots."

UNBELIEF.

(Edward Robert Bulwer-Lytton)

There is no belief;
Whoever plants a seed beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart; light breaketh by and by,"
Trusts the Most High.

Whoever sees 'neath winter's field of snow
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says, "To-morrow," "The unknown,"
"The future," trusts the Power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eye lids close
And dares to live when life has woes,
God's comfort knows.

There is no belief;
And day by day, unconsciously,
The heart lives by that faith the lips deny.
God knoweth why!

BULLET WOUND MORTALITY LOWER

SMALLER BULLETS USED.

THIS FACT AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF ANTISEPSIS SAVES MANY LIVES.

The comparatively slight mortality from penetrating bullet wounds of the lungs and pleura in the European war offers a striking contrast to the results of such injuries in the Crimean War, the American Civil War, and the Spanish-American War. In a discussion of a comparison of chest wounds in various wars The New York Medical Journal says:

"At one time penetrating wounds of the chest were almost invariably fatal, or at least the mortality rate was exceedingly high. L. A. Lagarde, U.S. A., in his work on gunshot wounds, published in 1914, showed that the mortality of penetrating wounds of the chest in the French army during the Crimean War was 91.6 per cent., in the British army over 70 per cent., and among those who survived to reach hospital in the American Civil War it was 62 per cent.

"With the introduction of small bullets of high velocity, however, it began to fall and the fall seems to have been progressive. For instance, in the Spanish-American War, it was 27.5 per cent.; in the Boer War 14 per cent.; and among the Japanese in the Mukden battle, 3.67 per cent. Some fallacies have doubtless crept into the foregoing figures. Such extremes are very difficult to understand, for while the Japanese are perhaps a hardier race than either the Americans or the British, and while their sanitary arrangements may have been more strictly enforced than in either of the other armies, the difference in the mortality rate is too great not to be regarded with distrust.

"Yet it is certain that the death-rate from penetrating wounds of the lung and pleura are less deadly by far than was formerly the case. Indeed, unless a wound of this nature is quickly fatal, the prognosis is favorable. Dr. Hale White, in The Lancet for Dec. 4, 1915, states that among the many cases in hospital since the outbreak of the war he has not witnessed a single fatal one. The reason he gives is that the bad cases never get to England. Many victims are killed on the spot, some get no further than the field ambulance and casualty clearing hospitals, while others again succumb to their injuries in the base hospitals of France. Only those who are practically out of danger reach England.

"In the Quarterly Journal of Medicine for July, 1916, Dr. R. D. Rudolf narrates his experience of treating gunshot wounds of the chest received in the battle zone, and points out that one of the first things that strikes the attending medical man is that apparently hopeless wounds judging from their anatomical position in the chest, may give rise not only to no dangerous symptoms, but almost to no discomfort. That is, a bullet may pass clean through the lung without producing any lesion that can be detected by physical or X-ray examination. Usually, however, there is some hemoptysis (bleeding from the lung.)

"Writing in the issue of this journal for September 30 last, R. Murray Leslie points out that effects of penetrating wounds of the chest depend upon two factors: First, the direction and site of the bullet track, and, second, the presence of septic material within the thoracic cavity. Thus wounds in the middle of the chest or central zone are extremely dangerous. Wounds of the peripheral or lateral zone involve least risk, and the wounds in the middle zone are more serious. Lateral, transverse wounds are much less dangerous than we should imagine, and as Leslie says, it is extraordinary with the modern, small, high velocity bullet, how often the important structures in the posterior mediastinum (space between the lungs) escapes injury.

"No statistics have been given so far with regard to gunshot wounds in the French or the British armies, but it seems more or less certain that the fatalities will be higher than in the Boer or Russo-Japanese war. Shell fragments and shrapnel wounds are more likely by far to carry in infected material from the skin and clothing than the small pointed high velocity rifle bullets. On the western front the war has chiefly been one of big artillery, firing explosive and shrapnel shells, and machine guns, while the high velocity rifle bullets, which were the main cause of injury in the Boer and the Russo-Japanese wars have not been much in evidence. Consequently the wounds have been more greatly lacerated, tending to facilitate infection.

"A curious point with regard to infection of chest wounds is that although the entrance and exit wounds are generally septic, the bullet track in the lung appears, as a rule to be sterile."

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink.

"Old Sal" Does Her Beautiful Bit

A Canadian woman who has just returned from England told me, the other day, a story of a happening which she had "seen with her own eyes." It was in Old London on a day when some wounded soldiers were coming back and the city was prepared to look after the boys who had been fighting on the Somme. A venerable but vivacious flower-seller, known as Old Sal, was there, too, with bunches of exquisite Killarney roses. As the wounded boys were being removed carefully to ambulances, Sal went forward with her roses, showering them on the wounded boys until there was not a Killarney bud left. A well-dressed and apparently affluent citizen, who had witnessed the episode, approached the old flower-seller and, slipping a sovereign into her hand, said patronizingly: "My poor woman, take this. You won't be able to get a meal to-day."

Old Sal, with a promptness which a princess might have envied, flung back the gold, saying: "Keep yer money. D'ye suppose I haven't a right to do my bit for the boys and go without a meal?"

He who loves a cheerful giver must have approved of Old Sal—and from all good hearted well-meaning blunderers Good Lord deliver us.—Toronto Saturday Night.

FALCONBRIDGE IS DEAN.

Mantle of Sir John Boyd Falls upon Him.

Prof. Thos. Trotter of McMaster University, will conduct the funeral services of the late Sir John Boyd to-day.

While it is requested that there be no flowers, wreaths and other floral designs have come from the Society of Upper Canada and certain private sources. At yesterday's convocation of the Society benchers, regard for the departed and regret at his passing was expressed. Sir John Boyd's death causes the mantle of dean of the Supreme Court of Ontario to fall upon Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, who was sworn in 20 years ago to-day in the then Queen's Bench court room, Osgoode Hall.

ALCOHOL RUNS TOO HIGH.

Want Investigation—Double the Price of Drug in United States—Alternative Subjects for Pharmacy Students.

Those responsible for the high cost of alcohol will be called upon to show reason for the recent increase in price, if the Ontario Pharmacy Council has its way. They have passed a resolution asking the Department of Trade and Commerce to make an investigation. The price is about double that in the United States. Other associations will be asked to help.

Hereafter candidates for supplemental examinations for admittance to the Ontario College of Pharmacy will be given the option of writing on geometry, chemistry and physics instead of arithmetic and grammar.

Apprentices who break their contracts with employers for pecuniary reasons will not be allowed the time served when they apply for admittance to the college, unless they had the written consent of their preceptor.

SHE GAINED 18 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dreary, tired nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was in fact, a complete wreck. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my ailments and gained 18 pounds in weight. I can highly recommend this great food cure to all sufferers."

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

Acts 3, Chap. 6th Verse.

And Peter said silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk.

In the preceeding chapter at the 43rd verse we read that many signs and wonders were done by the apostles of which there is no record. Here we have the healing of a man lame from his birth, who was carried daily and laid at the gate of the temple called Beautiful. This gate was added by Herod the Great between the court of the Gentiles and that of Israel. It was thirty cubits high, and fifteen broad, and made of Corinthian brass; it was more splendid and beautiful than those that were covered with silver and gold, magnificent in every part. The cripple was laid daily at this gate where the Apostles and early Christians entered at the hour of prayer to attend the worship of the temple. The man was about forty years old, who asked alms of the people as they passed. It seems that Peter and John had been led by some Divine impulse to work a miracle on this man, so instead of turning away from him as some would have done, they fastened their eyes on him, and said look on us, and with expectation of receiving alms, turned his gaze on Peter and John.

Peter and John had money laid at their feet, but that was for the maintenance of the church. Public trusts ought to be carefully kept; yet those who are poor in this world's goods may be rich in spiritual gifts and graces; we can get better things than silver and gold. Prov. 3rd Chap. 14th verse: They gave Him that which was better, the cure of his disease, for which he would gladly have given silver and gold, to be poor in wealth sometimes is God's best for us, we have not the temptation to set our hearts upon the things that perish, yet we can help others in many ways; Jesus, himself, had not where to lay his head, yet He redeemed a lost world, and gave His life a ransom for many. We see a world in sin and suffering. We can help to wipe away a tear, or give a disciple a cup of cold water in His name. Peter bade him rise up and walk in the name of Jesus of Nazareth and he took him by the right hand and lifted him up. Faith and works go together. Peter's faith in God put strength into his ankle bones. It was a complete cure In his joy and ecstacy he walked and leaped; he entered the temple clinging to Peter and John, showing his gratitude and affection for them, offering up his praises and thanksgivings to God and anxious to hear more about this wonderful Jesus of Nazareth who had Divinely healed him. Those who have found Christ such a friend desire to get better acquainted with Him and want to grow in His love and favour the strength of mind and body that God has given us, should be used in His service, and for His honour and glory.

When this man was healed he was filled with joy and thankfulness, and the people were satisfied with the truth of the miracle. Mercies are perfected when they are sanctified. The people were filled with wonder and amazement, and were in an ecstacy. There seems to be this effect of the pouring out of the spirit, that the people were more affected with the miracles that the apostles wrought than they had been with those of the same kind wrought by Christ Himself. All the people ran togeher to Solomon's Porch to hear further, so that when God puts forth His power the attention of men is excited. These facts proclaimed the efficacy of the gospel, and every true convert is a monument to the honour of the Saviour. How sweet the thought to know that in all our troubles, physical, temporal, and spiritual, the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth can make us whole by faith in Him. This Divine Power has been exercised by God's servants from the earliest ages to the present. In answer to their prayers, wonderful miracles were wrought by Moses in Egypt, at the Red Sea, and in the wilderness, and by Joshua when he commanded the sun to stand still on Gibeon, and the moon in the valley of Ajalon; and the sun stood still and the moon stayed her light until the people had avenged themselves upon their enemies. Samson slew a lion and defeated his enemies single-handed. Elijah, at Mount Carmel, prayed for rain after a drought of three years, and God answered the prayer by sending a great rain. All along the old dispensation God had been working by miracles, and Jesus and His apostles continued to work mighty miracles, giving sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, restoring the dead to life, feeding the multitudes, and dying on the Cross to redeem a lost world, and rising from the grave on the third day, and after forty days ascending up into heaven to the right hand of the Father, till He come again. In the apostles' days the Church possessed the gifts of divine healing, the gifts of tongues and prophecy. How have these gifts and powers been lost? Mr. Wesley says in his notes on the New Testament that the Church has lost these through the lack of faith in God.

Peter Chrough, the healing of the cripple, preached a powerful sermon, proving the divine power of Jesus in the healing of the man and boldly charging home to the chief priests and rulers the death of Jesus, the just and holy one, and calling on them to repent of their sins and be converted that times of refreshing might come from the presence of the Lord. And the number of them that believed were about five thousand, and through the preaching of Jesus and His resurrection from the dead by a humble disciple, whatever good we may have done, or if by the grace of God we have been enabled to fight successfully against temptation and sin, it has all been effected by faith in Jesus' name, so let us go forward in all our future efforts to promote the cause of truth and holiness in the same faith, giving God the glory always. Faith is the gift of God, and without faith it is impossible to please God. The disciples prayed this prayer, Lord increase our faith, this is what the church needs, this is what the world needs. If we had faith as the grain of mustard seed, we could move mountains. We must have large faith before God can use us. I am glad to see that some are taking an interest in these talks. A commercial traveller who has read some of them has asked me to send him a copy of the Examiner with the sermon in it, and a number of the people have spoken to me encouragingly.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

THIRD WAGE RAISE GIVEN.

Cotton Manufacturers Grant Another Increase, Making 27 1-2 Per Cent. for Year.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Nov. 4.—The Cotton Manufacturers' Association of this city voted to-day to grant a ten per cent. increase in pay to their 33,000 operatives, to be effective for a period of six months, beginning December 4.

The increase is the third in this calendar year, and brings the total advance within that time to twenty-seven and one-half per cent. This is the biggest raise within a year that the mill hands have ever received. It will increase the total annual pay roll of the mills from about $17,500,000 to approximately $19,000,000.

The manufacturers' association includes only the cloth mills, but the yarn mills always have followed the action of the cloth mills in the past, so that labour leaders expect the increase to be general throughout the city.

INDUSTRIES REVIVED

Sussex, in England, Once More Turns to Flint Knapping.

A story which tells how old industries, which had died out before the war, have been revived was recently given out by the British Official Press Bureau. The story, under the title "Rural England Renews Its Youth," in part is as follows:

"Many a half-shadowy, old-fashioned trade in England has suddenly become prosperous. The charcoal burners of the Sussex woodlands and the New Forest have been called upon to provide fuel to keep British soldiers warm in their trenches. In the most unexpected of places one comes across Canadian logging camps in miniature, where the woodsman's axe, wielded by stalwart sons of Canada, is heard all day, and in other places the English woodman is busy. Many sawmills, the splash of whose wheels was seldom heard, are now hard at work roughly shaping joists and posts for the trenches, and the shriek of the saw and the puff of the travelling engine surprise many a pheasant by the covert side.

"Little country towns and villages are "doing their bit" in many unexpected ways. In the woodland districts villagers are busy turning out tent pegs, which, though a very small war industry, gives an opportunity to many who would otherwise sigh for work in vain. Clog-making has also received a fillip, through the South of England set least, prefers to pay higher prices for its boots than to adopt the clog.

"Osier gathering is bringing money, and the basket makers have found a new outlet for their wares. At Fingringhoe the War Office has long encouraged the gathering of osiers for the making of fascines for trench supports, and the demand for these has increased tremendously during the last two years. Then, big shells are not easily handled, but they must be carried somehow, so the basket makers have turned their attention to making a carrier for the shells that are smashing a road to victory.

"Flint knapping at Brandon, Suffolk, perhaps the oldest industry in the kingdom, has ever been a warlike trade. In far-off days it doubtless supplied the rough stone lance heads to the warriors of the time, while more recently it provided flints for our early fire arms. Now its flints are used for obtaining a light in the trenches. This is, perhaps, one of the most curious examples of reversion to old-fashioned ways which the great world war has produced."

WROTE A NOVEL, SORRY.

Fiction Used in Evidence as Life Story of Woman.

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Experiencing second matrimonial misadventure at twenty, Mrs. Asta Asche seeks a separation from her second husband, a wealthy importer. Her first marriage occurred when she was fifteen and was annulled two days later. A feature of Mrs. Asche's application for separation was the introduction of a novelette entitled "Justice," written by her and alleged by her husband to be a recital of her own life story. She admits the authorship but wishes the story classed as fiction as far as the court is concerned.

WON THE CROSS.

Hamilton, Nov. 14.—Word has been received in the city to the effect that Dr. Leeming Carr, son of Dr. Leeming Carr, corner of King street and Victoria avenue, had been awarded the military cross for distinguished service in the battle along the Somme.

Dr. Carr, being denied a commission in Canada for some unknown reason, went to England to enlist, and became attached to the West Yorkshires. He proved himself an able officer, as his heroic work shows. No details have yet been received.

Dr. Carr is one of Canada's best rugby half backs, having played on Toornto university and Hamilton Alert teams.

3,500 WOMEN IN BANKS.

When war was declared the number of men of military age employed in the banks of Canada was 14,341. At the beginning of April, 1916, almost 35 per cent. of that number had enlisted. The drain upon the staffs of the banks was particularly heavy during the first three months of this year, and led to the general employment in clerical positions of qualified young women. It is estimated by a bank inspector that at least 3,500 female clerks are now at work in banking offices from one end of Canada to the other. Are they there to stay? Do they want to stay? Those are questions which only the experience of another year or two will answer definitely.

FARMERS GET BIG PRICES.

Prices of farm produce have never been so high in New Brunswick as they are to-day. In some instances the farmers are getting double what they did a few years ago for their farm products. Potatoes are retailing at $3.80 a barrel; butter at 45 and 50 cents; eggs at 50 cents per dozen, and everything else in proportion. This advance in price has been largely due to the demands that are coming from other provinces and from the West Indies. Thousands of barrels of New Brunswick potatoes have been shipped to the western provinces and to Cuba this year. The condition which prevails this year has served to emphasize the strength of the New Brunswick farmer's position.

GOING FAR AFIELD.

Brantford, Nov. 15.—Local stores are getting cabbages from Quebec and potatoes from British Columbia and New Brunswick owing to local shortage.

Good lard is much better than butter for basting roasted meat and for frying.

WHAT SANITATION MEANS

A Discussion of It Leaves Little for the Cities to Congratulate Themselves Upon.

The word sanitation must have a wider meaning in the future, embracing "the degree of vitality it allows" rather "than the number of cases of illness or death it prevents," according to the editor of The New York Medical Journal. This statement is made in connection with comments on a comparison of health in city and country.

"There can be no question that at the present time the sanitary conditions, as we usually understand them to be, of the city are superior to those of the country," he writes. "Certain infectious diseases, such as malaria, typhoid, whooping cough, and influenza, are more prevalent, and the toll of life from these agencies is proportionately greater in the smaller than in the larger communities.

"This fact is obviously due chiefly to ignorance of the laws of sanitation, or rather to lack of intelligent supervision of water and milk supplies and of drainage. These conditions which war against health are being improved, however, and the disparity in healthfulness from these causes is not likely to continue.

"The city has little reason to congratulate itself, even at the present time, upon its superior sanitariness. If it does so it follows the ostrich fashion of tucking its head into the sand of this one item of superiority—its freedom from noxious bacteria.

"Sanitation is a much more inclusive term than we commonly conceive it to be, and it should mean much more than the mere prevention of sickness and premature death from typhoid, diphtheria, or malaria; these aside, the suburbanite fares better than his urban cousin. The most evident proof is the fact that the work of the world, transacted largely within city limits, is directed in something like 80 per cent. of cases by men who were born and spent their early days in the country. The heads of great businesses, of great educational and other institutions, come, in large majority, from the rural regions.

"To say that this depends on the superior mental training received in the country school, or, what is nearer the truth, from the daily experiences of country life, is to admit that the elaborate and apparently superior machinery of city schools has less to do with real education than we commonly suppose. It is alleged that the detail work in business offices and elsewhere in our cities is done with less care than it was two decades ago. Though the opportunity for mental training is not to be despised, it amounts to little if there is a physical basis which neither allows of the full effect of the training at the time it is received, nor its use afterward in the work of life. Capacity for work depends upon two factors, intensity and endurance; the city child shows plenty of intensity, but endurance is lacking.

"Another piece of evidence which condemns the salubrity of the city, is that its own population soon dies out and most constantly be renewed from the country. Whether this is due to the more strenuous life led by the city dweller, to the greater expense of supporting a family, or to other more directly physical causes, the conditions producing the deterioration and termination of life are as much insanitary as those which allow typhoid or tuberculosis germs to flourish and destroy mankind. Sanitation must in future mean more in proportion to the degree of vitality it allows than in the number of cases of illness or of death it prevents.

"The cities contain now most of the population of the land, and have drained and are still draining the rural districts of their most enterprising, and therfore most robust, people. The country may be insanitary on the surface, but the city is insanitary from causes which lie deep, but not too deep to be uncovered. It is bad for a few people in a community to die of certain infectious diseases, but it is worse for the many to live lives on a low level of vigour. A study of the causes of the inferior vitality of the human product of the city, that these unhealthful conditions may be, if possible, corrected, is one of the present needs of our national life."

That Tickling In The Throat

Can Be Quickly Cured by DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

This trouble is most distressing and is caused by a cold settling in the throat. The hard dry cough causes that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation and keeps you from enjoying your night's rest. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks combined with the lung healing virtues of the world-famous Norway pine tree, will give almost instant relief in all cases of this nature.

Mrs. Alex. Durward, Athelstan, Que., writes: "I have used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for a number of years, and find it the only thing that will help me when I have a severe cold. It helps the soreness, and stops the tickling sensation in my throat, which is so irritating. I always use it for both myself and the children, and would not be without it in the house."

The thousands of testimonials we have received during the past twenty five years prove that Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is an excellent remedy for all coughs and colds, so see that you get "Dr. Wood's" when you ask for it.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. at all dealers.

THAT BABY COVER.

Picture of Broad Smiling Youngster is that of a Rochester Boy.

ROCHESTER, Nov. 25.—Laughing out a welcome from the cover of the December number of a woman's magazine is the coloured bust-photograph of John Edward Allen, son of Louis E. Allen, a photographer of 156 Main street east. "Bunny John" Allen's picture was taken when he was only four months of age, and it is said the photograph has been sought after by many publishers.

Mr. Allen has taken his son's picture every month since the youngster was one month old. John is now six years of age and when he is 21 he will have a complete set of his photographs, which few boys have.

Weak, Sickly Folks Regain Health Quickly By New Remedy

A BLOOD-FOOD NOW MANUFACTURED THAT ACCOMPLISHES MARVELS.

Lots of people that were thin and miserable for years have recently been restored by this simple treatment. All you have to do is take two little chocolate-coated tablets with a sip of water at the close of each meal.

The tablets, which, by the way, are called "Ferrosone," are in reality a perfect food for the blood. They contain exactly those elements your blood lacks when it becomes thin, weak, and unhealthy.

This is just the time to use Ferrosone; it excites splendid appetite, gives digestion splendid aid, supplies nourishment for all weak organs. At once you feel buoyant and strong. Nutritious blood courses through your veins, supplies strength, makes you tingle with animation and ambition.

No more headaches.

None of that tired languor.

You feel like doing things because Ferrosone completely renews and strengthens your whole system.

No medicine on earth gives such quick, lasting benefits as Ferrosone. It has raised thousands from downright weakness, brings robust health simply because it contains the fortifying elements that run-down systems require.

One week after using Ferrosone you'll feel like new, you'll appreciate what real robust health means. In a month you'll scarcely credit the push your vigor and spirits have received. Ferrosone is more than a tonic because its work lasts, its benefits remain and are not temporary. It restores health where other treatments fail, and should be used by every man woman and child. Try it, 50c per box or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by all dealers or by mail from The Catarrhosone Co., Kingston, Ontario.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7969

The simplicity and neatness of this utility frock are very striking. Style note is brought in with the diagonal closing of the blouse, which is gathered at the waistline; the fastening may be at the right or the left side.

The collar in contrasting note and the buttons covered to match give smartness to the model. Either a short sleeve with a roll cuff or the full length sleeve finished with a straight band cuff of material may be chosen as correct.

The four-gore skirt, boasting a pocket in the right side and closing at the side front, is joined to a belt that is formed of material in the collar. If you want a plain dress that is raised out of the ordinary you might develop this model in a shield voile that is very popular, wearing [illegible] when duties demand.

Also the most practical wear Indian Head, seersucker, linen, gingham, &c., trimmed with contrasting color, will be very satisfactory.

The dress pattern No. 7,969 is cut in sizes 36 to 46 bust measure. To make it size 38 will require 4¾ yards of 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Two German Zeppelins Destroyed

THE FRANCO--SERBS CAPTURE HILL 1050

Germany Loses Two of Her Air Monsters in Futile Raid

Zeppelins Destroyed and Their Crews Killed---British Aeroplane, Hydroplanes and Anti-Aircraft Guns Sent Baby-killers' Dirigibles Blazing Into the North Sea--Graphic Story of the British Success in Repelling Latest Air Raid---French and Serbs Capure Hill 1050 North-east of Monastir.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 28.—(Special Cable)—Eight thousand feet aloft, above the North Sea, British hydroplanes sent a German Zeppelin hurling down to destruction in flames to-day. A little earlier, anti-aircraft guns, co-operating with an aeroplane, accounted for another German air raider off York and Durham Counties, the great air cruiser also sinking, aflame, into the water.

Graphic details of the British success in repelling the 27th aerial raid made by the Germans, were announced to-day by Lord French. He said the damage in lives or property from bombs dropped by the raiders over York and Durham Counties during the night, was believed slight. The first Zeppelin, which apparently entered over Durham, was pursued by an aeroplane and it turned homeward. Not until the Zeppelin was over the sea off the Durham coast did a British aviator succeed in reaching a vital part. Then he brought the great Dreadnought of the air down, a burst of flame.

The second German Zeppelin entered over the North Midlands, dropping bombs at several places, French's statement said. Then she turned homeward and sought to escape, with British aeroplanes pursuing and anti-aircraft guns peppering her aerial course. Finally the great vessel was apparently struck. The last part of her journey was made with great difficulty, the Zeppelin lamely pressing onward. She was unable to reach the coast by daybreak, but somewhere aloft on the Norfolk coast, the German crew apparently effected repairs.

The machine immediately proceeded eastwards, arising rapidly to a height of 8,000 feet. Then four naval aeroplanes attacked the invader, nine miles at sea. An armed trawler aided in the attack. Finally a shot reached a vital part and the great ship sank from the sky a blazing mass at 6:45 a.m.

Thousands collected on the shore breathlessly witnessed the duel of the forces of the air, water and land, for the shore batteries also poured their fire at one of the sky Dreadnoughts, joining in the fusilade from aeroplanes and armed trawlers. There was a great cheer from these spectators of the combat as the Zeppelin rushed downward, destroyed, like a blazing comet.

It is believed that none of either Zeppelin crew survived.

Germany has lost one or more of her Zeppelin fleet in every attempt she has made at a raid over England since September 3.

Hill No. 1050 Is Taken By Franco-Serbs.

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 28.—Led by French Zouaves Serbian forces captured Hill 1,050, northeast of Monastir, despite the most violent efforts of the Bulgarian-German defenders, the official statement reported to-day.

Four counter attacks by the Teutonic forces were repulsed with heavy losses.

British Lines North of Ypres Shelled

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 28.—Heavy and continuous shelling by the Germans of British positions north of Ypres, with but small casualties to the Allied forces, was reported by General Sir Douglas Haig to-day.

Southeast of Souchez, the British forces exploded a mine, consolidated their positions in a shell crater and repulsed grenade counter attacks by the enemy.

BIG RE-UNION OF PETERBORO' OFFICERS HELD IN ENGLAND

Officers From This City in Various Units of the Expeditionary Force Gather at Folkestone Dinner

TOAST LIST HONOURED

West Sandling Camp, Kent., Eng., Nov. 11.—(Special correspondence to The Examiner).— Last evening, Friday, Nov. 11, over a score of Peterborough officers attached to various units of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, held a most enjoyable re-union and dinner in the Grand Hotel, Folkestone. The affair was a great success and as one Peterborough officer expressed it afterwards, "it was the most pleasant evening any of us spent since we have been over here. It certainly seemed like old times to get together." The Peterborough officers dined in a private dining hall, and the occasion was a delightful one.

The following officers, the majority of them former members of the 57th Regiment, were in attendance: Lt.-Col. E. B. Clegg, 9th Battalion, C.E.F.; Lt.-Col. R. M. Dennistoun, Winnipeg; Lt.-Col. Jas. D. Clarke, 111th Battalion, C.E.F.; Major R. P. Watt, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Major K. G. Loch, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Major A. W. McPherson, O. C. Canadian Convalescent Hospital, Bromley; Major A. G. Carruthers, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Major J. C. Davidson, Chaplain Ontario Military Hospital, Orpington; Major N. H. Sutton, Medical Officer at Margate; Major Gerald R. Hall, Canadian Field Artillery; Capt. J. E. R. Munro, 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.; Capt. J. H. Eastwood, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Capt. J. Rollins, 93rd Battalion, C.E.F.; Capt. W. G. Hall, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Capt. G. Mowat, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Capt. E. M. Best, Y.M.C.A. military representative; Capt. C. P. Fee, C.F.A., Ross Barracks; Lieut. Claude Rogers, Supply Column, on leave from France; Lieut. T. A. Morrow, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Lieut. W. W. Armstrong, 39th Battalion, C.E.F.; Lieut. C. A. Henry, late of 109th Lindsay Battalion and now with C.A.S.C.; Lieut. Wilfred Huycke, late of 57th Battalion, now with C.F.A.

At the dinner, telegrams of regret at their inability to be present were read from Lt.-Col. Johnston and Capt. J. H. Burnham, of the 93rd Battalion, who were in London on business, and from Lieut. Will Eastwood of the Flying Corps. Duties also kept Capt. Widdifield, Marling and Bygott, and Lieut. Dupuy away, while other Peterborough officers who were unable to attend were Capt. Maurice Park and Lieut. W. W. Stretton, both with the Flying Corps.

Major R. P. Watt acted as president, and Major K. G. Loch as vice-president during the dinner, and Lt.-Col. Clegg as chairman during the musical part of the programme. The following toast list was enthusiastically honoured:

"The King," by President and Vice-President.

"The British Empire," proposed by Lt.-Col. Clegg, responded to by Major McPherson.

"Canada," proposed by Lt.-Col. Clarke, responded to by Major Davidson.

"The Canadian Expeditionary Force," proposed by Major G. R. Hall, responded to by Lt.-Col. Dennistoun.

During the musical programme, Majors Watt and McPherson contributed the song numbers that made their names famous in the old mess of the 57th Regiment.

The evening was brought to a close at 11 p.m. with the singing of God Save the King and a hearty handshake before the officers parted to take their trains for the different centres they now call home.

$10,000 FOR "Y" WAR WORK

Campaign will be Launched in Peterboro this Week—Thrilling Adresses by Y. M. C. A. Representatives from the Front.

MEETING TO-MORROW NIGHT

The grand work that the Y.M.C.A. military representatives are doing among Canadian troops at the front, and in training, was vividly laid before three Peterborough audiences yesterday, as a preliminary to a whirlwind campaign to raise, by voluntary subscriptions $10,000 in Peterborough, to support the efforts of the Y. M. C. A. In the afternoon Capt. H. A. Pearson addressed a crowded and representative women's meeting in the Public Library.

Later Capts. Pearson, Bishop and Jones, all three Y.M.C.A. military representatives, spoke to a big gathering of business and professional men at a banquet at the Oriental hotel, and afterwards similar addresses were given at the Peterborough Club. The net result was a great revival of interest in the work of the Y.M.C.A. and the decision to hold a meeting in the Patriotic Fund offices, Simcoe street, to organize a campaign.

A report of the women's meeting is given elsewhere in this issue.

At the banquet in the Oriental, which was arranged by the Retail Merchants' Association and at which Mr. W. G. Morrow presided, there was a very representative attendance.

Capt. H. A. Pearson, who is an old Peterborough boy, and who was the first Canadian Y.M.C.A. representative in France, gave a thrilling address, in which he described the growth of the Y.M.C.A. work among the troops. He held the audience spell bound as he described incident after incident, his description of the terrible battle of Ypres, in April, 1915, and the Battle of Sanctuary Wood, in June of this year, being vivid in the extreme. Capt. Pearson told of the various ways in which the Y.M.C.A. is helping the boys at the front.

Capt. Bishop, Y.M.C.A. representative, who has just returned from the Somme front, was equally eloquent and effective. His address was a most interesting one as he described the work of the Canadians on the Somme, and told how the Y. M. C. A. brought cheer and comfort to the troops. The Canadians took over a part of the line that had first been occupied by Imperial troops and later by the Australians. There had been no Y.M.C.A. building there, but when the Canadians were transferred to that point the Canadian Y. M. C. A. got busy and before the three Canadian divisions arrived 33 Canadian Y.M.C.A. huts had been erected and the men of the triangle were ready. He told of the Y.M.C.A. gramaphone in the trenches and of the canteens which supplied refreshments free of charge to the wounded troops as they came out of the trenches.

Capt. T. W. Jones followed with another interesting address on the general work of the Y.M.C.A.

Afterwards, at the Patriotic Club, which was crowded, the guests including the officers of the 247th Battalion, similar addresses were given and were enthusiastically received.

Mr. T. F. Matthews and Judge Huycke heartily endorsed the work of the Y.M.C.A. as outlined by the speakers, and Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Capt. O'Flynn of the 247th told from practical experience how important it was that the minds of the men at the front should be diverted from the gruesome side as much as possible, and how essential amusements and comforts were.

It was decided to hold a meeting on Wednesday night in the Patriotic Fund offices, Simcoe street, to organize a campaign for $10,000, which, it is felt, should be Peterborough's share towards the great work. Mr. W. R. Morris was appointed Secretary-Treasurer of the committee.

Two More Peterboro' Soldiers' Appear On The List of Wounded

Pte. F. J. Leether Formerly of the 93rd Battalion and Pte. T. C. Munden on Casualty List--247th Battalion Hockey Team is Authorized---Lieut. Hetherington, 2nd Battalion Officer, Wounded on the Somme, in City---To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Two more Peterborough boys appear on the wounded list to-day. While official particulars are given of two other cases which have been unofficially reported previously.

Mrs. Elizabeth Madely, 108 Lansdowne street, received official word this morning that Pte. Francis Jame Leether, of the Mounted Rifles is officially reported admitted to No. 1 Field Ambulance depot, Oct. 12th, suffering from a gun shot wound in the foot. Pte. Leether was one of the first men to enlist in Peterborough with the 93rd Battalion. He was a member of A company and on reaching England was transferred in a draft to the Canadian Mounted Rifles. He is the thirty-first 93rd man to be reported killed or wounded.

Mr. T. J. Munden, Dunlop street, has received official word that his son, Pte. Thos. James Charles Munden is officially reported admitted to the Divisional Rest Station, Sept. 30th, suffering from contusion.

The Examiner stated yesterday that Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Jackson, 127 Maud street, had been informed by the Canadian Red Cross that their son Pte. James Jackson, Canadian Infantry, was a prisoner in Dulmen, Germany. To-day they received a message from the officer in charge of records at Ottawa to the same effect.

Although Mr. Edward Payne, 215 Carlyle avenue, has known of the death in action of his son, Pte. William Edward Payne, formerly of the 50th Battalion, for over a month, and a memorial service has been held in memory of the dead soldier, the official message from Ottawa did not arrive until to-day. It stated that Pte. Payne was killed between Oct. 1st and 2nd.

To-days' Orders.

Daily orders by Lt.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, commanding 247th Battalion, C.E.F., for Tuesday, Nov. 28th, 1911:

(1) PARADE.— All officers, N.C.O.'s and men except those specially employed, will parade in the drill hall at 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

(2) DUTIES—Orderly officer for Tuesday, Lieut. R. G. Johnston; next for duty, Lieut. A. H. Cameron.

(3) DISCHARGED —No. 1083019 Pte. S. A. Boyd is discharged as of Nov. 2, 1916.

E. B. Brooks, Lieut.
And Act. Adjt. O.C. 247th Bn., C.E.F.

A cable from England announces that Lieut. F. S. Dupuy of the 93rd Battalion has gone to France. Lieut. Dupuy, who was the platoon commander of No. 5 platoon, B company, has been doing some special musketry work in England.

Pte. Victor Carton, a Peterborough member of the 21st Battalion, has been invalided to England and is now at West Sandling Camp.

Mrs. Bert Mason, of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, has received the following card from Pte. Thos. Casey, a Peterborough prisoner of war in Germany:

Friedrichsfeld, Oct. 5.

Dear Friend,--I received your parcel last week and am very thankful to you for it. It was all good—nothing was spoiled. My address is on this card. If you are sending any more you will have my address.

I remain, your friend,
(Pte.) Thos. Casey.

His address is—
Pte. Thos. Casey,

247th Hockey Team.

At an enthusiastic meeting held yesterday afternoon at the armouries the 247th Battalion organized a hockey club and decided to enter a team in the intermediate series of the O. H. A. The following officers were elected:

President—Lt.-Col. Ackerman.
1st Vice-Pres.—Capt. Thompson.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Sergt.-Major Edger.
Sec.-Treas.—Lieut. Strickland.
Manager—Lieut. Hayes.
Executive committee — Capt. O'Flynn, Capt. Belton, Lieut. Brooks, Sergt.-Major Latimer, Pte. Cole.

Lieut. Hayes will represent the 247th at the annual meeting of the O.H.A. in Toronto on Saturday.

Lieut. Hetherington of Fenelon Falls, who enlisted with the 2nd Canadian Battalion as a private and was promoted to a commission in the field, was a visitor at the armouries this morning, and was warmly received by Lt.-Col. Ackerman and Capt. O'Flynn. Lieut. Hetherington was wounded in the fighting on the Somme front on September 9th, being blown up by a shell, and is home on a short furlough. He was at the front from the first arrival of the Canadian forces, and was with Lieut. Arthur Ackerman a short time before the latter was fatally injured.

A recruiting meeting in aid of the 247th Battalion, will be held at Bancroft on Thursday night. Lt.-Col. Ackerman will deliver an address.

Pte. T. Davis, an East City member of the 93rd Battalion, arrived home last evening, having been invalided from England. Pte. Davis, whose home is on Burnham street, and who was one of the first men to join the 93rd, was so unfortunate as to be stricken with pleurisy, which has left him unfit for military service. He will have to undergo further treatment in Canada.

AMERIQUE IS STILL MISSING

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 28.—Nothing has been heard to-day of the steamer Amerique, which is reported to have sent wireless calls for aid last night. A steamer arriving at North Sydney, which at first was reported to be the Amerique, proved to be the Prospero, which had been ashore at Fisk Point.

Available shipping records list no ship by the name of Amerique.

Will Authorize the Issuance of Debentures to Amount of Sixty Thousand Dollars —Monthly Requirement Over Seven Thousand Dollars—Trades and Labour Council Object.

THE DISCUSSION

The proposal to levy a municipal tax to raise sixty thousand dollars for the Patriotic Fund was unanimously endorsed by the City Council at a special meeting held last evening. It fell to the lot of the Trades and Labour Council to register the one objection to this method of raising funds for Patriotic purposes. The Labour council is of the opinion that the burden of supporting the Patriotic Fund should rest with the Government. Whether or not the labour men lacked the courage of their convictions, they failed to have a representative at the meeting with the result that the communication went by the Board or in municipal parlance it was "received".

MR. O'CONNELL'S ADDRESS.

Mr. D. O'Connell, as a member of a representative gathering of citizens and others representing the Peterborough Patriotic Association, explained in the following terms the circumstances, concerning the proposed effort to raise funds for the Patriotic Fund.

The deputation which you see here to-night, said Mr. O'Connell represents the Peterborough Patriotic Fund Association. For the last two years the members of the association have charged themselves with raising money for patriotic purposes. The first year of the fund, some fifty-two thousand dollars was raised and the following year, sixty-three thousand dollars was secured for the same purpose.

The association together with the various committees was organized during the first year of the war. The work has entailed a great deal of labour on the part of the members, the administration of the fund has received the commendation of the public. The total amount paid by the city and county to the central committee now amounts to one hundred and two thousand dollars. The monthly requirement is about seven thousand five hundred dollars. In order to discharge our obligations to the men who have enlisted, the sum of one hundred thousand dollars will be required for the ensuing year.

APPEAL TO THE COUNCIL.

Considerable time and consideration was given to the question of raising this money. Having gone through previous campaigns for funds for patriotic purposes, the members of the committee came to the conclusion after mature and deliberate consideration that there was only one thing before them to do under the circumstances, and that was to come to the City Council for assistance, and to ask the Council to fix a municipal tax sufficient to cover the required amount. It was agreed that a fair proportion of the $100,000 for the country would be forty per cent. and for the city about sixty per cent. of the total amount. The county's assessment amounts to nine million dollars and the city's assessment is estimated at three and a half million dollars. Universal taxation is not proposed to levy would practically affect the tenant and landlord. To get at another class who could not come under this head, the Council is to Legislature would be asked to impose a minimum income tax of one thousand dollars a year.

SLOW ASSAULT ON HIGH PRICES.

We can get an illuminating idea of how the Dominion Government's order-in-Council provides (ostensibly) means for dealing with high prices of food, by having regard to the steps to be taken. The Toronto Star thus summarizes the explanation of Hon. I. B. Lucas, Attorney-General of Ontario, as to the round-about operation of the Order-in-Council:

First — The Municipal Council passes a resolution declaring the opinion that excessive prices are being demanded, and calling upon the dealers in the necessities of life that are affected to make a return as to the amount they hold, how they obtained it, and what prices they are selling at.

Second—Having received the return, the Council is to decide whether further new investigation is necessary. If so they pass another resolution and notify the Minister of Labour at Ottawa.

Third—The Minister of Labour with the return before him, has power to take his time to name a commissioner to investigate.

Fourth — The investigator investigates and reports. If an offence is disclosed, the Minister transmits the report to the Attorney-General. Then the Attorney-General prosecutes.

Each of these four steps may, and probably will take a month or two, and when the matter gets to the Attorney-General's department, it will, according to precedent, be in cold storage for months. Meanwhile the public may starve, or go bankrupt. The way provided seems to be an admirable way of not doing it. If the consumer waits for relief from the pinch and punch of high prices, through these barbed-wire, red-tape, entanglements, he will get the benefit of a spare dish or the trembling condition of a lean purse. The Star is quite justified in remarking that the above complicated and slow-moving procedure—to nowhere—is "a grand illustration of the methods of the circumlocution officer or of the cat that 'walk or circumspectly' on the wall covered with broken bottles. It is pussy-footing as a fine art."

If it were not high treason, it might be suggested that the Government can make a direct way to some little relief by opening the way to a little "truck and trade" with our neighbors, who may have an exportable surplus of some things we are short of. But the protective tariff that helps to enrich us by making us pay the high prices that some food producers, like, say, the Canners' Combine, exact to the limit, that customs duties may permit, may be too sacred to touch, but it may be permissible to show the manner in which the high duty permits things to be worked, or some of its results. Hon. H. S. Ross, K.C., Montreal, addressing the Housewives' League of that city, stated that the Fruit Exchange in Montreal during the past summer, imported one hundred cases of fruit, on which they paid more duty than the fruit cost in the United States, and in addition the cost of carriage was included in the price to the consumer. The duty on early vegetables costs more than the articles themselves. On tinned tomatoes the duty is 37 per cent., and that helps the Canners' Combine which can buy tomatoes during the season for 5 cents per bushel, to charge the big prices of this commodity now. An Ottawa wholesaler recently brought in of tinned tomatoes, on which was paid in duty $550. This, it is needless to say, was charged to the consumers.

Of course if the duty were removed from green vegetables—30 per cent., plus a war tax of 7 1-2 per cent.; and from potatoes—20 cents per bushel, plus a war tax of 7 1-2 per cent.; and from tinned tomatoes, 37 per cent., there would be great danger of the consumer getting such goods at a reasonable cost; and there would also be danger that the food combines would have to bring down prices—strike off the profits amounting to the amount of duty, and be satisfied with a reasonable profit, a living profit for themselves, and a chance of living to the consumer. The Government might do this as a temporary expedient to give even a slight measure of relief to the high-paying public. The Government, too, might get down the Combines Act, dust it and look it over. It might be discovered that certain food producers and food manufacturers are breaking the law, and that the penalty it provides, instead of being imposed upon the offenders, is imposed in the shape of fines (high prices) upon the unoffending and long-suffering householders, who are thus the victims of constructive robbery

Motives That Prompted Canada To Throw Herself Into This War

Two things concerning Canada and its relations to this world-war multitudes of Americans in the United States do not really know, and they find it almost impossible to appreciate.

One is the fact, the plain and undeniable fact, that, in going into this war in Europe, Canada at the very first went as a free nation, without command, without compulsion, without even request from Britain; that of the hundreds of millions of dollars of Canadian money which the war has cost and will yet cost, every dollar of it goes by the vote of Canada's own responsible Government and Parliament, and by the free-will offerings of Canadian municipalities and citizens; and that of the nearly 400,000 Canadian soldiers in khaki not one was a conscript. That elementary fact in Canada's national self-government is not even yet understood by thousands of Americans who on most other points are intelligent and informed as regards both their own country and their own continent.

To be sure, the travelled American, the observant, the student of international affairs, knows. But, despite all their newspapers and magazines and despite the historical intelligence and accuracy of their newest textbooks, the rank and file, in the North as well as in the South, in the East as well as in the West, do not know. They are only beginning to understand. And, understanding, they respond with a depth of emotion and a sincerity of interest which give meaning and purpose to our common North American citizenship.

The other fact, also fundamental and of the very essence of Canada's democracy, is this: the supreme motive, the first and enduring impulse which sent Canada as a nation into this war and to the European battle-fronts was not merely the defence of the territory and integrity of the British Isles, but also—and this adds dynamic and direction to Canadian effort—the defence of Belgium's rights the ejection of Belgium's enemies, the restoration of Belgium's integrity. It is not Britain alone. It is Belgium as well. Canadian soldiers have gone to Europe, and will keep on going to the very last, to fight and to fall on the fields of France and of Flanders, not for Canada's sake alone or Britain's, but for the sake of the little peoples everywhere whose ideal of freedom and whose crime was innocence. At Ypres, at the Somme, and at a score of consecrated battlefields in Europe, Canada has stood a free nation as the one national representative of the true meaning and the real message of the democracy of North America.

Viscount Grey, in his response to the Belgian Minister in London, published in The Globe on Saturday, spoke the purpose, not of his Majesty's Government alone, but of all the King's Dominions, when he said: "They will use their utmost power to bring the war to speedy and successful conclusion, and thus liberate Belgium, once for all, from the dangers which continually menace her as long as the enemy remains in occupation of her territory."

When Germany, in defiance of international law and of treaty obligation, invaded Belgian territory to strike at France, the whole democracy of the British Commonwealth the world over was challenged and defied. Canada, as a democratic nation took up that challenge. Until that defiance is wiped out and democracy justified there can be no turning back. The blow first fell on Belgium. But it was meant for democracy and liberty everywhere. In the black hearts that planned it, it was meant for North America. It was meant for Canada. For the sake of Belgium first, Canada, and all the free peoples of the British breed the world over, and glorious old Britain herself, mother of freedom and of free nations, with her youth renewed—for the sake of Belgium goes up the British answer. —The Globe.

SURGEONS ARE WORTHY OF ALL HONOURS

Lord Northcliffe writes from Paris to the London Times:

If there were still degrees of chivalry, the highest award should be accorded the members of the medical profession who forsook lucrative practises in London, Melbourne and Montreal in a great rally of self-sacrifice. Figures on the casualties among them bring home to those who have only the big hospital idea of a war doctor the sad facts that should lead to a due understanding of this not sufficiently known body of Knights Templar engaged in a great crusade.

In the last three months the Royal Army Medical Corps alone had 53 officers killed and 208 wounded; the non-commissioned officers, 260 men killed and 1,212 wounded.

I shall first describe a regimental aid post. A doctor has to-day as his only shelter one of his own trenches and any little part that may remain of a captured German trench. There is no other covering. Fine young men, with English, Scotch, Irish, Canadian or Australian accent stand unarmed in these posts and work with intensity and celerity. Their speed eclipses even that of the surgeons of the London operating hospitals. Stretcher bearers stagger in with their load. There is a lightning diagnosis, antiseptic application, bandaging, a hastily written label tied on the man's breast, and the wounded man is borne off to the next stage, the advanced dressing station is in a dug out, walking wounded collecting in a station of tents.

In one tent I saw a wounded officer famous the world over as a big game hunter and marred as the result of a miraculous escape from an African elephant, who though covered with blood had only one anxiety, to have his wound dressed, get a bath and return to his men in time for the next stunt, to use an abominable Americanism which has grown weed-like into our war language.

The next station is the field operating theatre, then the casualty clearing station, where the wounded first meet the women nurses; next the hospital trains, and the last base hospitals.

Our hospitals in France are a world of their own. I do not know how many men and women they employ, but I should say more than one hundred thousand.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

Allan Preston of North Monaghan claims damages from the city as a result of an accident in which a horse was killed on Simcoe street a few days ago. The accident is attributed to an obstruction on the street, which it is claimed belongs to the local gas company. The matter will be dealt with by the Legal Committee.

DEFECTIVE WIRING.

H. A. Fife, local inspector for the Ontario Hydro Power Commission reports defects in the electric wiring in connection with the illuminated refuse boxes. His communication to the council, closes with the request that the boxes be properly wired before the snow comes.

"CONSIDERATION" PROMISED

The council is in receipt of a letter from Premier Borden, replying to Peterborough's claim for senatorial representation and promising "consideration."

COMMITTEE NAMED.

At last night's meeting of the council Mayor Duffus assured the Aldermen that he was still interested in the question of reducing the high cost of living and in order to create a definite working organization, would assign the matter to the Legal Committee with power to conduct further enquiries into the matter. Some definite action is expected from the Government in the near future.

THE CHAMBERLEN.

At last night's meeting of the City Council Ald. Duncan wanted to know if it was the Council's intention to proceed with the construction of a sewer on Chamberlen street. Ald. McIntyre replied in the affirmative and at request of Ald. Edgar, produced an estimate of the cost which is in the neighborhood of $3,000. Ald. Duncan thought that this work might be left over until such time as the rest of the sewer is completed and a suitable outlet provided.

Mayor Duffus said that the sewer had been promised to the people on Chamberlen street and he felt that the work should be proceeded with. Ald. McIntyre stated positively that the work would be carried out this year.

Ald. Duncan stated that the sewer would cost a great deal more money once the frost was in the ground. Ald. McIntyre charged Ald. Duncan with having other designs in connection with the work. Mayor Duffus intercepted a promising argument with the suggestion that the work be proceeded with.

THE CITY WILL.

In a report presented by Ald. Dobbin to Ald. McIntyre, Chairman of the Board of Works at a meeting of the City Council held last evening the necessity of establishing one or more municipal skating rinks was clearly defined. On motion of Ald. Stratton it was decided to establish three rinks as follows: One in Inverlee Park, one at the corner of Stewart and Wolfe streets, and one at the corner of Weller and Walnut streets. Permission to establish a rink on the last named property was given by Mr G. W. Morrow. The total cost for the entire season of the establishment and maintenance of three rinks will be in the neighborhood of $300. The rinks will be open about Christmas. At first it was proposed to establish one of the rinks on the site of the proposed new Post Office at the corner of George and Sherbrooke streets but Ald. Edgar favoured a site more to the southwest of the South Ward so as to accommodate a thickly populated district.

Belated Rule On Aliens Has Reached Kitchener

ALIEN ENEMIES WHO DEFY COMMAND LIABLE TO A PRISON TERM.

Kitchener, November 28. — Notwithstanding that an order-in-council was passed last September respecting alien enemies a copy has just reached the police headquarters, and is of importance because it affects the 650 aliens who are registered with the chief of police.

Hereafter all alien enemies who are found guilty of a breach of their undertaking will not be interned, but will be liable to six months imprisonment, or a fine of $200, or both.

Re The Problem of "Continuing The Presbyterian Church in Canada"

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The Union Committee has published widely a special deliverance against the Convocation, which met recently in Toronto and resolved as to its "duty to continue the Presbyterian Church."

(1) The Committee's first statement is that "Union is not an ending of the Presbyterian Church."

Fiction, so patent, answers itself: If Britain were brought under one world dominant sway, as some in Europe are seeking, the people would continue, but the British Empire, with all that it means, would end. If our Church were merged into a great Church combine, under one central bureaucratic control, the people would continue, but the Presbyterian Church would be no more.

(2) Its second statement is that in the proposed union there would not be "a surrender of any vital belief or principle of government."

On the contrary, there would be an entire surrender of the foundation principle of obligation on the part of any one to any system of Scripture Truth of Church government.

As to belief, our ministers and elders and members now profess acceptance of the system of Bible truth set forth in the Standards of the Presbyterian Church. In the proposed new Church there is no pledge on the part of minister, office-bearer, or member to any system of Scripture truth.

Such a "surrender" would open wide the door for error, and at a time when the Church needs to be more definite rather than less so in her testimony to the great truths of Christianity.

As to government, our ministers and elders pledge themselves that, as office-bearers in the Presbyterian Church they will "maintain and defend" its system of Government. In the proposed new Church no one is pledged to any system of Church Government.

In the Presbyterian Church one-half the members of Presbytery, Synod and Assembly consists of ordained elders, solemnly pledged, by vows similar to those of the ministry, to the system of doctrine and government of "this Church," and ordained for life to their sacred office.

In the proposed new Church the laymen in Presbytery and Synod (or Conference), and Assembly (or General Council), are simply required to be members of the Church, and these are to be admitted to membership without pledged acceptance of any system of truth or any form of government.

Indeed it is doubtful whether the laymen of the highest Court require even to be members of the Church. What is said is that "The General Council shall consist of an equal number of ministers and non-ministerial representatives," and those representatives will not be chosen by the people.

In the calling and settlement of ministers there is "surrender" to the will of an irresponsible and arbitrary settlement committee, of much of the liberty we now enjoy.

(3) Its third statement is that "the new Church will be a unique expression of the unity of spirit between the Christian denominations."

It would certainly be "unique" as an expression of Christian Unity, for it has caused more alienation and division and strife in our own Church in the last five years than there has been between the different Protestant denominations in all Canadian history.

(4) Its fourth statement is that the proposed Union will "remove rivalries, economize and conserve resources, and set free many more workers for the foreign field."

This is pure assertion without the slightest foundation. The attempt to force a merger will but stir up strife and division, and will lessen the amount given to missions, as proved by the experiences of the few Union congregations already formed.

(5) Its fifth statement regrets that the recent Convocation "awakened suspicion and created prejudice by suggesting that the money of the Church had been misappropriated," and states that "nothing could be farther from the truth, as shown by the published statement of the Treasurer of the Church."

On the contrary, the published statement of the Treasurer of the Church confirms the fact that many thousands of dollars given for the Mission Funds have been diverted to this Union Movement, a diversion which not even the General Assembly had a right to make.

It was often to the Assembly to create a Special Fund for the purpose, and to let those contribute who would do so, but no Church Court has a right to divert to this object what the people have entrusted to it for Missions.

(6) Its sixth statement is that two votes of the people were taken, and that both votes gave a majority for union.

But it omits to state why a second vote was taken. It omits to state that at the outset, in 1905, the Assembly told the people that a union of the churches "must carry the consent of the entire membership"; that at the first vote, in 1911, out of a membership of 298 thousand, 115 thousand voted for union, and 50 thousand against it; that the Assembly halted the movement owing to the "extent of the minority"; that after four years a second vote was taken, to "secure" the hoped-for "practically unanimous action," which had been declared necessary; that at this second vote, out of an increased membership of 338 thousand, 123 thousand voted for union, and 78 thousand against it; and that the Union Committee and the Assembly entirely ignored that increased opposition. This withholding of the key facts of the situation would discredit any cause in a civil court.

(7) Its closing statement is that the Church will be "true to herself" and "keep faith with the other Churches," and go on after the war to "consummate the Union."

As to keeping faith with the other Churches, we are under no obligation to any other Church. At the request of another Church we entered into negotiations, and nothing more. There is nothing in which we have failed to keep faith to the uttermost.

But what of "keeping faith" with our own people? What of the understandings given them by the Assembly in 1905, 1912, and 1915, that the condition of going forward must be "practically unanimous action," and asking and receiving their vote upon that understanding?

To attempt coercion; to transgress the Constitutional limits of the Assembly's power; to fail to "keep faith" with the people of our own Church, after the assured understandings given them to the contrary would be the darkest, saddest, most immoral page in the history of any Protestant Church in Canada; and a large part of the Presbyterian Church, believing that Christ's Kingdom cannot be builded upon unrighteousness, has declared its purpose to have no share in a new Church, whose corner stone would ever bear, deep graven "unkept faith."

3,219,000 Women At Work in England

Employed Outside Their Homes in Many Pursuits—766,000 Have Replaced Men

LONDON, Nov. 27.—The saying that woman's place is in the home has little application in war time. There are now in the British Isles 3,219,000 women employed outside their own homes. During the first two years of war the increase of women workers exclusive of purely feminine occupations, was 866,000. Of these 766,000 directly replaced male labor. In other words, more than three-quarters of million women left their homes to release that number of men for military service. In most instances the women went into the munition plants, where a considerable number of them have given up their lives in "doing their bit."

There seems to be no limit to the class of work women can do. At first it seemed strange to see girl conductors on the buses, girl window cleaners, van drivers, and messengers. But as the war progressed the field broadened, and now even in building, mining and quarrying scores of women are employed.

In most of the factories and shops the breweries and the railway yards, jumpers and regulation overalls are the approved costume. The bus and tram conductors are jauntly in their neat blue tunics, and skirts reach just below the knees—low enough to overlap close-fitting black leather puttees. There is seldom a glimpse of stockings. The bus companies issued an order recently that no silk hosiery should be worn.

The number of women employed in railway work has increased more than 200 per cent. There are women ticket collectors, porters, engine cleaners and workshop laborers. In Glasgow and some other cities women are being tried out as tram drivers or motorwomen.

The number of women recruited to industrial occupations between July, 1914, and July, 1916, was 362,000. Of this number 263,000 directly replaced men. In commercial occupations the increase in women workers was 198,000. The increase of women workers in hotels and places of entertainment is only 12,000.

In agriculture 66,000 more women are working steadily to-day than in July, 1914. In 1914 there were only 8,000 women employed in Government arsenals and dockyards. Now there are over 20,000. The English breweries formerly employed 8,000 women. Now they have 18,000.

BROTHERHOOD OF KARTERIA SENT CABLEGRAM OF CONGRATULATION AND SUPPORT.

If the promises of ex-Premier Venizelos of Greece hold good, Toronto will shortly be invaded with Greek recruiting officers. According to Mr. E. Dagonas, president of the Brotherhood of "Karteria" in Toronto the Greek revolutionary leader has promised to send his officers to Toronto in the hope of securing men for his volunteer army.

The Brotherhood of "Karteria" was organized among the Greeks of Toronto about a month ago, and now have a membership of nearly 200. In answer to their cablegram of congratulation and support, they have received the following reply signed by Venizelos, Admiral Coundouriotis and former Chief of Staff Dangelis:

"Addressing the Brotherhood of Karteria and the Greek community of Toronto, our sincere thanks and congratulations for expressing their patriotic sentiments; expression of such sentiments renders the difficult task which we assume much easier.

"We accept with gratitude the precious co-operation of all good patriots looking to the triumph of the noble cause which we champion.

New French Taxes To Yield $120,000,000

Increases Proposed on Incomes, Tobacco, Letter Postage, Coffee, Chocolate and Tea.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—New taxes, which it is estimated will yield 600,000,000f. ($120,000,000), have been decided on by the Appropriation Committee of the Chamber of Deputies after many weeks of consideration.

Among the measures will be an increase of the income tax from two to five per cent., the taxes on the yield from securities from four to five per cent., and on sugar from twenty-five to forty francs per metric hundredweight.

There will be increases also in the taxes on tobacco, wine, beef, letter postage, coffee, chocolate, tea, vanilla, mineral waters and a great variety of other articles and also upon horses, vehicles, billiards and dogs.

FRANCE WILLING TO FAST

Promise of One Meatless Day Has No Terrors for the Population.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The question of the new food controller, whom some are pleased to call a dictator, is a leading topic of the day, coupled with stringent economic measures now under consideration, such as meatless days, the suppression of fancy pastry, increased inland postal rates, and the income tax.

The question of meatless days is readily accepted as a rule, for, as one writer says, France for centuries fasted one day a week and was none the worse for it.

The general note sounded by editorial writers is that the country is prepared for all and any sacrifices which are shown to be necessary as measures of foresight and not hindsight.

KICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

BUSINESS GIRLS' CLUB HAS HAD A SUCCESSFUL YEAR

Local Organization Has Done Splendid Work For the Red Cross, Prisoners of War and Other Worthy Causes—A Creditable Report

Following is the second annual report of the Business Girls' Club for year ending November 17th, 1916:

At the first meeting of the year the girls were asked to give their contributions to the Red Cross Society through the Club, and to give at least one night a week to work at the Red Cross rooms. To date the contributions have amounted to seventy-five dollars which has been forwarded to the local society.

In February the Club made application to become affiliated with the local Council of Women, which application was duly accepted.

Applications had been made for the adoption of two Belgian and two British prisoners of war, and upon receiving acceptances of same ninety dollars was forwarded to Mr. Fane Sewell, Toronto Secretary of the Overseas Club, for which purpose the Shamrock tea was held in March, the Hallowe'en tea in October, and the sale of ice cream from the booths on the De Laval and the Bonner-Worth Co. annual excursions in August and September respectively. The total amount realized on these occasions amounted to about one hundred and seventy-three dollars.

Christmas boxes for the four prisoners of war were forwarded early in November.

The Club regretted the resignation of Mrs. Travers upon her removal from the city as she had always given such material assistance to anything undertaken by the club. However, we feel very fortunate in obtaining the consent of Mrs. F. C. Neal to act as our honorary president.

Eleven meetings were held during the year, nine business meetings, one picnic at Jackson Park, and a tennis tea on the courts of the Brinton Carpet Co. for which pleasure the girls wish to thank Mr. Brock, the manager.

The average attendance during the year was twenty-one. The members of the Club extend hearty thanks to the De Laval Co. and the Bonner-Worth Co. for the use of the booth on their excursions, to Mr. Might for the use of the tea-room on two occasions, to the Daughters of the Empire for dishes, to the J. M. Greene Co. for the Edison Diamond Disc, to Bellaghem's for chairs and tables, and to all who assisted them in any way during the year—especially the press for their uniform courtesy and kindness in inserting notices, etc.

(Signed) Verona Guthrie,
Retiring Secretary.

Following are the officers for the coming year:

CAPTAIN H. A. PEARSON'S INTERESTING ADDRESS TO WOMEN OF PETERBOROUGH

Y. M. C. A. Representative Says Socks and Cakes are Needed but they can be Bought, While a Letter Can't—Vivid Description of Conditions at the Front is Given.

The Public Library auditorium was crowded yesterday afternoon by representatives of the different Women's societies engaged in war work to hear Capt. H. A. Pearson, the former Peterborough boy who, for nearly two years was a Y.M.C.A. representative at the front.

Mrs. J. A. Aylmer was in the chair.

Every action at home has a re-action at the front, said Capt. Pearson, in beginning his address. If the mothers, wives and friends of the boys at the front could realize the value of a letter, a photo, a little snap-shot of any thing or person at home they would indeed be gratified. Socks and cakes are needed badly; but they can be bought; a letter can not. In the trenches four days and out for four more, tends, and does, sometimes, make the men despondent. I have seen them so down-hearted that they have wondered if merely putting their heads above the trench would not be preferable to the monotony of the daily routine, but the thought that next day meant messages from home, perhaps a parcel, has many a time saved them, and when they do come, it is touching how they are received. Many a man have I seen with his parcel left undisturbed, because the mere packing was an evidence of home. Women are busy. They don't waste many a minute not knitting, but if they knew every stitch in those socks, every item in the parcel is worth its weight in gold, does it not repay them? Often the mails are held up; horses and cars are needed for the ammunition; then it is hard to keep up the spirits of the men; they can see the little mounds of their comrades sleeping in the hill and wonder. A year ago it was worse; we were short of ammunition. The Germans were decidedly not. News came of the strike in Clyde; of the trouble in Ireland. They felt it a hopeless job, enduring what they were, while their fellow men, instead of cooperating at home, were doing all they could to hinder. The French were discouraged, and it was a hard task to convince them of the wonderful resources we had in England. Then all they had, our defenders, to cheer them,—were the messages from home in the form of boxes and letters. We at home cannot realize what the messages mean; songs, pictures, even clippings from the papers are dear possessions; they are stuck to the sides of the dug-out and the simplest verse memorized to keep their minds from that fiun task. I have even seen a man poring over a telephone directory, because it might have a name he knew, in it. Our men are not without initiative. One night we were a few yards from the German trenches, but a barbed wire entanglement separated us. Nothing daunted, a Westerner secured a can of powder, swam down the river, attached the power to the entanglement and left. In an instant the flame that broke hit the sky. The Germans wasted tons of ammunition firing on it. In the morning the wire was gone, and the Westerner had a V. C.

Strangely enough the nearer to the front line of trenches we get, the less is the hatred between the races, and when prisoners are taken they are treated like human beings. The only contradiction I have seen is in the French women. They fight to hit and spit at the poor Germans. They forget the quarrel is not personal, but the men, as a rule, never do.

The prisoners cannot understand the kindness shown to them at the Y.M.C.A. They have a branch at home but it never reaches the trenches. Our system of Y. M. C. A. reaches from the time we leave home until we are brought out on a stretcher. In the trenches the men can't talk; in the 'Y' they have almost every privilege of home extended to them. When they come in weary and filthy from the trenches there is ever a welcome for them. A pot of boiling water and hot coffee, then even a picture show, where "Mr. C. Chaplain" makes them forget their troubles. Many a man has worn his life out in the work. Capt. Irwin is a glorious example, with his unceasing devotion to the cause.

There is a thrill of goodness as our boys march down the street, but we would thrill more if we could see how they face temptation and prove themselves above it. Our men, as a whole, live lives which are a credit to the homes they came from. They are measuring up to every expectation, and proving in every action they came from a place where honour was the great and foremost word. If every inch of Belgium is restored, Serbia given back and Germany conquered, it will never repay us for the glorious, eager young souls who rushed so gladly to defend their King and if this war is won before we realize there is something greater than money, it is won too soon.

Capt. T. W. Jones of the Y.M.C.A. said:

"We cannot listen to Capt. Pearson without our hearts being touched and feeling a desire to help. With women the appeal seems strongest. There are wives and mothers with us now, and I never met in any town warmer spirits, though in one instance I was to-day called a beggar, for soliciting funds for the glorious work; however, I got a check, so it didn't matter. All our work is carried on by voluntary subscriptions, and our work is good. We watch and help your boys at the camp, on the transport, in England, in France, in the casualty station; in fact, from firm civies to khaki and from khaki to civies. We need money, and we are going to try for $10,000 in Peterborough, and if you realize in any way the way it will be used, you'll give it and give it gladly.

CITY COUNCIL ENDORSE PROPOSAL

BURDEN INCREASES.

Mr. O'Connell emphasized the fact that each year the burden is getting increasingly large. For this reason it was thought proper to extend the debentures over a period of twenty years. It would not only make it easier for the citizen to bear this insignificant amount each year, but would result in a more equitable division of the burden.

The canvas of refusal in respect to the trial canvass that was made for signatures to a petition, endorsing the proposed scheme of raising the amount by taxation were very few. Prominent local firms who signed the petition included the De Laval, Dairy Supply Company; The Campbell Milling Company; The Quaker Oats Company, a number of the local banks and others. The signatures to the petition represent an assessment of well over four million dollars, or more than one quarter of the total assessment of the city.

PREVAILING OPINION.

Not since the incorporation of Peterborough as a city, has there been a petition presented to the municipal administration that so truly represented the all prevailing opinion of the citizens. It is the intense desire of the signatories of this petition that their request be accceded to.

Mr. J. W. Miller said that it was obligatory upon the Council to accede to the request as represented by the petition. "Let us not have it said that a few of the citizens gave, and gave freely; but let us say that we all gave and raised the entire amount" said Mr. Miller.

"Little more can be added to what has already been said," remarked Mr. R. R. Hall. "It is not for us to relax our efforts in any degree. It is for us to see that our pledges are redeemed to the boys who are at the front."

Mr. James Kendry said he felt it was the duty of the Council to meet the request of the ratepayers.

ALDERMANIC OPINION.

Ald. Stratton thought it was funny that a representative of the Trades and Labour council was not present. The communication from that body was received. Ald. Langford felt that the object was a worthy one. For the benefit of the Trades and Labour council, the North Ward representative, pointed out that the Government was carrying a very substantial burden, and it was not unreasonable to expect the citizens to assist in this patriotic cause. Both Mayor Duffus and Ald. Edgar approved of the proposal to raise the amount by municipal taxation.

Ald. Duncan favoured paying the entire amount in one year, failing this, he would not issue debentures for a larger period than ten years.

With the aid of an aluminum comb, Ald. Weir sought to explain how twenty-year debentures would prove a burden on the slackers, as the latter were destined to become future property owners. For that reason alone the East Ward representative favoured twenty-year debentures.

On motion of Ald Stratton and Ald. Edgar the resolution, adopting the proposal to raise the amount by debenture issue was unanimously endorsed, Ald. Duncan casting in his vote with the rest. With this the deputation sang the national anthem and departed.

A GREETING TO NURSE DOUGLAS

The following poem, written by request, has been sent by St. John's Church W. A. to Nurse Douglas, now in Egypt:

Ye roving winds, that flit so free,
Light winged, at will, o'er earth and sea,
A message bear,
Of sympathetic love and cheer,
True friendship, fond remembrance dear,
Decaying ne'er.

To one, who, erst, was wont to meet,
With us, in social converse sweet,
In days gone by;
Where grey St. John's, on beauteous height,
Her towers, with ivy, mantled bright,
Uprears on high.

But now, on Egypt's distant strand,
Nurse of our noble Red Cross band,
Mid scenes of strife,
(Like One who spent, ungrudged, below,
Relieving human pain and woe,
His prime of life).

Toil on, with firm, unwavering will,
High courage, perseverance, skill,
With love combined.
Still following the Master's lead,
Ministering to pale suffering's need
Of body, mind.

Blest Angel's task it is to tend
The sick, and o'er the wounded bend,
With tender care;
To cheer the passing spirit's flight,
Through death's dark vale, to endless light
And mansions fair.

While thus inured to hardships, lone,
She lingers, in war's perilled zone,
From year to year.
Here for the welfare of our friend,
Devotions warm, to Heaven ascend,
From hearts sincere.

That He who rules both far and nigh,
Supreme on ocean, earth and sky,
In love and power;
May shield and save from every ill,
Devised by man's, or fiendish will,
Our friend each hour.

Until war's cruel reign shall cease,
And glad, returns, the dove of peace,
That long has been,
An exigie, then gay bells with chime,
To welcome home from distant clime,
Our heroine.

Mrs. A. F. Calder.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—As a word of warning to the many that are at the present time thinking of buying Christmas cards to send to friends and likewise to the boys at the front to avoid the card with the blue lines around the edge. I purchased some for the purpose of sending them to France and elsewhere, and to my surprise, on a minute examination, I found the words "Printed in Germany." As I don't think any of our citizens would care to insult our boys with cards of this description, as their feelings can be better imagined than explained here, I would suggest that if we can't send them a "printed in Canada" card we would refrain from sending any, and send an explanation instead, which, I am certain, would be satisfactory. It may be said in defence (of what I term) a deliberate attempt to hood-wink the public that they are old stock; but old or new, the fact remains the same. They were printed in Germany, and that name and everything connected with it is obnoxious throughout the civilized world.

Thanking you, sir, I remain,
Yours truly,
"One Who Has Been Stung".

CANADIAN MILK IS CHEAPER IN STATES THAN IN DOMINION

Figures Produced Before the Montreal Board of Control Reveal Startling Condition of Affairs—Federal Authorities Are "Criminally Responsible," Mayor Declares In Discussion on High Cost of Living

MONTREAL, Nov. 28.—That the Federal authorities were "criminally responsible" for the present cost of staple food commodities, which was making the present food situation "simply frightful," was the remark voiced by Mayor Martin at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Control, after the members had discussed the problem of steadily mounting prices. Controller Ross, who was a member of the civic delegation which went to Ottawa to ask the Government to take some measures of relief, said that from what he could judge the members of the Government before whom they appeared did not seem to realise the seriousness of the situation, as explained to them. This, Mr Ross thought, was either through ignorance or carelessness.

The meeting was enlivened by the appearance of ex-Alderman Dan Gallery, who produced for the Board figures which he claimed to have obtained from the Customs Department in Ottawa, bearing on the milk and cream situation. Mr. Gallery's figures, which will be confirmed as a result of the special resolution adopted by the Board, indicate that during the first ten months of 1916, 588,577 gallons of milk were sent to the United States from Huntingdon and neighbourhood at a price about 4 1-2 cents lower than the Canadian distributors were paying. Mr. Gallery stated that the American distributors purchased the amount of milk mentioned for $88,165, whereas the same quantity of milk was sold to Canadian distributors for $113,163. He also showed that in the month of October 158,042 gallons of Canadian milk were sold in the United States for $38,334, as against the $34,769 which was the price the Canadian distributors had to pay for the same quantity.

Criticized the Mayor.

During an interesting discussion in the course of which ex-Ald. Gallery severely criticized the Mayor for his inaction with regard to the food question, Mr. Gallery asked whether the Board would take steps to inform him why it was that butter was to-day selling at four times the price it did forty years ago? He told Mayor Martin that he had better look out, as he would run against him for the mayoralty at the next municipal elections on the question of advanced food prices.

The Mayor retorted that if Mr. Gallery ran he would lose his deposit, but Mr. Gallery came back with the remark that if he ran against the Mayor he would run him home, where he could remain a 'has been,' like many others whom he could name.

The Mayor replied that he was not afraid. The municipal authorities had no power to deal with food prices until the recent order in council had been issued. This order had been acted upon and he told Mr. Gallery that there had been proposed and adopted this morning a motion asking the legislation committee of the city council to send an urgent report to the Board concerning their action on the food question.

Wants Complete Statement.

Controller Villeneuve remarking that they would accept the figures supplied by Mr. Gallery as official, moved and adopted that the customs authorities at Ottawa should be requested to send the Board a complete statement, showing the milk and cream exports from Canada to the United States for 1916 to date.

At the commencement of the meeting Controller Villeneuve suggested that the Government should establish an embargo on Canadian food stuffs, with a view to lowering the cost of staple commodities.

Mr. Gallery proposed and the suggestion was promised consideration, that the Board of Control should appoint a committee of Mr. J. E. A. Biron, superintendent of markets who was the first city official to bring the question of food prices before the Board, himself, and three or four other citizens to look into the supplies of food stored here and report their findings to the Board. This suggestion was made by Controller Ross some time ago as one remedy for bringing down prices.

One of Controller Villeneuve's suggestions was that the Government should establish a scale of food prices but this was not discussed as ex-Ald. Gallery's representations occupied the attention of the Board thereafter.

An Expert Typist Performs at the Business College

121 Words a Minute on Underwood Machine Looked Easy For Mr. Fred Jarrett

An object lesson in typewriting possibilities was provided for the students of the Peterborough Business College yesterday, when Mr. Fred Jarrett, of Toronto, Canada's champion typist gave a demonstration of speed and form at the close of the regular afternoon session.

The class appeared to be a unusually large one and mostly girls. Under Mr. J. A. McKone's principalship the Business College has been winning new laurels and now that the work of the present term is bringing the students to the threshold of efficiency Mr. Jarrett's performance must have proved to them a new incentive to strive for a mastery of the salient features of the system of typewriting they are taught. Accuracy he said was the first and last consideration of the student. In the development of speed and its contributory aids he pointed out that the typist's output should be as accurate as possible. Mr Jarrett's exhibition left the impression that typewriting was ridiculously easy. His execution, to steal a musical term, was marked by a minimum of effort and in one test recorded a speed of 121 words a minute on unpracticed copy and on passages he had previously worked showed a rate of 87 words per half minute.

"Rapid advances have been made in typewriting during recent years. The first record of 69 words per minute was raised to 86 words and is now 137 words. As a result greater speed is expected of present day students. After all, Mr. Jarrett's advice indicated that the student must realize the importance of the groundwork of his or her training and its influence upon advanced results. In other words application is the key to success in typewriting as in every other endeavour. And application demands a trained will. There must be the will to learn and the will to practice, and, of course, an open minded attitude toward the teacher's instructions. A thorough knowledge of the keyboard is a preliminary requirement in the touch system, and at the same time the student must understand the importance of the position of the hands, an essential to speed. The elimination of needless and useless effort was clearly demonstrated by Mr. Jarrett. He also urged the cultivation of a steady writing and the avoidance of spasmodic speed with intervals of slower work. Altogether his exhibition proved not only interesting but decidedly instructive and an encouragement to the novice typist to overcome the difficulties they all probably prove to magnify during their early training.

Y.M.C.A. WORK AMONG THE SOLDIERS

What Was Accomplished in Canada During Last Winter

The following items are merely a part of the Y.M.C.A. secretary's programme, but they mean much for the comfort of our soldiers. These refer only to the winter season of 1915-1916:

46 Associations report giving over half a million free baths.

Over 1200 gymnasium classes attended by 108,150 soldiers.

234 entertainments and socials attended by 42,954 soldiers.

246 religious meetings and Bible classes attended by 12,959 soldiers.

207 educational classes attended by 5,507 soldiers.

Through the National Council and local Y.M.C.A.'s over two million sheets of letter paper and envelopes besides post cards, magazines, books, Bibles and testaments, song books, etc. have been distributed to the soldiers in Canada.

The value of this service is conservatively placed at $50,433.

This is over and above services reported July 31, 1915.

TOMMY'S SONG AT THE FRONT

"I'd Rather Be 'ere Than Be Slackin' at 'ome

I 'ate these bleedin' trenches,
And I 'ate the bloomin' guns;
I'm sick of smellin' stenches,
From wot's left of last year's Huns.
I'm tired of jam and 'Bully',
And I'm 'eartily sick of stew;
I'm tired of fillin' sand bags;
I'm fed-up with 'standin'-to'.
But—
I'd rather be 'ere than be slackin' at 'ome.

I've 'ad me fill of fightin',
Twenty months and some-odd more,
And I've give up 'opes of waitin'
For the finish of the war.
Nearly all my pals 'ave 'copped it'
Since we stopped the Huns at Yeeps;
Some are back for good in 'Blighty';
Some are here in France, for keeps.
Still—
I'd rather be 'ere than be slackin' at 'ome.

Yet, I mustn't be complainin',
For wot is 'as got to be;
Though I 'ates like 'ell, remainin'
In the mud of Picardy
While a mob of sleek-faced slackers
Gets exemption; it ain't right;
That the cowards get the preference
An' the REAL men got to fight!
But—
I'm glad that I'm 'ere and not slackin' at 'ome.

Divorced Wife Gives Dinner

St. Louis Girl Says Her Husband Borrowed Money From Her.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 28. — Miss Carmella Smart was so happy to be Miss Carmella Smart again after Judge Hennings granted her a divorce from J. N. Hull, Jr., and the restoration of her maiden name that she invited her mother, her brother, and his wife, and two other witnesses to a dinner and theatre party in celebration of the new found freedom.

"We've got good news for you!" is what Miss Smart telephoned her grandmother, Mrs. Mary McCrea of 4436A Red Bud Avenue, when the decree was given.

Then Miss Smart asked for permission to take dinner downtown and attend the theatre afterward.

"Carmella and her mother, Mrs. W. R. Smart; her brother, Robert, and his wife, and two other witnesses will dine downtown and then go to the theatre," Mrs. McCrea said: "They told me it was a sort of celebration."

Miss Smart sued to divorce her husband, son of J. N. Hull, vice president of the Lambert-Deacon-Hull Printing Company, May 16 last. They were married April 22, 1915.

She charged her husband borrowed $50 from her mother the day after the wedding; that he wouldn't work; that grocery, rent, and other bills were not paid.

They separated January 5, last, she averred. She lives with her mother and grandmother.

BULLETS SPOIL GARDEN.

Unique Suit Has Been Begun Against the Government.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—A rather unique action has been instituted against the Government in the Exchequer Court, Jean Baptiste Rheaume, and his son, Albert, claiming $40,000 and $1,000 respectively. They allege that since the war began their market gardening business has been destroyed on account of a daily storm of bullets ricochetting across from the Rockliffe Ranges, where the School of Musketry is located.

ROUMANIANS ARE ATTACKED IN THE BRUZE VALLEY

BUCHAREST, November 28.—Using gas and tear shells the Teutonic forces in patrol engagements backed by artillery fire, are attacking the Roumanian troops in front in the Buze Valley as far as Dragoslavele. The official statement thus detailed the fighting to the northwest.

In the west there were no engagements yesterday, except on the extreme right the Roumanian positions were under heavy enemy bombardment. On the left wing there was nothing of importance.

Along the Danube the statement reported artillery bombardment. In Dobrudja the situation was said to be unchanged.

THE AMERICAN STEAMER CHEMONG IS SUNK

LONDON, November 28.—The American steamer Chemung has been sunk.

The Chemung, according to Lloyds' listing, is owned by the Atlantic and Pacific Coast Transportation Co. She was a steel vessel of 2,615 tons, 335 feet in length, and was built by the Union Drydock Co. of Buffalo.

45 STRIKES DURING YEAR

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—Deputy Minister of Labour Acland, in the annual report of the Department, notes that the pressure of the rising cost of living, recruiting, and increasing scarcity of labour have been causes of the general movement in the direction of higher wages. Forty-five strikes occurred during the fiscal year, as compared with forty-three the previous year. During the year 836 work people lost their lives, while 4,940 were injured as the result of accidents. The mining industry was responsible for 169 fatalities, while railways furnished 117, agriculture 84, engineering and shipbuilding 68, lumbering 54, and navigation 53.

ONE WOMAN DEAD AS RESULT OF THE RAID

Special Wire to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A statement this evening from Lord French declared the Zeppelin raid did no military damage. One woman died from the shock. Five men, seven women, and four children were injured. Other damage was small."

CLAUSE WAS REFERRED BACK TO COMMITTEE

Aldermen Object to the Expenditure of $8,500 for a Motor Chemical Truck.

The City Council, at a meeting held last night, took exception to Clause Eight in the report of the Fire, Water and Light committee, which provides that a by-law be prepared to submit to a vote of the electors at the time of the next municipal election to authorize the issue of debentures for $8,000.00 to purchase a combination chemical and hose truck for the Fire Department, the debentures to bear interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum.

Ald Langford moved that the entire clause be struck out. He did not think such an expenditure was justifiable in war time. To this, Ald. McIntyre agreed.

Ald. Edgar drew the Council's attention to one town in particular where several fires were in progress at the one time. If a similar circumstance was to happen in Peterborough the horses could not begin to cover the ground. It was very important to have protection. The least that the Council could do would be to give the people an opportunity of deciding for or against a motor driven chemical engine.

Ald. Dobbin favoured a couple of trucks similar to the one in use in Lindsay.

Ald. Evans—"We are not passing a by-law to buy this machine."

Both Mayor Duffus and Ald. Stratton fell in line with the suggestion that steps be taken to secure prices on a smaller piece of apparatus. In the meantime, Clause Eight in the report will be referred back to the committee for further consideration.

Bugle Band For Boy Scouts

New Organization Will Be Formed at the Salvation Army To-night

The latest development in Salvation Army circles is a bugle band for the Boy Scouts. Twelve bugles have been secured and three drums, so the organization meeting will take place to-night.

Mr. Stanley Braund, who is sergeant of the Bugle Band at the Collegiate is taking charge of the boys, under the direction of Adjt. McElheney.

The Boy Scout movement has gone ahead by leaps and bounds lately and is still increasing. Rifles have been obtained for the drilling of the larger boys and they enjoy it very much. They will put on a sham fight shortly.

The Girl Guide movement is advancing also. They are studying first aid etc., and will have a part to play a the sham battle to take place in September. Both Guards and Scouts practice to-night at the Temple.

Adjt. McElheney has been invited to give his war pictures at Indian River on Thursday night. Special slides of those who enlisted in this district are being made by Mr. F. L. Roy for the occasion and will add much interest to the occasion.

Heroic Nurses Saved Inmates At Hospital

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

TORONTO, Nov. 28.— "And not a baby suffered," said the heroine nurses of Grace Hospital here to-day as they modestly told the story of how they hustled 116 bed-ridden adult patients and 20 infants, down elevators and stairways at 5.10 a.m. to-day when fire broke out in the basement and filled the place with smoke. Night Superintendent Hannah Wilson was in charge, and with her staff of eight nurses and two male assistants had many of the patients safely out on the street when the firemen arrived. The fire was quickly extinguished. Damage, two thousand dollars.

MAY PUBLISH DELAYS AND THEIR CAUSES IN STREET CAR TRAFFIC

Superintendent John McCann, of the Street Railway Company, has decided it is understood, to publish daily the delays and their causes in the traffic. Conductors have been instructed to keep exact records of the time and cause for such delays, following the practice of the Toronto Street Railway. On Saturday, it was said, the Charlotte street had had sixteen counts, most of them due to counter traffic on the G.T.R.

German Aeroplane Drops Six Bombs On London

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 28.—A German aeroplane dropped six bombs over the City of London early to-day, Lord French reported that four were injured, one woman seriously.

The official statement said the aeroplane flew at a great height over the city and was partially concealed in the haze. It appeared between 11:50 and noon.

Except for the four persons injured, the statement said the damage done by the bombs was slight.

PARIS, November 28.—The repulse of a German attack east of Maison Champagne, was detailed in to-day's official statement. Elsewhere along the western front the night was quiet.

PARIS, November 28.—The Chamber of Deputies met to-day in secret session.

U. S. To Make a Vigorous Protest

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, November 28.—United States Ambassador Gerrard will carry a vigorous protest from this Government against the deportation of Belgians into Germany, when he leaves for Berlin December 5th.

An outline of this Government's attitude on the question which has stirred all Europe will be given to Gerrard personally by President Wilson.

Claim Raiders Sank a British Vessel

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

BERLIN, November 28.—German naval raiders near Lowest-oft sank an enemy vessel, captured its crew and returned safely, an official statement declared to-day.

LONDON, November 28.—The British Admiralty reports the armed trawler Harval is missing. It is presumed this is the vessel mentioned in the German statement as having been sunk.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL PASSED THROUGH

The Duke and Duchess of Devonshire, together with their two daughters, Lady Maude Louise Emma Cavendish and Lady Blanche Katherine Cavendish, passed through Peterborough yesterday afternoon. For a few minutes that the train stood at the C.P.R. station, Canada's new Governor-General was utterly oblivious of Peterborough's existence. He slept soundly in a heavy upholstered chair, and the handful of citizens who were present, failed to get a peek at the Governor-General in his waking moments.

With the Governor-General were Lieut.-Col., the Hon. H. Henderson, Military Secretary; Capt. Angus McIntosh and Capt. Slaney-Johnson, aides.

Says Acid Stomachs Need Magnesia

Calls Bisurated Magnesia Safest, Quickest and Most effective Food and Acid Stomach Corrective yet Found

The almost universal use of magnesia by physicians and specialists in the treatment of stomach troubles is due to the fact that it quickly neutralizes the excessive acid in the stomach and thus stops food fermentation—the direct cause of nearly all stomach trouble. Of the many forms of magnesia such as liquids, oxides, citrates, carbonates, sulphates, etc., the most suitable and efficient for stomach purposes is bisurated magnesia a teaspoonful of which taken in a little water after eating of whenever indigestion is felt will instantly neutralize or absorb the excessive acid, stop fermentation and make painless and normal digestion easy. Be sure to insist therefore that your druggist supply you with magnesia in the bisurated form—either powder or tablets. Stomach sufferers who follow this plan and avoid the use of pepsin, charcoal, soda mints, drugs and medicines are astonished to find the stomach once relieved of the irritating acid and gas, soon regains its normal tone, and can do its work alone without the doubtful aid of artificial digestents.

AN AFFABLE WITNESS WAS OLD STEPHEN COLLINS AT HILL TRIAL

Davis Hill Appearing Before Judge Huycke To-day on Four Commitments for Cattle Stealing—His Brother William Will be Tried Later.

One of the most naturally genial and apparently guileless characters who have appeared before Judge Huycke in a long time was Stephen Collins, an old man residing in Seymour township, about one and one-half miles from Trent Bridge, who was a witness for the prosecution in the trial of David Hill of Dummer this morning.

Hill was committed for trial a few weeks ago by Magistrate Langley on four charges of stealing cattle from Warden C. J. Darling, James Matthews, A. E. Carveth and R. Ferguson of Dummer.

Mr. Collins entered the court and smilingly proferred a handshake to Hill as he passed the prisoners box. In his evidence the witness said that he bought a farm of 164 acres in Seymour, and without a suggestion of smartness but rather to be meticulously exact added that he had not measured the acreage. He took it for granted that there were 164 acres.

Hill had called at his farm on September 22nd and said he wanted to pasture two heifers. Hill had announced his name as "Mr. Davis" and when Crown Attorney Hatton questioned Mr. Collins about having received any cattle for pasturage this year and from whom, he pointed towards the prisoner Hill and good naturedly said: "Yes Mr. Davis over there brought me a heifer and offered me $10 if I would winter it for him". No suspicion dawned on the old man at the time and he undertook the contract. But later a man named Matthews called with his son and said the animal was his. He went away and got papers and returning with an order from Mr. Hatton took the heifer away. But, said Mr. Collins, he paid up the ten dollars like a man.

Mr. Hatton asked the witness if he identified Mr. Matthews among the court room crowd. Mr. Collins spread his smile over the audience, and broadcasted it, as he singled out James Matthews. The latter approached the witness box to be identified. Mr. Collins reached out a hand of welcome as to a long lost friend and stated that this indeed was Mr. Matthews. Mr. G. N. Gordon, appearing for Hill, waived cross-examination but Mr. Collins began a little speech on his own initiative to the effect that he was innocent of any wrong, having been done by "Mr. Davis" or rather Mr. Hill.

Mr. Hatton reassured him on that score, and the old man finally wandered from the box.

THE MATTHEW'S CATTLE

Mr. James Matthews testified that two heifers had disappeared from his pasture and on receiving word that cattle answering to their description had been seen near Trent Bridge he located one heifer at Stephen Collin's farm and the other at George Scott's.

Both Mr. Matthews and his young son, Russell positively identified the heifer as those they had missed.

IDENTIFIED HILL.

Mr. George Scott, a farmer of Seymour township, identified Davis Hill as the man who had sold him a black and white cow and had brought to him a red heifer for winter care. Three weeks later Mr. Matthews arrived, and, claiming the heifer, took it away. Mr. Hatton rested the case at that point and Mr. Gordon said he would adduce no evidence for the defense on this particular charge.

THE CARVETH CASE.

Mr. A. E. Carveth, a Dummer farmer said he pastured his young cattle on Stuart Clydesdale's farm. About the third of fourth of September h heard two were missing and going to the field was unable to find them He had marked their ears by punching out holes with a cutter for gun wads. Witness said he did not see the cattle again, but identified their hides in a London tannery.

The trial is proceeding this afternoon.

CANADIAN ARMY'S CLEARING HOUSE SMOOTH MACHINE

REMARKABLE SYSTEM OF REGISTRATION IN WHICH NOTHING IS OVERLOOKED

London. — There is a town in France which for some time has been particularly identified with the Canadian forces at the front. For one thing there is established there a Canadian Army Pay Office, which controls the accounts for all the Canadian troops in France, paying out about seven million francs a month. In charge is a major of the Canadian Army Pay Corps.

In another part of this town is the Canadian Corps Headquarters and the visit the Canadian newspaper men were privileged to pay to this analytical clearing house was the first that had been paid by any correspondents of any nationality since it was established.

The Canadian officer who is in charge is a son of the Archbishop of Ottawa. You might think, from his amazing grasp of a million details and the marvel of the system he has largely helped to bring into existence here, that he would find it child's play to work out and control details for the merging of all the big department stores in the world, and have not the slightest difficulty afterwards in personally pulling the strings of the whole combine; and that he would always know, to a fraction, any and all details of the working of any one of them.

This officer went to France with the First Contingent, to take charge of this base depot, and till then was Deputy-Assistant-General of Mobilisation in the Militia Department at Ottawa. He began as a cadet of the Royal Military College, Kingston, and later with the R.F.A.

HANDLES REINFORCEMENTS

At this office are handled all matters of record, personal services and discipline. Should reinforcements be quired it is here that word arrives by wire and within the shortest possible space of time the required troops have been requisitioned, and are on their way, the fullest account of every item in connection with the transaction being entered in card indexes, and from there into books of permanent record These books will show in a second exactly where, which and when further troops were asked for and despatched, a debit and credit balance being then drawn after each entry, men still available being the balance carried forward.

Casualty lists, too, all come in detail to this wonderful dissecting office, prior to being forwarded to London and Ottawa, and are immediately entered and indexed. The Colonel can refer in a moment to any officer or man serving at the front, ascertain where he is—if still with his unit—or what has happened to him if he has been wounded, and in that case, the nature of his wound and the place to which he has been taken. The office has details of every Canadian landing in France, from the time of his arrival to the time that he goes away.

An equally complete system applies to all the soldiers' effects. All articles belonging to a man who has been killed which may be likely to have a sentimental value to those he leaves behind—a ring, a watch, a photograph, or maybe, a little tress of hair, are collected and entered with the greatest care. Besides these, there are many matters which all receive similar careful attention, all the work is done by a staff of fifteen officers under the colonel, and two hundred and fifty men, exclusive of the staff of the Pay Office.

The way the Colonel has systematized every minute detail now saves an immense amount of time, and everything at the present time is in such a position of perfection that all trouble is avoided. But the thought and the labor involved in originating a detailed system for every one of at least a dozen departments, it can easily be imagined, was no light task. It occupied many weeks of sixteen hours a day to do it all. Now the Colonel presses a button and the thing is done.

The present condition of extraordinary order has grown out of the original work of two men—the Colonel and his batman. At the present time the Colonel can be in direct communication at any time with any unit at the front. On his desk he has a book containing a list of the duties of every man on the staff.

"I often explain to them," he said. "that I want them to treat every case as if it were an exceptional case and not as a matter of rule. Particularly in the case of casualties we often receive requests out of the regular order of things, but we always try to do our best to comply with them. I think I may say we try to hold the balance between the Army and the individual."

We were taken over several parts of the building and in every portion we saw the same evidences of thorough order and minute system in every detail. Uniforms were mended, docketed and ready, packed in lower rooms. Everything was immaculately clean. I was not surprised to notice that on the Colonel's desk there was no pile of papers, no unanswered correspondence, no scrap of paper (excuse this reference please) of any kind. There were just five pencils, a pen and two books containing the indexed duties of the staff. Alongside the wall was a mapped-out plan of departments, divided into sections, half-sections, and quarter-sections. It was the finest

OFFICERS ARE CONTENT TO TAKE LOWER RANK

With Battalions Broken Up, They Are Joining Machine Gun and Bombing Squads.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The majority of the Canadian officers, whose battalions have been broken up for drafts in France, express their willingness to take lesser rank and join fighting battalions in France. Very few express any intention of returning to Canada to civil life.

Shornciffe is the camp most affected by the new order of things, and some of the former majors there have already taken lower ranks and joined the Machine Gun, Bombing, and other special schools. One colonel who saw the inevitable change three months ago, took a trench mortar course as captain, and went to the front. He has already been promoted to major.

There are at present nearly 200 of first and second division non-coms. and privates training for commissions at Shornciffe, Seaford, and Bramshott.

County Council Dodges Night Meeting, Will Meet Patriotic Fund Committee Thursday, 2 p.m.

The final session of the County Council for the present year opened at the Court House this afternoon, with Warden C. J. Darling presiding. From the present outlook the most important question to be considered this year is the Patriotic Fund's request that the County provide by taxation $40,000 for the local demands of the fund next year. During the present year the County's aggregate contributions for patriotic purposes will be $28,183.09, less $665 estimated interest and only a small amount remains unpaid.

December's final payments will show a total of the year of $21,500.00, representing a tax levy of 2.44 mills. In addition to this is the Provincial War tax of one mill, amounting to $9091.09.

To Double Gift.

It is manifest, therefore, that the Patriotic Fund's proposed petition will, if granted, practically double the 1916 contribution for patriotic purposes. It will mean a tax levy of about 5 mills on all county property for the 1917 requirements of the Patriotic Fund; and the war tax of one mill will increase that to 6 mills. This has the County's participation gradually developed with the progress of the war.

Jail Bread Up.

Mr. T. Hooper rendered a bill for $9.74 covering the difference between the former price of bread supplied to the jail and the increased price since August.

Reeve Squire moved, seconded by Reeve Anderson, that Mr. Hooper supply bread for the jail during the present quarter at 4 cents a pound. The former price was 2 5-8 cents a pound.

At 4 cents a pound Mr. Squire said this was better price for a three pound loaf than the wholesale price of 13 cents.

Want Day Meeting.

Ald Dobbin's request for a meeting on Wednesday night to meet Patriotic Fund representatives, met with general disfavour.

Mr. Squire moved, seconded by Mr. Lawson, that this meeting will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Many of the Councillors drive home at night and this condition prompted the motion.

The Poultry Association requested the usual grant of $25, an increase to $40 if possible.

"They're getting a big price for eggs," observed Reeve Cohen, "and 25 ought to do them."

Mr. Joseph Wearing, secretary of the Children's Aid Society, requested that the county's grant be made as generous as the Council could spare this year.—Referred to Finance committee.

Leave It Voluntary.

A request from the British Red Cross for collection on October 16th, drew the information that most of the township municipalities had provided for this fund.

Reeve Walsh, of Douro, moved that this be left voluntary. Douro people, he said, had raised $465 in a voluntary way for this fund.

Reeve Kitchen seconded the motion.

Reeve Squire suggested that the municipalities that have not yet contributed be urged to do so.

Reeve Fitzgerald—This Council is the place to handle that fund, but we can't do anything this year, because some townships have contributed and some have not.

Sheasson, Hammill & Co.—For the moment, in the stock market there is a trading market with special activity in certain stocks. Sentiment is very bullish on Steel, which sells ex-dividend Friday of this week, and higher prices are expected for it before that time.

Posse on New Scent For Mr. C. Sampson

Inspector Boyd was far beyond the reach of Court Crier Wood's voice this afternoon when his name was called in the Hill trial. In a sotto voice explanation Crown Attorney Hatton stated that the Inspector was out on the trail of an important witness. Two and two produces the result that Inspector Boyd, Detective Newhall, and a variously composed posse has been back in the wilds on a new scent of Clarence Sampson.

They left at midnight last night and were expected back at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Hence the absence of the Inspector who may, at the last moment, bag Mr. C. Sampson.

Few women are really afraid of mice, but they hate to disappoint the men, who seem to expect them to be afraid.

Come and enjoy 1000 laughs. Everyone welcome. Admission 10c Only. 2d-123-04

Clever Play Was Enjoyed

"The Sweet Family" at St. Alphonsus' Lyceum Was a Success

St. Alphonsus' Lyceum was crowded to capacity last night when the Ladies' Literary Society presented the play entitled, "The Sweet Family". The following was the caste of characters:

Mr. Sweet—A Poor Long Widow—Miss Florence Lahey.

Arminty Ann Sweet—the Prima Donna—Miss V. Carveth.

Betsy Belinda Sweet—The Delicate One—Miss K. Hayes.

Caroline Cordelia Sweet—An Authoress—Miss E. Hennessy.

Dorothy Matilda Sweet—A Great Musician—Miss M. Fleming.

Elizabeth—Their Cook—A Domestic Entertainment—Miss M. Sherlin.

Frances Felicity Sweet—Disappointed in Love—Miss I. Doran.

Gloriana Gladstone Sweet—One Who Can Only Cook—Miss G. Clancy.

Each one acted her part in an excellent manner, and from the applause given each number it was very evident that those were most heartily enjoyed by the audience. The musical treat of the evening was the music rendered on the instruments with which the orchestra was provided.

The following musical programme preceded the play:

Duet—Miss A. Doran and her clever little pupil—Miss Elsie Evans.

Solo—Miss E. Masterson.

Duet—Misses L. Delaire and O. Tangney.

HUBERT LEGROS IN A RUNAWAY

Hubert Legros, goalkeeper of the Peterboro intermediate O.H.A. team, was the centre figure in an exciting runaway on Charlotte street last evening. He was driving a team of horses when the whiffle tree broke, and banging against the heels of one of the steeds caused the team to bolt. They made second time from Park street east to George street. Here the pole dropped, and catching in the ... one of the horses and stopped the wild dash. The driver stuck to the reins and was unhurt, while the horses escaped with a few bruises.

EMPIRE THEATRE Nov. 27-28-29

presents America's Leading Film Star

FANNIE WARD

—IN—

A Gutter Magdalene

SYNOPSIS

Fannie Ward, who created a sensation in the world of motion pictures by her performances in "The Cheat," "Tennessee's Pardner," and other Lasky photoplays on the Paramount Programme, is the central figure in a new photoplay to Willard Mack, author of "Kick In" and other successful plays, which gives a vivid picture of a phase of city life and is replete with stirring adventure and romance. In "A Gutter Magdalene" Miss Ward as Maida, finds redemption in her allegiance to the Salvation Army. As a worker for this great cause her path re-crosses those whom she knew in other days. Temptation is thrown in her way again. The manner in which she successfully combats these temptations forms the remainder of the story.

WEDDING BELLS

BROWNE—AYOTTE.

On Monday morning at 9 a.m. at St. Mary's church, Young's Point, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when Miss Nellie Ayotte became the bride of Mr. William H. Browne. Rev. Father Meagher performed the ceremony and afterwards said the nuptial mass. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Mary Ayotte of Lindsay, while Mr. Francis Ayotte ably assisted the groom. After a dainty wedding breakfast which was served at the home of the bride's parents, the happy couple motored to Lakefield to catch the 4.40 p.m train. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Browne will reside at Young's Point.

OBITUARY

MISS HATTIE NORTHEY.

On Friday morning, November 17, there passed away in the Township of Smith, Miss Hattie Northey, daughter of James Northey of Lakefield, Deceased's illness was protracted, but it was borne with remarkable fortitude and patience. The late Miss [illegible] was born in the Township of Smith, forty-one years ago, and [illegible] of her life in this vicinity and was a dressmaker by occupation. There are left to mourn her loss a father and mother, nine sisters and [illegible] brothers.

The funeral service was held at the [illegible] Herbert Northey of Smith. Mr. John Gilchrist of Peterborough officiated. Many friends and acquaintances attended the funeral, and followed the remains to Lakefield cemetery. The late Miss Northey knew the glorious fact that the work of salvation was done when the Lord Jesus died on the Cross for sinners, and therefore there was nothing for her to do but accept from Him the gift of eternal life. Therefore she had the assurance "It is well with my soul."

When peace, like a river, attendeth my way;
When sorrows, like sea-billows roll;
Whatever my lot, Thou has taught me to say:
"It is well, it is well, with my soul."—Com.

The Enemy Had Superior Armament

Heavy Artillery Enabled Mackensen to Cross the Danube and Eventually Link Up With Falkenhayn—The Roumanians Are in No Immediate Danger So Far as Their Communications Are Concerned

THE ROUMANIAN SITUATION

The crushing of Roumanian resistance is still going ahead in brilliant fashion.

The most notable single event of the past few days was Mackensen's feat in making good his crossing of the Danube and getting a force across in sufficient size to enable it to beat down all opposition and link up with the forces of von Falkenhayn on the north bank. This fact alone is sufficient indication of at least one military feature in which the Germans have far the advantage of the Roumanians. This is in heavy artillery. If a military command trying to force the crossing of a wide, deep river is opposed by superior armaments in the way of artillery he is doomed to failure before he starts. In fact, if the defensive artillery is even equal in number and range to that of the offense, a crossing can be made impossible. But where the offense has the greater artillery power, when its guns are more numerous and of greater range, then a landing can be effected in force under the cover of artillery fire, and the landing made absolutely secure.

SITUATION BECOMING DESPERATE.

This, it will be remembered, was what happened when the British made their landing at Gallipoli. Had the Turkish forts been armed with guns which ranged with those on the British warships the British Army would never have seen the shore. But the reverse was the case, and we know how successful was the British landing.

Here we have the situation which enabled Mackensen to cross the Danube, protect his landing until his artillery got across, and then begin his advance toward von Falkenhayn. We do not know just what artillery the Roumanians have either on the Danube front or on the land frontiers. From what has happened, however, it is almost certain that the Germans had larger guns and more of them, if for no other reason because of the German fondness for this weapon. The fact would do much to explain not only the German success but the truly remarkable speed with which it was attained, once the attack was in full swing.

With each day's report the situation with the Roumanians becomes more and more desperate. The line of the Alt Valley, which was their best defensive line from which to halt the invading Teutons, is outflanked on both ends. The northern flank is not in such a bad plight. Practically all of the German advance has occurred west of the line except for a few miles well up in the moumains, where several small unimportant points to the east have been taken. Absence of communications discounts the value of these captures.

On the southern end of the line, however, the Teutons have made sufficient progress to give rise to doubt whether any of the Alt Valley can be held. Mackensen, it seemed, made his crossing of the Danube at Zimnitza, about thirty miles east of the confluence of the Alt and the Danube. It is also reported that a crossing was attempted at Giurgiu, thirty miles still further east. The latter apparently was not successful. It may have been merely a blind—an attempt which was never meant to be pushed to completion, but only to draw the Roumanians from what was to be the real point of attack.

Zimnitza was the most logical place for such an effort to be made. Obviously, if Mackensen was to make such an attempt, it would, if successful, be much more to his advantage to make the point of attack east of the Alt Valley. This would forestall the Roumanian attempt to make a resistance here, as was foreseen that they would be forced to do.

ROUMANIAN RESISTANCE BROKEN.

The next consideration is, of course, the railroad situation. The point of crossing had to be a railroad town. In the first place Mackensen had to bring his own heavy artillery up in order to effect the crossing. This necessitated the point on the south bank of the river being on the railroad. Again, if the crossing was successful, it must be made at a railroad point on the northern bank so that as the advance was made, the supplies could be kept up and the heavy artillery advanced. Opposite Zimnitza on the south bank, is the large village of Syistoy, which is the terminus of a branch of a railroad which leaves the main road from Varna westward not far east of Plevna is one of the large military bases of northern Bulgaria it was an excellent base from which to work.

Every condition, therefore, favoured Zimnitza as the point to which to work. The Roumanian resistance was broken at the point of crossing, and the advance northward was begun immediately, following, of course, the line of the railroad. This advance has proceeded as far as Alexandria, twenty-six miles north of Zimnitza. At the same time von Falkenhayn's army, driving east close to the Danube, reached and crossed the Alt, and at some point between the Alt and Alexandria has linked up with Mackensen. If we knew just where this point was, or how far north of the Danube von Falkenhayn's army is at the point where it crossed the Alt, we would know more about the real situation, as we could see what were the possibilities of still making defensive use of the Alt. These things, however, are not reported. It does seem, however, that the Alt is no longer available for this purpose. Indications are that the line has been turned and that the Roumanians will have to retire still further toward Bucharest.

WHEAT PRICES COMING DOWN

Market Closed Several Cents Lower—Flour is Down 25c —The Cattle Market

Cash wheat is comparatively steady but weak, besides the wild movement up and down in the futures markets. The December option of Chicago yesterday covered a range of 13 3-4c between the high and the low, while the May cavorted over a 10-cent range. The market closed 6 to 7 cents lower than Monday's close. Winnipeg was not quite so wild, but closed 1 and 2 cents lower than Monday's. Cash prices at bay ports are 1 1-2 cents lower. Ontario wheat is quoted 5 cents lower. Ontario flour, 25 cents down.

Manitoba wheat—No. 1 northern, $1.97, track, bay ports; No. 2 $1.94; No. 3, $1.89; No 4, $1.79; old crop 4c above new crop.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W. 66 1-2; No. 3, 67 1-2; No. 1 extra feed, 67 1-2; No. 1 feed 67c.

American corn—No. 2 nominal; No. 3 new, $1.03; immediate shipment, track, Toronto.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, 63c to 65c; No. 3 white 62c to 64c.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter per car lot, $1.73 to $1.75; No. 3 $1.71 to $1.73.

Peas—No. 2 nominal, car lots $2.45.

Barley—Good milling $1.18 to $1.20; feed barley, nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal $1.35.

Rye—No. 1 commercial, nominal; No. 2 new, $1.40 to $1.42.

Manitoba flour—First patents in jute bags, $10.50; second patents in jute $10; strong bakers in jute, $9.80, Toronto.

Ontario flour—New winter, $7.66 to $7.75 in bags, track, Toronto, prompt shipment.

Millfeed—Car lots delivered Montreal, shorts $36 to $37; bran $31 to $32; feed flour, per bag, $2.80; middlings $38 to $40.

Hay—Baled, No. 1 track, Toronto, best grade new hay, car lots, $12.50 to $13.50; No. 2 $10 to $11.50; straw $9 to $10.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Receipts at the Toronto Union Yards yesterday were 71 cars, made up of 1,104 cattle, 208 calves, 1,286 hogs, 314 sheep and lambs.

Trade was decidedly slower yesterday, probably affected by the prospects of a mild spell of weather. Anything choice in the butcher class holds quite firm. Common stuff barely steady. Cows and canners steady. Stockers not quite so much in demand, with fears of an embargo from the other side. Prices in this class a little easier.

Lambs were firm.

Hogs firmer and 10 to 20 cents higher.

DOCTORS ADVICE TO RUN DOWN, NERVOUS, WEAK, ANAEMIC PEOPLE

Iron makes pale faces rosy, and phosphorus restores nerves, making you full of vim and strength in a few days.

It is the desire of every man, woman and child to feel well, eat well, sleep well, look well; but you must have plenty of iron in your blood to obtain this glow of happiness and youth. The moment that the blood gets thin or impure, your stomach is unable to digest your food and it passes into the bowels undigested, then your bowels are unable to take away nourishment from the undigested food and the food begins to ferment, causing indigestion, the impurities run into your kidneys and cause Bright's disease, constipation, rheumatism, etc., and your skin becomes sallow, your nerves shaky, you become tired and all worn out, you take all sorts of medicines and you find nothing does you any good. Now, what you need is iron to build up your blood and phosphorus to restore your nerves. How much you weigh, then go to your druggist and get some Ironized Phosphorus with Iron, and in ten days you will find you will be 10 per cent. stronger. The moment that Ironized Phosphorus with Iron is taken it is absorbed by the blood and nerves and you will notice a difference almost immediately. By putting the Iron with the phosphorus you form an entirely new form of iron that will not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach nor cause constipation.

Ironized Phosphorus with Iron as spoken of here does not contain an atom of arsenic strychnine, nor any vegetable which has been found so harmful in almost every tonic. This is not a stimulant which makes you feel fine for a while, but instead it goes to the root of your trouble, builds up your blood, strengthens your nerves, giving power to digest your food and drives away all stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Ironized Phosphorus with Iron is dispensed in this city only at either F. C. Weber's or McDermid & Jury's stores.

Britain Definitely Refuses To Grant a Safe Conduct to New Austro-Hungarian Envoy

American Ambassador in London Informed That Count Adam Tarnowski von Tarnow Will Not Be Allowed to Reach America—Washington Sees Affront in Refusal—Might Make the Trip on the Deutschland

THE REASON FOR REFUSAL

LONDON, November 29.—The Foreign Office has sent to the American Ambassador, Mr. Walter Hines Page, a note definitely refusing to grant a safe conduct to Count Adam Tarnowski von Tarnow, the new Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States.

The reason for the refusal may be paraphrased as follows:—

Even if international law forbade the refusal of such a safe conduct, the action of Austrian and German Embassies and Consulates abroad has been so much in excess of regular diplomatic functions that the British government feels justified in withholding its consent for such diplomatists to travel to their posts.

MIGHT BE AN AFFRONT TO THE UNITED STATES.

An intimation was given at the State Department that if Great Britain carries out the threat to detain Count von Tarnow, the new Austro-Hungarian Ambassador to the United States, during his journey overseas the United States might consider the action as an affront to itself.

This intimation was indirectly given through a comparison of Great Britain's threatened action with the celebrated Trent affair, in which an American naval officer removed two commissioners of the Confederacy from a British merchant ship on the high seas. In that case Great Britain protested the action as being an affront to the British flag, and the Confederate commissioners were released by order of William H. Seward, Secretary of State.

It is admitted, however, that in this instance a very difficult case would be presented, because Count von Tarnow does not intend to cross the ocean on board an American vessel. Just how good a basis for protest the United States could find if the Ambassador were taken from a ship of another nationality is not clear.

MIGHT TRY THE DEUTSCHLAND.

If Count von Tarnow could make the voyage on board an American ship the problem would be solved; but that does not seem feasible, since he must go on board the ship at some Continental port.

About the only other way for him to make certain of his passage would seem to be for him to cross by the submarine merchant ship Deutschland. He probably would be obliged to curtail his retinue of servants and to put up with cramped quarters, but otherwise, at least, he seems doomed to capture by the British.

In the Trent case Secretary Seward held that "contraband persons" were subject to seizure on the high seas just as contraband goods are. The American naval officer who took the Confederate commissioners off the Trent reported that he looked up precedents to uphold his action, and, finding that contraband despatches were subject to seizure, he held that these commissioners "were the embodiment of contraband despatches," and hence also subject to seizure. Mr. Seward ordered their release, not because of the illegality of their seizure, but because they had not received a trial in the courts to prove their contraband character.

With this American precedent before them, the British might very well defend their action in seizing the Austrian Ambassador as "a contraband person," although they might be required to try him in British courts.

INTERNATIONAL LAW IN THE CASE.

Although the Ambassador would have diplomatic immunity in the United States, precedents do not make it clear that he would be entitled to such immunity on the high seas and at the hands of his enemies. In fact, many authorities on international law sustain the right of a belligerent to thus interfere with an enemy person on the way to perform services in a foreign country which it is to the military advantage of the belligerent to stop.

It was learned that the State Department so far has not made a formal request for the safe conduct of the Ambassador, but has confined itself to a transmission of the request of the Austrian government for such a courtesy. Therefore it is probable that if the issue is to be made up it will be necessary for the United States now to make such request on its own account.

Great Britain's attitude, if adhered to, would prevent a new Turkish Ambassador and successors to Captains Boy-Ed and Von Papen, formerly Naval and Military Attaches of the German Embassy, from reaching the United States.

Negotiations regarding a new Turkish Ambassador are said to have been under way for some time. It is understood, however, that the German government has no intention at this time of sending new Naval and Military Attaches, because of the belief that upon their arrival in this country they would immediately become subjects of suspicion and investigation.

OUR SERIAL STORY

"DESTINY"

By CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK

"I didn't know, Harrow," smiled the secretary, "that you were a disciple of the poets."

"Only, sir, in an unostentatious way," deprecated the man. "It has been my good fortune to serve in families where such niceties have been highly regarded, sir, and I take it advantageous associations reflect themselves in one's tastes, sir. But ——" he dropped his voice, and came a step nearer—"but, sir, if you will pardon me, sir, I should like to ask a question. You know, of course, that the master's sister arrived last night from Europe?"

Bristoll nodded. He himself had not yet had the privilege of seeing the young woman, the fame of whose loveliness had preceded her: a loveliness which had enthralled men from the Irish Sea to Suez.

"Of course, sir, it's not for me to entertain opinions, but—" The butler paused in evident embarrassment, and the secretary's eyes narrowed a little.

"You are quite right, Harrow," he asserted shortly. "I can't see that you are required to express any opinion."

"Of course, sir, I was only going to say—"

"Well—don't say it."

But for all his obsequiousness, the admirable Harrow was a persistent diplomat.

"No, sir, of course I shan't. I was only going to ask you—"

The secretary looked up with an impatient frown on a forehead shaped for resolution.

"All right. Ask me and have it over."

"I was going to inquire, sir, whether you regard it likely that the new mistress would—as I might say, sir, institute any sweeping changes of regime in our milieu? Things have gone on very well, sir, as they were." The interrogation carried a note of sharp anxiety: the apprehension of a petty monarch who might face the fate of being deposed.

"I don't know." The reply was curt, and Harrow with a bow said only—"Yes, sir, thank you. I was just speculating on the possibilities, sir."

For a while there was silence in the library, as Bristoll ran through letter after letter, his hand racing over the stenographer's pad upon which he reduced their purport to succinct notes. He always enjoyed these responsible mornings with his chief because they were times of intimate association with a mind that directed colossal operations, and they savored almost of the importance of cabinet meetings.

Often, as he read the fluctuations on the ticker tape or glanced at financial scareheads in the evening papers, he smiled knowingly with the memory of a sentence spoken at the breakfast table or an edict uttered in the library, which had been the motive power behind the news; and which to the world at large remained an unseen impulse.

Now Bristoll heard a quick step coming down the stairs with a schoolboy's buoyant lightness and the whistling of a popular air. It might have been a college sophomore arriving light-heartedly from his cold plunge, rather than the Titan whose word in the Street was already a thing which no one of the older money kings could ignore.

Carl Bristoll rose, and Hamilton Burton broke off his whistling to smilingly as he clapped the younger man on the shoulder and inquired with a voice remarkably soft and musical, "Well, how is our young Minister of Finance this morning?"

Hamilton Montagu Burton stood an even six feet and from a generous breadth of shoulders, swung back in free erectness, he tapered to a trim slenderness of waist and thigh. In the immaculate elegance of his dress he justified his reputation as the best clothed man in New York, even while he retained the grace of a seeming carelessness. His eyes, though he had slept a scant four hours, looked out clear pupiled and tireless, but it was the shape and the carriage of the head that proclaimed mastery. The pattern of brow and jaw and clean-cut lip and indomitable eye gave that head an alert power which made it the head of one born to command. The illuminating smile could give way to a sternness and a decision that became ruthless in its decision, and the eyes could harden like diamonds as swiftly as they could melt.

Carl Bristoll laughed, and after the custom of badinage that had grown up between them he made a bow of mock ceremony as he replied.

"Quite fit, Sire, and your Majesty's appearance proclaims you equally so."

It was hardly the sort of greeting that the outsider might have expected, but neither financier nor secretary was an ordinary type and between them throve an excellent understanding.

As Bristoll read from his notes Hamilton Burton's face lost its smile and became instantly attentive while his questions snapped out—clear-clipped and comprehensive.

It seemed that the brain was separated into many zones, each carrying forward its separate functions without interference or confusion. Through the channels of vision, hearing and quick independent thought, varied propositions were at one time being absorbed while the master instinct of coordination was weighing all and planning yet other affairs.

"And now," announced the financier, when the stenographic notes had been read and others written in swift adjudication of their problems, "the rest can wait until we get down town. There's Harrow calling us to breakfast—and breakfast is an institution that I particularly venerate." The master of the establishment turned to the butler and inquired, "Hasn't Miss Burton come down?"

"Miss Burton, sir," replied the man with a shade of uneasiness in his voice, "sent word by her maid that she would breakfast in her room."

The naive smile faded from Hamilton Burton's face, and for an instant it took on something of that aggressive set which men in the Stock Exchange had come to regard as precursor of a frenzied day.

"Send word to my sister," he directed quietly, "that I insistently request her to join us at breakfast. I must see her before I leave the house." He strode with a resilient step about the room, pausing idly before a favorite landscape here and a prized bronze there. Patience was one quality which Hamilton Burton had not spent effort in acquiring. It was his custom to let others adapt themselves to his convenience, yet his eyes were unruffled as he smilingly turned to his secretary. "'Serene I wait—with folded hands,'" he murmured.

But when Harrow returned it was as bearer of a message which marred the serenity of this waiting.

"Miss Burton sends word, sir, that she will receive you in her boudoir in a half hour. She does not find it convenient to come down to breakfast."

For a moment, Hamilton Burton remained standing, and his gray eyes flashed forebodingly, though the line of his lips was not deflected. Then he led the way to the breakfast table.

"Tell Miss Burton," he ordered shortly, "that we are awaiting her in the breakfast room. Say to her that I trust she will make the delay short. Then as the butler turned, the master halted him again. "No," he amended, "I'll send a note—give me a sheet of paper."

As the embarrassed servant laid a note card by his plate, he hastily scribbled:

"Dear Mary: While you are mistress of my house I shall expect you to appear at the breakfast table. The rest of the day is yours. This is final. Mr. Britoll and I are waiting and my time is not to be valued lightly. Please do not tax my patience longer."

When Harrow had gone, Burton turned again to Bristoll, and with that systematic quality which made in his brain so versatile he dismissed the annoyance for another matter.

"I want your opinion on the coffee," he said lightly. "It came from the Jungas valley in Bolivia. Men who have drunk it there are not satisfied with any other. In the local market it is costly and as an export it is unattainable."

"Yet you have obtained it," smiled the secretary. "How?"

Burton laughed. "I wanted it," he announced briefly. "So I got it."

"Mr. Burton," the younger man spoke hesitantly, "you look very fit and seem absolutely on edge, but I'm afraid you're rather overdoing things. I don't mean any impertinence of suggestion, but the trout are jumping in the mountain brooks just now. Can't you drop things for a few days and climb into a flannel shirt—and rest? You could go somewhere where the leaves are rustling in the wood and things are as God made them close to His immortal granite. I don't want to see you break yourself down."

Hamilton Burton was looking at the percolator in which the Bolivian coffee was bubbling as restively as the fires of the volcano at whose base it grew from berry to lush plant and came again to berry. He was balancing a spoon on his forefinger, and smiling with quiet amusement.

"Now that's very thoughtful of our young minister of Finance." He spoke softly as the fugitive smile played around the corners of his lips. "Very thoughtful indeed, but the suggestion is, after all, unavailable." He paused, and the smile died. "I don't think I've ever become autobiographical with you, have I, Carl?"

The secretary shook his head. "But, of course, you know I should feel honored at any time you did," he declared with wholehearted and boyish enthusiasm.

"Very well. Until I was sixteen years old I lived very close to mountains built of God's immortal granite. Whenever I went out to do my chores I buried my shins on God's immortal granite. Whenever I plowed I had to do acrobatics to save as much of the plowshare as possible from God's immortal granite. It's all very pastoral to talk about milk fresh from the sweet-breathed cow, but for ten years I was lady's maid to two singularly repulsive cows—and in time they clayed upon me. Whenever those Juno-eyed kine lowed for a drink of water, it was up to me to hustle out and serve them—and I never got a tip for my service. To this good day, Carl, the sight of a cow gives me cramps in the fingers and melancholy in the soul. Henceforth I'll take my milk in hermetically sealed jars from one of my own model dairies—and I'll try to forget that its origin is—cows. That cream in the pitcher there came from a farm of mine up in Westchester. Bulk for bulk, it costs me about the same as old champagne, but it's mighty cheap compared to what that other milk came to." He paused and gazed at the spoon balanced on a steady forefinger.

"As for the whisper of the breeze through the silver birches, I've heard it with chilblains on my feet and bruises on my heart and henceforth when I want to see the shadows fall I'll go and stand under Cheops' pyramid or the Coliseum at Rome or some other edifice reared with human hands as the monument to human achievement that helped to build the world. When I die they'll once more lay me close to Nature's breast, and, being dead, I sha'n't object—but until that time I'll stay away—as far away as possible."

The financier ended his good-humored tirade and glanced up to meet the frankly alarmed gaze of Harrow who at that moment reappeared in the door.

"Miss Burton says," announced the butler, his usual suavity shaken beyond control, "that there is no answer to your note. She says you already have her reply."

The coffee in the percolator was bubbling furiously, and the ice about the grape-fruit was beginning to melt. Hamilton Burton rose abruptly from his chair. "Please excuse me for a moment, Carl," he said in a low voice. "I will go up and bring my sister down to breakfast."

The furnishing and decorating of Mary Burton's apartments had engrossed her brother's interest for some weeks prior to her arrival and when in answer to his rap a silvery voice said, "Come in," he stood on the threshold of a boudoir as richly and tastefully detailed as a princess of the blood royal could have asked.

But the girl, who sat indolently before her mirror, clad in a morning negligee of exquisite delicacy, was so like a colorful and lustrous pearl that one forgot her surroundings. Hamilton's eyes that could change so swiftly from implacability to disarming softness, flashed into pride as he looked at her.

"Mary," he amiably began, "I think there must be some misunderstanding. I asked you to come down."

The girl looked up with a serene smile. "Did they not then give you my message?" she inquired softly. "I told them to say that I would breakfast here."

The man's eyes narrowed and darkened. Something in his domineering spirit bristled, as it always bristled under questioning or opposition.

"Why? You are fully dressed, are you not?"

"Assuredly."

"Then what reason can you have for refusing to come when I ask it? Is it simply that you wish to defy me? I am not accustomed to being disobeyed."

Lifted Heavy Log
Strained His Kidneys
Got Pains in Back

Men in all walks of life where it is necessary to stoop, bend and lift heavy objects put a great deal of strain on the kidneys, and this continual wear and tear, sooner or later will cause the kidneys to become affected in some way. The most common of these troubles is backache, and the only way to cure the lame and aching back is to strengthen the kidneys.

This Doan's Kidney Pills will do for you. They know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are made for the kidneys only.

Mr. Owen Hewey, West Clifford, N. S., writes: "I was working in the woods and lifted a heavy log. I must have strained my kidneys, as I got kidney trouble and pains in my back. I could not do any work for five months. A friend advised me to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and after having used them I felt as if I were only eighteen years old. I can now work as well as ever I did, and have had no pains since.

Doan's Kidney Pills are put up in an oblong grey box with the trade mark of a "Maple Leaf." Do not accept any other.

Price 50c or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

HUGE WAR ORDERS FOR BOOT LEATHER

British and Russian Governments Have Immense Needs.

The Shoe and Leather Journal for November contains the following recent despatch from London, Eng.:

"The Government's demand for leather is enormous. Between October 30th and Nov. 15th, they required a further 9,000,000 feet of upper leather; also they require 7,000,000 feet for ankle boots for the British Army, these boots to be delivered before Dec. 30. The Russian Government has given the English Government an order, and are prepared to take up 40,000,000 feet of upper leather between now and the middle of this month. These figures are far away the biggest, and fairly put anything that has ever been heard of before in the shade for such a short delivery period.

SAYS BODY IS A POISON FACTORY

Urges Everyone to drink glass of hot water before breakfast.

Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken day after day leaves in the alimentary canal a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not completely eliminated from the system each day, becomes food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels. From this mass of left-over waste toxins and ptomainelike poisons are formed and sucked into the blood.

Men and women who can't get feeling right must begin to take inside baths. Before eating breakfast each morning drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash out of the thirty feet of bowels the previous day's accumulation of poisons and toxins and to keep the entire alimentary canal clean, pure and fresh.

Those who are subject to sick headache colds biliousness constipation others who wake up with bad taste, foul breath, backache, rheumatic stiffness, or have a sour, gassy stomach after meals are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store and begin practicing internal sanitation. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on the subject.

Remember inside bathing is more important than outside bathing, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood causing poor health, while the bowel pores do. Just as soap and hot water cleanses sweet-ens and freshens the skin so hot water and limestone phosphate set on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

Margaret Deland has just written a most eloquent plea for the saving of the wild flowers.

In making chicken salad be sure to take out every atom of bone, gristle and skin.

CASEMENT NO LUNATIC LONG A GERMAN AGENT

Some Suspicious Facts About His Putumayo Exposures and Sudden Nationalist Sympathies

Sir Roger Casement was a mushroom Irish "patriot," whose name was never heard of in Ireland in connection with the national movement previous to 1913, when he suddenly insinuated himself into the confidence of Irish leaders as an organizer of the Nationalist Volunteers. Casement seems to have been born somewhere in the North of Ireland, but had lived practically the whole of his life in England, or in foreign countries as a British consul. He appears to have won the friendship of many prominent Englishmen and his consular services were spoken of in the highest terms, and rewarded by a knighthood in 1911.

In 1912, while he was consul-general at Rio Janeiro, he made a report on alleged torturing and killing of Brazilian natives by British rubber operators in the Putumayo Rubber fields, got appointed chairman of a Royal Commission which investigated his own allegations, and was supposed to have brought about reforms. In 1912 he retired from the consular service and was duly pensioned by the British Government. The end of 1913 saw him in Dublin as a prominent backer of the Nationalist Volunteers. Later he visited the United States, where he delivered a revolutionary address of the old Fenian type.

In True Hun Colors

At the outbreak of the war, when Mr. Redmond made his historic speech in support of the Allied cause in the British Parliament, CASEMENT IMMEDIATELY SHOWED HIS HAND. Allied and supported by one Eoin MacNeill, a visionary professor of the Irish National University, he inaugurated an anti-recruiting anti-English campaign among the Volunteers. Mr. Redmond and his followers met this pro-German attempt by calling for a "show-down," on the part of the men. The result was that the overwhelming majority of the Volunteers arrayed themselves on the side of Redmond and Britain, only an infinitesimal few going over with Casement and his clique.

The general response of the Irish people to the call for recruits probably resulted in his offences being lightly regarded, and the consequence was that he soon after turned up in Berlin. Casement next attracted world attention by endeavoring to organise an Irish Brigade to fight against England from among Irish prisoners in Germany, which attempt met with an almost similar fate on that meted out to the "patriot" Kipling wrote about in his immortal "Mulvaney." Then it was reported that Casement had applied for Bavarian naturalisation. Later there was a report that he would endeavor to reach the United States to preach an anti-English crusade with St. John Gaffney, the Irish-American consul who was recalled from Munich because of his pro-German sentiment.

The Irish View

English friends of Casement, including Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, are of the opinion that the man was mentally deranged. But there is another theory put forward by the Irish press, which seems far more likely. It is believed by Irish journalists who have closely inquired into his connection with the Irish movement that Casement had been for years past the paid agent of Berlin. They point out that his report on alleged British atrocities in South America came at a time when Germany was carrying on a propaganda against British trade and British influence in South America; and that his arrival on the scene in Ireland synchronized with the belief in Germany that the country was on the eve of civil war, when German correspondents from the German Government press were actually in Belfast and Dublin to send home the news of the "war."

Wonders of Science

At the Royal Herbert Hospital, Woolwich, boasting the finest X-rays outfit in the kingdom, the "negatives" illustrate rifle and revolver bullets in the trunk and extremities, and they even show the case of a soldier who for some unknown reason, swallowed his tunic buttons. There are instances of enemy bullets, ploughing through the shoulders, splintering arms, and actually reaching the left ventricle of the heart.

Nine Sons at War

Because William Bell, a wild duck rearer for Sir Richard Graham, already has nine sons in the army, all having volunteered at the outbreak of the war, he has been allowed an exemption from military duty for his tenth son, William, eighteen years old.

"Granny" Chamberlain

"Few young mothers realize the extent to which a cold lowers the system and makes it susceptible to disease. The majority of diseases arise from germs, but it is not widely known that a healthy system will repel their attacks.

Mothers should never allow a cold to run for 24 hours without attention. If this is made a rule there will be less sickness for young mothers to worry over. A good reliable medicine for coughs, colds, croup and bronchitis should always be kept in the home. REALLY "SIDE BY SIDE"

Blue And Khaki Advanced Together As If On Parade

London Times:—There is a place where some day a stately monument should be erected at the joint expense of the two governments, a monument which should have figures of the British and French soldiers, both steel-helmeted, standing shoulder to shoulder. The site of the monument should be a point in a certain trench where our lines did actually join. There, simultaneously, men of the two Armies rose from their trenches and went out literally abreast, "precisely," said one who saw them, in describing it to me, "as if they were on parade." That evening they were still abreast, the blue and khaki, some 4,000 yards to the northeast. And there seems no likelihood that we shall ever come back again."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural colour and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

FIGHT WITH FOKKERS

British flight sergeant tells of a remarkable escape from a German Fokker in the following words: "On the 9th day we were on patrol duty about 60 miles over the enemy's lines when we were attacked by a number of German machines, including some of their noted Fokker monoplanes. We saw them preparing for the attack, and as we were quite ready we waited for them. You cannot imagine how anxious we were for them to get near to us.

"We rose to a height of between 14,000 ft. and 15,000 ft. before the fight began. They, as usual, attacked from the rear (being faster machines). I was with Captain Howett, who said, 'Mind and give them some lead.' I waited until they came ridiculously near, and then emptied a full magazine into them. The machine fell like a log out of sight, and I am certain they paid the price. This damped rear attacks. The next one came more to the front, so I let him have some at greater range. They must have been hit for the machine made a nose dive and cleared off at once. I could not see the result because we were immediately attacked by another before I knew where I was. I could see him firing at us before I was ready, and by that time I had fired five or six rounds I was hit with a bullet that went through my thigh.

"Almost at the same moment an anti-aircraft shell hit us, blowing my seat away, large pieces of shell piercing my thick leather flying jacket. I was stunned for a time, but as in no position to do a faint, so I pulled myself together and we made for our lines, then some 50 miles away doing 'ducks and drakes' to avoid anti-aircraft shells. We reached our lines, but there was no hospital, so we set off again by aeroplane to the nearest. I am now at Boulogne, having the best possible attention."

CRIPPLED, BUT TOOK MANY HUN PRISONERS

Happiest Soldier in French Army is Gentle Lad Whose 'Cleverness' Outwitted Captors

La Narcontesse writes from Paris as follows: Lying on his bed in a military hospital to-day I saw a French soldier of barely twenty, with a gentle, almost childlike expression in his pale face. But before he was brought there he had made the record for himself of capturing single handed fifty-two Germans and handing them over to his officers. When the war broke out he was at school studying to become an engineer. He immediately gave up his studies and volunteered as a private. He rose rapidly and the battle of Champagne found him about to be made a lieutenant.

On the day of the great French offensive he was in the first rank of a colonial regiment rushing towards the German trenches. The first trench was captured without resistance, not a single German was to be seen anywhere, but when the attackers were about to swarm into the second line trench they were suddenly made the target of a terrible machine gun fire from well-hidden German positions.

A glance was enough to tell them they were surrounded. All their officers, who had led their men into the bottom of the second trench, were killed or fatally wounded one after the other and the young Frenchman found himself lying on the ground with a bullet through his lung which had broken his collar bone and shoulder-blade. The German stretcher-bearers came around to pick him up, but he asked them to look after others more seriously wounded and was left where he was.

Waited Four Days

He was very happy at this delay. He knew that three more French columns of attack were to advance and felt certain that in a short time they would capture the trench. But evening came and he realised that the enemy had succeeded in beating off the attack for the time being. It was late when he was at last carried to a German dressing station, where a score of nurses under the command of two surgeons were tending the French and German wounded so as to get them ready for the ambulances which were to carry them to Germany.

The ambulance never came, for the French opened a violent bombardment which prevented them from approaching the station. For four days this dreadful shelling continued. For four days the men were without food and new German wounded kept on pouring into the station. The last arrivals said that the French were advancing and were only a short distance off. The young hero knew a little German and he thought the moment had come to carry out a plan he had conceived the night before. He was going to suggest to the Germans that they should surrender and two wounded French officers lying next to him encouraged him to try.

Scared the Hun

"As we cannot get any food here," he said to the German surgeon in command, "there does not appear to be anything to do but to surrender. The French are close by and if they find that French wounded have been starved they will be furious. You have everything to gain by taking my advice."

The two surgeons held a short consultation, as a result of which two men were sent into the French trench under a flag of truce carrying a letter for the officer in command. An hour later the young Frenchmen had the pleasure of turning over to his own colonel fifty-two German prisoners. He was taken to the hospital and the President of France pinned the War Cross on his chest a few days later. He will be a cripple for life, but I never met a happier man.

HIS SAD MISHAP

A Touch of Humor From "Pewter" of the Trenches

A wounded soldier, asked by a friend what struck him most at the Front, responded, with a laugh:—"The thing that seems most strange is the fact that in the most serious moments and in situations that are really perilous something funny seems bound to crop up. There's a fellow in my company named Potts, and we soon christened him Pewter. His features are plain, some folks would call him ugly; but Pewter has the idea that he's as handsome as they make 'em.

"'I don't care what I get or where I get it, so long as I don't get a clump on the head,' he said to me one day when we were going into the trenches. 'I'd like to take a decent face home with me.'

"He'd hardly get the words out of his mouth before there came a regular hail of shrapnel right over the trench, and one chunk caught Pewter on the jaw. I turned round, to see him sprawling on all fours and called out:—

"'Hurt, Pewter?'

"'Nothing to speak of,' he gasped; 'you get on wi' it, never mind me.'

"The poor chap was clutching lumps of earth and clay and groping about as a man will do when he's got it badly, so I said:—

"'If you aren't hurt, Pewter, what are you doing down here?'

"'Looking for my teeth,' he snapped. 'I got 'em on the easy system an' I've only paid seven instalments up to now. They don't belong to me exactly till I've finish paying. I'm not looking for trouble, but that dentist chap is a beggar for law.'"

Pale Weak Nervous Children

SCHOOL days are anxious days for parents as well as for children.

At the most critical time in their lives girls, and boys, too, are subjected to the enormous nervous strain which examinations and excited ambition entail.

To many children this means nervous breakdown, with weakness of the digestive system, headaches, fainting spells, and a run-down condition, which makes them fit subjects for coughs, colds and contagious diseases.

The blood has become thin and watery, and the nerves are being starved, as is evidenced by weakness of the optic nerve and the necessity of wearing glasses.

The rational treatment for this condition is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. While gentle and natural in action, this food cure is wonderfully potent in restoring strength and vigor to the exhausted nervous system.

Experience with many thousands of cases has proven that this restorative treatment is just what pale, weak, nervous children need to build up their systems and to help them back to health and vigor.

Mrs. H. Houston, Highland Grove, Ont., writes: "While attending school my daughter became weak and very much run down. She was frequently troubled with bad fainting spells, and nothing we tried seemed to do her any good. We were advised to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and did so with most satisfactory results. I am pleased to tell you that after using five boxes of the Nerve Food she was completely cured, and has had no return of the fainting spells."

This statement is certified to by Mr Hamilton Houston, J.P.

LEAGUE WITH GERMANY SCORNED BY BRITAIN

Maunderings of Herr Professor Munsterberg Forget the Lusitania —Rebuke for Insults

The London Daily Mail published an article by "An Englishman" criticising, under the heading of "An infamous Proposal," Professor Munsterberg's "alliance" article. The writer says: "The infamous proposal which he makes is nothing less than "a firm alliance of America, Great Britain, and Germany,' The man who has a vast deal to say about the mails and the blacklists has already forgotten the Lusitania. No doubt he regards death by drowning as a smaller inconvenience than an opened letter. He will find few honest men to agree with him, and when the war has been brought to an end by the defeat of Germany he will discover for himself that America will refuse indignantly to make an alliance with a nation which without warning has drowned the peaceful citizens of a neutral country and has struck a showy medal to commemorate her gallant exploit.

A Revolting Idea

"Perhaps it has not yet reached Dr. Munsterberg's brain that France, Russia, Italy, and England are bound together in bonds of a strict alliance. We assure him that what we say is true, and that we intend to keep inviolate the very letter of our agreement. In truth, it is nothing less than an impertinence even in a German professor to suggest that England after two years of desperate warfare should go over bag and baggage to the enemy, renounce the objects for which her sons have bled and died, and find comfort and peace in the heart of her perjured foe. It is a strange thing that psychologists are always at fault when they attempt to understand the human character.

England's Motives Clean

"The English have little skill in hiding their intentions or disguising their motives. They know well, and have explained clearly to the world, why they went to war in 1914 and how they mean to use their victory. Their history is an open book, which even professors may study if they choose, and it teaches them this one lesson: that not for all the army of Germany nor for all the wealth of America shall we ever prove faithless to our loyal and valiant allies. As for Dr. Munsterberg, we hope we shall never hear of him again. He may be an efficient emissary of the Kaiser, but he is a very poor psychologist."

Souvenir For Germans

"Bike" Evans, former Brantford ball player, at the front lost none of his old nerve. The story has come out that recently "Bike" crawled over to a German dug-out and called out with expletives: "How many are there of you down there?" The answer came back in good English: "Eight of us." "Then divide these among you," called Evans, and with that he hurled in two hand grenades, and in the confusion made his way back unharmed.

PRUSSIAN PRINCE'S PANIC

How the Kaiser's Son Was Driven From "Home"

Prince Eitel, the Kaiser's second son, (according to Le Journal) at one time held the command on the northern front of the Somme, and his General Headquarters were in the chateau of the little village of Temple La Fosse. One evening a big naval gun was trained on the chateau, distant only ten miles. The aim was so exact that every one of the shots hit the mark. In less than two hours all that remained of the chateau was a heap of flaming ruins.

The curiosity of the French gunners as to the fate of Prince Eitel was satisfied by German prisoners taken next day, who reported that the first shell struck the right wing of the chateau a few yards from the room which served the Prince and his Staff as a map room.

Seized with panic, the Kaiser's son and his suite fled downstairs, jumped into motor cars, and made off at full speed, not stopping until they were a dozen miles behind the lines. The Prince's terror, which soon became known to the whole army, was severely commented on by the Kaiser's soldiers.

STEALING WAS SO EASY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.— Every room of her apartment piled high with $25,000 worth of stolen finery, she could not possibly have any use for, Marian Clark, a movie actress, was in a cell here charged with shoplifting.

"Thank God I was arrested," was the comment attributed to the girl by the detectives who took her in charge. "I can't tell you why I did it. My income from my father's estate in Boston and the money I earned in the movies was ample for my needs. I just took the things because it was so easy. I didn't need them, and most of them I never used. I've been doing it for five months. When I'm through with this I'm going somewhere and start life over."

In the trunks and boxes jamming her apartment Miss Clark had stowed 198 pairs of gloves, 75 pairs of shoes, 70 hats, 60 silk waists, 30 gowns worth $80 to $150 each, 65 pocket books, several prayer and hymn books, 16 parasols, vases, picture frames, mirrors, and other things.

Miss Clark appears in a film with Miss Marguerite Clark, but she is not related to the movie star. She was to be arraigned to-day.

SLICK TRICKS OF WAR

Fake Scenery to Deceive Enemy Aeroplanes

A French writer says: Some one asked me if I knew that the scene-painters of the French theatres had been mobilized and formed into a battalion for the purpose of painting scenery to mask gun positions—and I laughed at the story. Since then I have seen gun positions so hidden. Suppose that it is found necessary to post a battery in the open, where no cover is available. In the ordinary course of events the German airmen would discover those guns before they had fired a dozen rounds, and the German batteries would promptly proceed to put them out of action. So they erect over them a sort of tent, and the scene-painters are set to work to paint that tent, that from a little distance it cannot be distinguished from the surrounding scenery. If it is on the Belgian littoral, they will paint it to look like a sand dune. If it is in the wooded country of Alsace or the Argonne, they will so paint it that, seen from an aeroplane, it will look like a clump of trees. I have seen a whole row of aeroplane hangars, each of them the size of a church, so cleverly painted that, from a thousand feet above they could not be seen at all. A road over which there is heavy traffic lies within both range and sight of the enemy's guns. Anything seen moving along that road instantly becomes the target for a rain of shells. So along the side of the road nearest the enemy is raised a screen of canvas painted to represent a row of trees such as commonly border French highways. Behind that canvas screen horse, foot and guns can then be moved in safety, though the road must be kept constantly sprinkled so that the suspicions of German observers shall not be aroused by a tell-tale cloud of dust.

More Need Watching

According to a Copenhagen correspondent, Danish tailors are keeping their eyes on would-be customers of German nationality. It is forbidden to export Danish cloth to Germany, and Denmark gets English cloth only on condition that it be not resold to the Germans. Many Germans who run up to Denmark take the opportunity of trying to get measured for as many suits as possible through various shops, so that when they get back to Germany they can sell at a big profit the suits which they do not personally need for their own use.

Askari Can't Hit Zepp.

From a soldier's diary of East Africa: "The German native soldier, called out here Askari, can't hit a Zepp at 10 yards. This is a fact. I suppose without exception he is one of the finest fighting men on earth, black, white, or yellow, but he can't shoot for toffee."

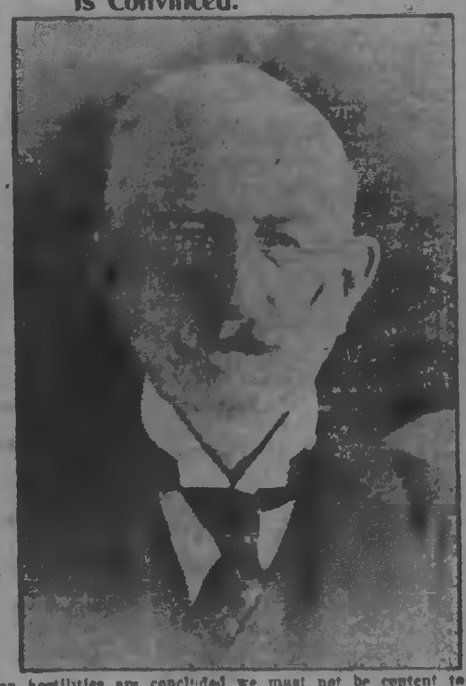
FRENCH IN THE SCHOOLS

Should Be Compulsory, Lord Shaughnessy Is Convinced.



"INTERVIEWED in London," Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, stated his conviction that it was essential to the development of Canadian trade that both French and English should be compulsory subjects in Canadian schools, and that though other languages might be optional the more languages learned the better.

He said: "The subject of trade after the war is one in which Canada is deeply interested at the present moment. Of course we are pre-occupied just now with the successful prosecuties of the war, but at the same time it is possible to frame in our minds the general outline of our trade policy. When hostilities are concluded we must not be content to develop scientific research alone, but amongst other things in connection with trade after the war greater attention should be paid to the universal instruction in schools in foreign languages. In the past we have been content to give our boys and girls just adequate education in their own tongue. If the lessons of this war are to be taken to heart, and if we are to extend our trade then we must make our youngsters familiar with the language of other nations, and, in my opinion, the French language should be made compulsory in every common school throughout the Empire. For it is the most common medium in exchange of thought all over the world. Russian and Italian should also be studied.

The Enemy Had Superior Armaments

CAMPAIGN CAREFULLY PLANNED.

As to the line of communications of the Roumanians on the Alt front, they do not seem to be in any immediate danger as the result of Mackensen's operations. Between Bucharest and Craiova, about forty miles north of the Danube and parallel to it, a railroad was projected before the war broke out. It does not seem that it was ever completed, so that, as a matter of fact, there is no direct railroad between these two places. The railroad on which the Roumanians depend runs northwest from Bucharest to Pitesci, and thence southwest to Craiova, crossing the Alt, of course, en route. Mackensen is still many miles from this road, and there is much fighting to do before it can be reached. This is but small comfort to the Roumanians, however, who are finding themselves outmatched in every quarter of western Wallachia. If they could not hold the line of the Alt where the river is quite wide, there is certainly small chance that they will be able to make a successful stand on a smaller and less serious an obstacle.

As the campaign against Roumania opens out, the German general plan becomes more and more apparent in its details, and may certainly be classed as one of the most brilliant pieces of work in the entire war. It demanded most careful planning in every detail. It depended for its success on several disconnected operations, each of which must go ahead as scheduled or the entire campaign would fail. And the entire thing in every detail has moved forward with the precision of a piece of machinery. At no point has there been a check or a mistake. When the history of the war is written there can be little doubt but that this campaign will be emphasized as a strategic classic.

Get the whine out of your voice or it will stop the development and growth of your body. It will narrow and shrink your mind. It will drive away your friends; it will make you unpopular. Quit your whining, brace up; go to work; be something; stand for something; fill your place in the world. Instead of whining around exciting only pity and contempt, face about and make something of yourself. Reach up to the stature of a strong, ennobling manhood, to the beauty and strength of a superb womanhood. There is nothing the matter with you. Just quit your whining and go to work.

No public speaker, be he preacher or political orator, can draw an audience of one-tenth that which greets the average newspaper to-day, and thus the tone of the press becomes a matter of vital importance to the welfare of the community. The influence is wide spread and is also lasting. Therefore we say, study well the contents of the paper you are taking and if it contains that which tends to lower the scale of morality and humanity and not to the elevation of that which is good and right, better off are you by far without it.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, seemed weak chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Stevens, Ningo, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a cure for croup and bronchitis.

CANADIAN VALOR

Incidents of the Taking of Regina Trench

A Canadian official eye-witness relates the following: On Sunday we delivered a strong attack upon Regina Trench (north of Courcelette). Battalions from Montreal, Nova Scotia, and Eastern Canada, and a French-Canadian battalion took part. Desperate fighting occurred, and our men succeeded, despite heavy machine gun fire, in penetrating into several sectors. The trench was strongly built and protected by two wire entanglements which our artillery fire had not entirely destroyed. The enemy counter-attacked in force and regained the whole trench.

An action of the greatest gallantry was performed by a private belonging to an Edmonton battalion. He was taking part in a bombing attack when the advance was arrested and the supply of bombs exhausted. Although one of his fingers had been blown off by a German bomb, he jumped out of the trench and, firing at point-blank range at the enemy, killed and wounded many. The remainder—62 in number—thinking themselves cut off, surrendered. The private, with two other men, escorted the prisoners across open ground under heavy fire to a support trench, and then returned and reported himself for duty to his commanding officer before his wounds had been dressed. This action, undoubtedly made it possible for the battalion to capture and hold 250 yards of trench at a critical moment in the general attack.

WHY PEOPLE FEEL DEPRESSED IN THE COLD WEATHER

Why is tiredness and langour so prevalent just now? A physician explained that the cold of winter drives blood from the surface of the body to the liver. Normally one-fourth of the whole blood supply is in the liver, and when more blood is accumulated in that organ everything goes wrong. No better remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills which are composed of such vegetable extracts as Mandrake and Butternut, and possess wonderful liver stimulating powers. It's a marvel the way Hamilton's Pills clear the blood of the poisonous humours. They put new life into worn out bodies, build up the appetite, bring back a reserve of nerve energy, tide folks over the cold days of winter and the depressing days of spring. For your health and body comfort get a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills to-day.

RUSSIANS ARE FINE MEN

Abstemious, Powerful and Childlike Are Soldiers in France

A neutral correspondent writes: I have seen the Russian soldiers in the French trenches at the front. A happier lot I have never laid eyes on than these tall, broad-shouldered, straight-limbed Muscovites. You involuntarily compare them with the crews of alert, powerful lumberjacks you meet with in the great forests of North America. There is something so frank, honest and childlike in these smiling, good-natured giants, who have been picked from the best regiments in the Czar's army.

It would be utterly impossible to associate these men with any deed of violence or cruelty, and although they are in France, where light claret or white country wine is part of the soldier's daily ration, they have voluntarily and unanimously chosen to abstain from it, because they consider themselves in honor bound to keep their promise to the "Little Father" at home, who will not taste a single drop of wine himself as long as there is a single enemy soldier on the sacred soil of Holy Russia.

As we arrived at the headquarters of the brigade, we found its genial commander in chief, General Lekhvitsky, about to put on his helmet for a tour of inspection of the front trenches. He received us charmingly and we immediately felt at home in the presence of this man whom his soldiers, officers and men alike, idolize.

"So you have come to see my boys in their front trenches," he exclaimed when he had asked what he might do for us. "Nothing could possibly please me more and you have come at a very suitable moment, for I was just about to go there myself. I have made it a rule to go there every day." We started at once. Picking up on the way the colonel in command of that particular sector and at top speed our limousines rushed along the dusty road, winding their way with marvellous skill among the hundreds of motor trucks coming back empty after unloading their loads of shells and cartridges at the supply depots immediately behind the front. A little farther on we saw men preparing the soldiers' plain meals, singing all the while soft melancholy Russian folk songs.

LIEUTENANT'S HEROISM

Details of Narrative Show Wonderful English Courage

A story of heroism is told in the "London Gazette," which announces that the King had conferred the Albert Medal of the Second Class on Lieutenant Robert Arthur Startin, R. N., for his service, when, during a violent gale and snowstorm, the whaler of the Melpomene, with a crew of six men, was driven on the mud about three-quarters of a mile up the river above Parkestone Quay, Harwich. "Lieutenant Startin, hearing that the whaler was missing," says the official report, "set out alone at night to search along the river bed. After wading through deep mud, at times up to his armpits, for a distance of about 900 yards, he eventually found the whaler, half full of water, aground on the mud, with her crew lying helpless in the boat, having given up all hope of being rescued.

"He only succeeded in rousing them by beating them with his stick, one man having to be forcibly dragged all the way to the shore by Lieutenant Startin and the coxswain of the boat. After dragging him for about an hour, a distance of about forty or fifty yards had been covered, when a light was seen moving inshore. Lieutenant Startin ordered the crew to remain where they were while he went to the light, which proved to be carried by a search party with a rope. This rope was taken backward and forwards personally by Lieutenant Startin from the shore to the boat's crew until each one had been rescued, this exhausting and dangerous task in the deep mud being performed under the most trying weather conditions. All the crew were thus saved, though one afterwards died from the effects of exposure."

WHERE RED TAPE GROWS

Aviator Won Military Cross, But Was Sent Home

The United Service Gazette says:—An officer serving with a famous regiment abroad, but formerly a journalist well known in Fleet Street and the press gallery, writes as follows to a friend in Liverpool: "Has —— been called up yet? I suppose so, and if so, congratulate him. I hope he will like soldiering, and not get too exasperated with military methods. I thought—and think—parliament pretty awful. But the army ——! Here is a case told me by a man who knows the chief actor therein, a famous aviator who had been flying since the early days of aviation. He joined the Flying Corps. His first day in France he broke his aeroplane on landing. Second day, by an extraordinary bit of bad luck that had not happened to him ever before, he broke his second aeroplane in landing. Thereafter he flew for five months, did very good work, and got lots of distinction, including the Military Cross. After which, the wheels of the gods having been chewing the cud over his initial mishap for five months, he was instructed to return to England and report at home flying school for a course of instruction! And he had to go!"

Model War Saloon

Carlisle City can make the proud boast of being the first town in England to launch a "model public-house." It has been opened, financed and run by a Department of the State. Lord d'Abernon, Chairman of the Liquor Traffic Central Control Board performed the inaugural ceremony. The new saloon has been christened the Gretna Tavern. The chief purpose in setting up these "Model Public-houses" is to abolish alcoholism and yet not deprive the working man of his beer. Thus, beer in moderation is on sale at the Gretna, but no spirituous liquors are obtainable there.

Never were top coats so attractive as advance models reveal those of the coming autumn.

WAR SONGS OF TO-DAY

Unreality of War Makes For Less Whistling

A London paper asks: Why is it that the war songs of to-day are not whistled by office boys, butcher boys, and the juvenile populations of our great cities with the zest which attended the musical compositions of the South African War? A "Daily News" representative discovered that there were at least two factors which had brought about a by no means unwelcome situation. The first is the psychological change that has been wrought in a public to whom war has now become a thing of grim reality; the second is the absence in war songs of to-day of those features that call the shrill efforts of the street boy.

The boy who whistled the "Absent minded Beggar" during breakfast, dinner, and tea has now switched on to "Keep the Home Fires Burning," an air which the "boss" as well as the office boy finds himself humming at the smallest provocation. But it seems a different type to the "Absent Minded Beggar." There is no doubt that "Here We Are, Here We Are, Here We Are Again!" has acted as a mark of stimulus to recruiting when rendered by our bands with sufficient iteration.

"But among the war compositions of to-day," said a representative of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter, "there are none of those soul-praising songs songs that marked the progress of the South African War." Such compositions as "All the Boys in Khaki Get the Nice Girls," "Till the Boys Come Home," "Here We Are Again!" and "Private Cassidy" are making their way into our midst. Yet it is not likely that any war song will enjoy the tremendous vogue that fell to the share of "Good-bye, Dolly Grey" nearly sixteen years ago.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

Little Humour About This.

The minister was new to the kirk, and anxious to do his duty by it. Told that his predecessor always put a shilling in the collection plate, to give the congregation a good example, he, on his first Sunday, placed a half-crown in the offertory. Unfortunately, not only did the collection produce a smaller amount than usual, but also some nimble-fingered worshipper managed to annex the new minister's half-crown. In dire distress the minister went to one of his elders.

"An' what could you expect?" exclaimed the latter. "Ye've no knowledge of the world. Ye should have glued the money to the plate as the auld meenister did!"

Salt as a Poison.

A writer on dietetics has the following to say about salt:

"First, we get all that is necessary in our natural foods, just as we do of iron, soda, and potash.

"Second, that in large and oft-repeated doses, it affects the brain, as shown by impaired memory, dizziness, and hullucinations.

"Third, that in very large quantities it will kill man, bird, beast, reptile, and insect, as well as vegetation.

"Fourth, that its use is a habit, pure and simple, and a much more general one than the use of coffee, tobacco or alcohol."

The crux of the argument of the author is, of course, that we use salt in our food as a condiment and purely from habit and that there is enough salt in our foods naturally to supply the needs of the body.

DYSPEPSIA

MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE

BUT B. B. B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure.

You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows.

That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B.B.B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FAMILY DOCTOR'S GOOD ADVICE

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Because They Did Her Good

Rocmes, P. Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with "Fruit-a-tives".

I consider that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches—"try Fruit-a-tives" and you will get well". CORINE GAUDREAU.

WOMEN IN ALL LINES

Hot Cartridge Making Proves Very Profitable in England

"Bus" and "tram conductresses" are so common in England nowadays they attract no attention. Post women deliver the mails, gas and electric companies employ women to read the meters, women drive delivery vans, sell papers, run elevators, shine shoes, cut one's hair, take one's ticket, and act as butlers. In the country they have taken up farming, poultry raising and truck gardening. In fact, there seems no field hitherto given exclusively to men except soldiering, in which women are not found working cheerfully and efficiently.

With the opening of the munition factories thousands of girls left domestic service and took their places as munition workers. In one small factory alone 2,500 girls are working in day and night shifts, earning approximately a dollar a day, more than twice the amount paid the average domestic servant. This factory is being enlarged and will have 6,000 girls on its pay roll. The work is easy. Every cartridge before it is sent to the front must be weighed, gauged, inspected for flaws, placed five in a clip ready for the gun, done up in belts, fifty rounds to a belt, sealed in air tight tin boxes which are in turn enclosed in wooden boxes, labelled, directed and shipped to France. The girls very rapidly become very expert in this work. They say they prefer it to the drudgery of housework. The work rooms are large, well lighted and ventilated and every convenience is provided for the girls' comfort.

Hundreds of small boys are also earning good wages in munition work. One of them, a lad of fourteen years, is so expert in clipping up the cartridges he earns $12.50 a week. His father also does munition work and resents his fourteen-year-old son making more money than he does. The boy is merely a machine. He goes through the necessary motions at terrific speed methodically, unconsciously from eight o'clock in the morning till eight at night with an hour off for lunch and 10 minutes for tea. In this particular factory there has been but two accident. This was caused by a girl who wondered what would happen if she struck a cartridge cap with a steel mould. The result was a bullet through her hand.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S THREE GORE SKIRT.

By Anabel Worthington.

This model is especially to be favored because it may be made with or without the applied yoke. The yoke is a noteworthy fall feature in separate skirts, and, as it shows unmistakable style when employed, you will no doubt like it.

The garment pictured is cut in three sizes and has plenty of fullness brought in with two forward and two backward turning plaits introduced at each side. The front closing is indicated by the decoration with fancy buttons from belt line to lower edge, which measures in size 24 3/8 yards. The buttons alone are high style note, and with the yoke effect and stylish flare this model is indeed most interesting.

Serge, worsted, mohair, taffeta and voile, also wool poplin, are among the favored fabrics for developing a skirt for dressy wear, not really formal. You can be certain of excellent results by following the pattern guide.

The skirt pattern, No. 7,993, is cut in sizes 24 to 30. To make in belt size 24 will require 4 1/4 yards of 36 inch goods if with "up and down," or 4 1/2 yards without "up and down."

To obtain the pattern send 10 cents to the office of this publication.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age if a child.

Admiral Beatty Commander of Grand Fleet

ALLIES PROGRESS IN MONASTIR FIGHTING

The Allies Are Gaining Both North and West of Monastir

Serbs Brilliantly Carry a Height North-west of Grunitza Holding It Against Counter Attacks---French Pursue the Teutonic Forces and Have Captured Another Height of Hill No. 1050--Sir John Jellicoe Appointed First Sea Lord of the Admiralty With Admiral Beatty as Commander of the Grand Fleet.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

PARIS, November 29.—Continued progress of the Allied forces north and west of Monastir was reported in to-day's official statement.

East of the Cerna the Serbians brilliantly carried and retained a height northwest of Grunitza, despite vollent counter attacks by the enemy.

The enemy suffered big losses in these actions. Northeast of Monastir was reported to-day French Zouaves are pursuing the Teutonic forces and carried the height east of Hill 1050.

Northwest of the city a violent battle is in progress, the French advancing toward Hill 1248, which is strongly fortified. The Italian forces are also progressing in the mountains around Ceresenastena.

Admiral Beatty at Head of Grand Fleet

Examiner Special:

LONDON, November 29.—In the Commons to-day First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour announced the selection of Sir John Jellicoe as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, and Admiral Beatty as Commander of the Grand Fleet.

Sir Henry Jackson, the retiring First Sea Lord of the Admiralty becomes President of the Naval College at Greenwich. Falfour announced that these changes will be followed by other important ones in the higher commands of the fleet.

Germany May Admit Guilt in Marine Case

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

WASHINGTON, November 29.—Sinister indications of German guilt in the Marina torpedoing, coupled with the apparently innocent case of the sinking of the American steamer Chemung, served to-day to again accentuate official uneasiness over German-American relations.

Germany was believed here to-day to be paving the way to admit guilt in torpedoing of the steamer Marina, with the loss of six American lives. Further, authorities claimed to see a hint that she intends to do as heretofore, seek settlement of the case through confession, reparation, and offer of indemnity. But, if the Administration follows its words of the past week, this will be insufficient.

Germany's reported willingness "to accept consequences" puzzled officials, though on the whole they felt the Teutons expected the case to be ended as others were—satisfactorily, without a diplomatic break.

Crown Council Will Not Oppose Government

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

ATHENS, November 29.—With King Constantine presiding, the Crown Council has determined that it cannot oppose the Greek Government in its decision to refuse the demands of the Allies for disarmament. It was said to-day that the Council's resolution had been forwarded to the Allies through Vice-Admiral Fournet, who made the original demands.

Shelling One Feature on British Front

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

LONDON, November 29.—General Sir Douglas Haig reported to-day intermittent enemy shelling around Gueudecourt and southward of Arras, with trench mortar activity around Maukuissart and Neuve Chapelle.

Russian Success in the Carpathians

Examiner Special:

PETROGRAD, November 29.—The ridges and heights eastward and southwards of Kirlibaba were captured by Russian troops, to-day's official statement asserted.

Kirlibaba is in southeastern Bukowina in the Carpathians.

Canadian Aviators Are In Roumania

SPECIAL TO THE EXAMINER:

OTTAWA, November 29.—When the history of the present war is written, one of the most notable features chronicled will be that of the aviators who flew, last week, from Salonika to Bucharest, the Roumanian capital, which is now threatened by the Austro-German forces. They were detailed to reinforce the Roumanian aviators, and, in view of the Teutonic advances, the only possible route they could take was by air. Recent despatches stated that the daring aviators had completed the long journey, and that they had all arrived safely to do valuable work for Roumania's heavily pressed force.

It is learned that there were several Canadians in the party, which passed over the Teutonic armies and reported in Bucharest. They are members of the Royal Naval Aerial Service, who left London about six weeks ago. Several Ottawa and Toronto boys, all of whom were prominent in athletics, were among the party. They have been given one of the most important assignments in which Canadian "birdmen" have figured so far, as there are many Germans aviators in Roumania.

Advance Continues is Berlin's Claim

BERLIN, November 29.—"General Von Falkenhayn's army advances victoriously on the whole of the Wallachian front," declared to-day's official statement which added that the Roumanian army was fleeing in disorder.

Women Should Stay In Canada

OTTAWA, Nov. 28. — The Government again calls attention to the undesirability of Canadian women going to England at the present time, except in case of necessity. It is pointed out that every additional person in England now who is not doing some real national service becomes a drain upon the food supply there. The warning is again repeated that transportation limitations may make it very difficult for these women to return to Canada if they wait until the movement of troops begins.

CHIEF THOMPSON GATHERED $73.55 TEMPERANCE FINES

One Contribution Was From A Lindsay Man Who Was Found Drunk, The Other Was a Brewery Agent.

TEST CASE ADJOURNED

Chief Thompson counted $73.55 in fines this morning realised through convictions under the Ontario Temperance Act.

Thos. Savigny of Lindsay was arrested last night for being drunk in a public place. He was on his way to Ottawa, but had received a few drinks from "Mike McCarthy" as he related it, on the Lindsay train. He was fined $10 and $3.75 costs, but the police will scarcely go a-hunting for "Mike McCarthy".

The test case against the local Brewing Company was adjourned until December 4th on account of a misunderstanding between counsel. But a local agent was fined $50 and $9.80 costs for taking an order for the Brewery. The order had been taken, filled and delivered and Chief Thompson decided to apply the new Act to this traffic as a test of its application.

ADJOURNED HILL TRIAL FOR WEEK

The trial of Davis Hill on four charges of cattle stealing was adjourned yesterday afternoon for a week on account of the absence of Mr. Thos. Scott of St. Catharines, whose evidence, Crown Attorney Hatton, regarded as an important if not necessary link in the chain of testimony he had wound about the prisoner. Scott is a hide dealer, who is said to have handled some of the hides of Dummer cattle Hill is charged with having stolen. He was present at the preliminary hearing and added particular evidence of identification William Hill's trial has been set down for December 5th, and Judge Huyoke suggested that the last of the evidence against Davis Hill be put in on that day.

FUNERAL OF MRS. JOHN McDONALD

The funeral of the late Mrs. John McDonald took place Monday morning at 9 o'clock from her home, 569 Gilmour street. The High mass was sung by Rev. John O'Brien and Rev. Father Phelan, assisted at the grave. The pall bearers were her five sons, John, George, Robert, Michael, Stephen and her son-in-law, Will Miller.

In religion Mrs. McDonald was a Roman Catholic and a member of St. Peter's Cathedral.

Five sons and three daughters are left to mourn her loss. The sons are John, George and Robert of Rochester, Michael of Toronto, and Stephen of Regina, and her daughters, Mrs. Moreland of Seattle, Mrs. Miller of North Bay, and Frankie at home.

Although Mrs. McDonald lived to an advanced age she will be greatly missed by her friends.

Lieut.-Col. Fessenden Has Been Honoured By The King of Italy

Peterboro' Officer Has Been Appointed Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy—Monster Recruiting Meeting Will Be Held in the Armouries on Sunday Night—News of the Peterboro' Boys Overseas—To-day's Orders and General Military News.

Word has been received that the King of Italy has been pleased to appoint Lieut.-Col. J. H. Fessenden, of Peterborough, and son of Mr. Cortez Fessenden, of the Collegiate Staff, Commander of the Order of the Crown of Italy. Colonel Fessenden was a member of the British Adriatic Mission last year, and his many friends in Peterborough will be glad to hear of the honour he has received. Since graduating from the Royal Military College in Kingston, Colonel Fessenden has been in the Imperial Army, on duty in India and elsewhere. He was a captain at the beginning of the present war, and went to France as a member of the first British expeditionary force, going through the retreat from Mons and the battle of the Marne. His brother, Lieut. Vivien Fessenden of the 48th Highlanders, is a prisoner in Germany.

Writing from hospital in Glasgow, Scotland, where he has been for some time, Sergt. F. B. Denison, the well-known Peterborough hockey player, says he expects shortly to be moved to a convalescent hospital. "I got a bad wallop in the jaw," is the way "Dennie" describes his injury. He was also wounded in the arm and has had three operations, but is now recovering rapidly.

LOSES HIS ARM.

Mrs. McCallum, Smith Street, has received the following letter in regard to her son, Gunner Joseph Teabeau, recently reported wounded:

No. 26 General Hospital.

November 10, 1916.

Dear Mrs. McCallum—Your son, Joseph Teabeau, was admitted into this hospital about a fortnight ago, with a very severe wound in his left arm. Unfortunately it did not go on satisfactorily, although every chance was given and it had to be taken off above the elbow, last week. Since then he has been much better and is making good progress, and I hope will shortly be sent to England, where, when it heals, he will be fitted with an artificial arm. I know you will be pleased to hear he is such a good boy. I shall be sorry to part with him when he leaves for England. I have told him I am writing to you and he sends his love, and says that he is doing well.

Sincerely Yours.

M. G. Gascombe,
Sister in Charge.

Mrs. F. Thomas, whose husband, Sergt. Fred Thomas of the 21st Battalion was killed in action in August last, has received a message from H. Honourable David Lloyd George, extending to her the sincere sympathy of their Majesties the King and Queen.

Pte. Charlie Stenner, the only Peterborough County man in the original Princess Pats, who was wounded some time ago, has recovered from his injuries and has been declared by the Medical Board fit for active service again. He is now going back to the front for the third time.

TO-DAY'S ORDERS.

Following are the daily orders by Lieut.-Col. C. H. Ackerman, Commanding the 247th Battalion, C.E.F., for Wednesday, Nov. 29th, 1916.

(1) Parade—

All officers, N. C. O's. and men except those specially employed, will parade in the drill hall at 9 a. m. and 2 p.m.

(2) Duties—

Orderly Officer for Wednesday, Lieut. A. H. Cameron. Next for duty Lieut. F. J. Hayes.

(3) Promotion—

No. 1063007, Pte. A. A. Rowe to be Lance Corporal, with effect from Nov. 28. 1916.

(4) Promotion—

No. 1063049, Pte. J. McD. Shook to be Sergeant with effect from Nov. 27. 1916.

(signed) R. R. Brooks,
Lieut. and Acting Adjt.
247th Battalion, C. E. F.

Mrs. Fred Thomas is in receipt of the following letter:

West Sandling, Oct. 29th 1916

Mrs. Fred Thomas,

Peterborough, Ont.

Canada.

Dear Madame,—Received through Major Carruthers, Quartermaster 39th Batt., C.E.F., one pair of socks and one package of Spearmint gum which you sent to the Peterborough boys through the Soldiers Wives and Mothers' Club.

You cannot realize how we appreciate such presents from home and especially from the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club who have already sacrificed so much by leaving their loved ones to go to help their motherland.

Hoping you receive this little note to say that your present has been received I remain,

Yours truly,

Lieut. Clarke of Picton, an officer of the famous 2nd Battalion, who has been twice wounded, once at Ypres and the second time on the Somme front, was a visitor at the armouries yesterday. Lieut. Clarke enlisted in the ranks and won his sergeant's stripes, and afterwards his commission on the field. He was a chum of the late Lieut. Arthur Ackerman, both as a non-com and as an officer. Lieut. Clarke is now attached to the 254th Battalion at Belleville.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th, left to-day to inspect the North Hastings district in regard to the recruiting possibilities in that section. He will address meetings at Bancroft and other points and will be absent until the end of the week.

Arrangements are being made for a monster recruiting meeting in the armouries on Sunday night. Lt.-Col. Ackerman is addressing letters to every eligible man in the city asking him to be present, and promises that no individual will be singled out or annoyed in any way. He has heard that the young men of Peterborough are afraid to go to a recruiting meeting but does not believe that statement. He is confident that they have manhood enough to come and hear the subject logically discussed. It is hoped to have either Hon. Arthur Meighen or Hon. Geo. P. Graham as the principal speaker for the evening, while Capt. E. O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion will also speak.

It has been said that clothes make the man, now that may be true—it may not—but there is no doubt that a man can be known by the clothes he wears. Fashion designers of male attire have been accused of effeminacy of late, but there is one design of man's clothing that can never be categorized as effeminate notwithstanding the fact that many women in Great Britain and Europe have worn

Manufacturers Are Asked To Assist

Lt.-Col. Ackerman Urges Closer Co-operation Between Military Officers and the Mercantile and Manufacturing Concerns of Peterborough.

OUTLINES HIS PLANS

Closer co-operation between the military officers in Peterborough and the city's manufacturing and business interests, with a view to getting the men of military age and fitness into the Canadian Expeditionary Force and at the same time, to preserve the industrial efficiency of the various plants, was the key-note of the address given by Lt.-Col. Ackerman of the 247th Battalion, at a meeting of manufacturers and business men in the Patriotic Fund office, last night. Lt.-Col. Ackerman outlined his plans clearly to the meeting, and was assured of the hearty co-operation of those present, while the manufacturers and business men who were not in attendance will be approached personally, and the details laid before them.

In commencing his address the Commanding Officer of the 247th said that there was no need of him going into the causes of the war or of the necessity for men. His hearers were thoroughly familiar with these things. He first called their attention to a matter that had a direct bearing on recruiting, the problem of the returned soldier. He asked the hearty support of those present in doing their share in seeing that the men who got home from overseas were placed properly. He told of the organization of the Peterborough Returned Soldiers' Club, and pointed out that this body would work in co-operation with Mr. Dobbin and the Soldiers' Aid Commission.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman informed the meeting that he proposed to keep a list of all the men who applied for enlistment and who while rejected as medically unfit for military service, were perfectly able to do their share in the industrial life of the city. These men would be available for the manufacturers to inform him whenever, as often happened, a number of men were being laid off. These men might be induced to see that there was a place for them in the Peterborough battalion. He also suggested that in each manufacturing concern the employer might detail some person in his employ to furnish the 247th Battalion with a list of the men in the plant of military age who could be spared, or at least replaced by men medically unfit, returned soldiers, or by women. Female labour was already being employed with apparently good results, in Toronto, Hamilton, and other cities Lt.-Col. Ackerman pointed out that it would be invaluable information if they were furnished with a list of the different jobs in Peterborough factories and stores that could be carried on by women. He referred to visiting a local dry goods store the other day where he had been waited on by a sturdy young man of apparently 180 pounds. Other young men were there selling ribbon and gloves and he thought that men in these occupations could quite readily be replaced by women.

The speaker also asked the manufacturers for the privilege of visiting the different concerns and addressing the employees on the matter of recruiting. This had been carried out to some extent and with good results by the 21st Battalion.

TEAMS HOLD A SUPPER CONFERENCE LAST EVENING

Seventy-Five Members Were Present---Ninety-Five New Members Have Been Enrolled —Helping the Boys in the Trenches.

FINAL REPORTS

Seventy-five members of the membership contest teams were present at the supper conference held Tuesday evening. The total result of the effort up to November 28th is 95 members enrolled. It is expected that when the teams meet at 9 o'clock Thursday evening, Nov. 30th, to hand in the final reports that each team will have many names to add to those previously reported. Every individual worker should make a grand-stand finish Thursday, for it is the tenth day of the effort and is scheduled to close the team work. Man men who need the Y.M.C.A. and who would like to join are still holding back, waiting to be invited to become a member. These men should walk right in at the Association office and join at once, in order to boost the 'Y' before the close of the contest. The activities of the Association were never more inviting and helpful than at present and are adapted to men and boys of all ages.

A Good Work.

We are pleased to welcome the representatives of the Y.M.C.A. National Council of the Military Department. Four of these men, who are themselves in the active work for our soldiers have been in our city during the past few days presenting the overseas work in a manner to stir the human heart to its deepest parts. Dozens of men and women in personal conversation and by letter and telephone have communicated to the local Y.M.C.A. office their surprise and admiration for the grand work being done by the 'Y' as reported by the National representatives. Peterborough must show its appreciation of the Y.M.C.A. overseas work by giving the support expected from our city. Let us do our bit for our own boys who must be served by the Association right up to the front trenches.

STRONG ATTRACTIONS AT THE ROYAL

To-night and to-morrow afternoon and evening, the Royal will show the sensational new pictures of the 15th episode of the million dollar serial, "The Yellow Menace." The other episodes of this powerful serial have proved to be great attractions, and this new episode will be equally as great a drawing card. In addition, there will be other new dramas and comedies. Everyone should see this splendid bill of plays—the best show on earth for the small admission of 10c to all.

WASTED WORK.

Germany is sending to the United States thousands of words daily by wireless in the interests of a peace propaganda. Stirred by these appeals or the itch of dabbling in big business without any warrant but their own restless impulse of intermeddling, some busy bodies have organized a committee of one hundred in New York to promote and organize a stop-the-war campaign, designed to "crystalize sentiment so that any peace movement that may be made by President Wilson will receive the united support of the nation." This is a very nice thing, but it is also nice nonsense, from a practical point of view. The nations who are waging war to a victorious finish are of one mind as to its duration—it must go on till the principles it is fought for are established, till the objects aimed at are reached; till, as Premier Asquith puts it, "the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed on an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Germany is wholly and finally destroyed." Peace with anything short of these conditions is impossible in spite of the activities of a hundred committees of one hundred. Besides, President Wilson is estopped from taking action by his failure to take action. He has almost since the beginning of the war complacently permitted, without effective protest, the most outrageous inhumanity practiced by the nation that now wants peace, without repentance or reparation. President Wilson, as the head of the United States, is constructively waging a war of inhumanity, by permitting Germany to outrage not only the laws of civilized warfare, but to outrage the rights of his own citizenship. For the President of the United States to pose as a premature peace-maker in this great quarrel, would, in the circumstances, be an act of superlative impudence.

Y.M.C.A. WAR WORK FUND.

The significance and importance of the three sides of the triangular escutcheon of the Y.M.C.A., its aims and activities—care for the three cardinal side of young men—the moral, the mental and the physical, have never been so deeply impressed upon the minds and hearts of Peterboroughians and Canadians as in the matter and manner of their application to Canadian soldiers in France. This triangle, is regarded and designated as the "Mystic Sign," by the soldiers of both armies, though there is little mystical about it, it is supremely practical.

While the work of the Y.M.C.A. among Canadian soldiers was at first regarded askance by the authorities, it soon won its way, conquered a place in the commissariat of the Canadian army, and indifference has given place to hearty recognition and encouragement. It may be thought that giving a soldier a cup of chocolate, or providing him with stationery, or recognizing him as a fellow man earning the services and gratitude of his fellow Canadians, may not be elements in winning battles; that is what they are. The little things of this life, the daily and hourly courtesies, and kindnesses of human intercourse are what make for the greatest happiness. The highest quality of a soldier; what makes him the best fighter, is his morale, his spirit; and if this is kept up, in whatever way, even such as employed by the Y.M.C.A., it heals and nerves his arm and helps develop a fighting spirit that makes Canadians, counted as the best soldiers in the ranks of the allied armies, soldiers with the three-sided equipment of heart, hand and aim.

We can't estimate or reduce to advertising statement, the splendid results of Y.M.C.A. work among our soldiers. What we can do, and what is more to the point, is to furnish means to continue and make more effective the splendid work. It is to be remembered, it seems perhaps latent prejudice is to be conciliated, that we are not helping the Y. M. C. A. itself, but (through it) doing work for our soldiers, our sons, our relatives, our acquaintances, our fellow citizens. They are doing more for us than we can do what we may, do for them. They deserve our best practical remembrance, and in no other single way can we do more for them than in uniting to strengthen the Y.M.C.A. war fund, and help realize the $10,000 the city is asked to contribute in the interests of the comfort, cheer and heartening of our Canadian soldiers at the front.

GOVERNMENT CRITICISM.

The Examiner is very grateful to a writer, whose letter is printed on this page, for his kindness in teaching the Liberal press, and showing it its duty. His competency to deal with such a subject in relation to Canadian conditions is revealed by his own statement that he has been "a resident of Canada for many months." Once on a time a boy apprenticed to the printing trade, at the end of the first trying day, confided to a chum that he was "sorry he learned the trade."

A residence of a "few months in Canada" is hardly enough to find the pulse of the country and dogmatize upon the attitude and action of a Liberal press that has in some of its members, been for a century an upbuilding and moulding element in the life of the country in which they have developed almost as much knowledge of conditions as a resident of a few months.

The writer's violence of statement regarding the utterances of Liberal journals—"diabolical falsehoods, etc." —relieve his statements of much claim to consideration. They smack too much of the nature of the language of the most rabid and reckless of the government press to leave the reader in any doubt of where the writer of the letter has placed his allegiance.

While the statements of the writer of the letter, per se, need not be taken too seriously as a type or class of surface reasoners, they call for a little general attention.

In the first place, the people of Canada, the Liberal party, and the Liberal press, are set in the determination that Canada should do its duty in winning this war. Naturally the government is looked to implement this determination, and if the government fails short of its duty in this regard, it is a proper object of consideration, and its shortcomings a proper subject of criticism.

The Liberal press is not alone in the feeling that the government has fallen short of its trust in a great many ways; has not shown the initiation, the leadership and the practical guiding expected of it. The government is not quite satisfied with itself. From within its own ranks has come more fatal criticism than any party newspaper has given or could give. Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, one of the two or three live, alert and do-something members of the government, while yet a minister, declared in his correspondence with the Premier, that the cabinet was honeycombed with intrigue, and that his work had been subjected to embarassment, had been hampered by the machinations of his own cabinet colleagues.

It will not be denied that the government has been subjected to criticism from its own friends, with discontent and a measure of disgust, at the ineptitude of the government. How strong a hold this feeling has upon the rank and file of the government party can, of course, only be conjectured in a general way. But in Tory Toronto, Hon Mr Kemp, the new Minister of Militia, who returns for re-election, though he was elected in 1911 by a majority of over four thousand, felt it necessary to remind his party followers that with "unity" of support he would be elected. Mr. Kemp had a strong feeling that the course of the government had alienated the cordiality of even his hide-bound supporters, He had, perhaps, good cause. When the government decided to build a three million dollar arsenal at Lindsay, they gave the contract to a United States firm. The chief engineer, the architect, the chief carpenter, the concrete foreman, the "boss" plumber, all are Americans. Canadians were not given a chance to even compete for a work quite within the competence of Canadian architects and contractors. This is a sample of government loyalty to the interests of Canadians, who are sweating blood and pouring out treasure to win this war; and who will dare say that, especially in a time like this, for an action like that, among others of similar import, the government should escape criticism?

If government supporters criticise the government, when the government does not measure up to the standard, why should not the party in opposition, whose duty is to criticise, to hold a government to its responsibility, refrain from seeking the best interests of the country by seeking to keep the government up to the mark?

The conditions in the old country are different. There they have a coalition government, and even it is doubly subject to party criticism, because it represents both parties. Here we have no coalition, not even government abstention from making the conduct of the war subservient to consideration of party interests

GOVERNMENT THOUGHT FOR THE FINE SENSIBILITIES OF KITCHENER PRO-GERMANS

They Can't Stand Soldiers in Training But Wounded Convalescents Are a Joy to Their Hearts

It is rumored that a movement is on foot in Kitchener, Ont., to change the name of the city, and call it "Berlin" in honour of the capital of Prussia, with which country Canada is at war. It is said that plans are being made to elect in January a City Council that will favor the change and endeavour to bring it about.

This change, if it could be made, would please enemy aliens here among us and enemy sympathizers everywhere. The news of it, daily reported to Ambassador Bernstorff, foreman of the public and secret service in Germany in North America, would greatly please him, and give him the text for a jubilant submarine despatch to his master.

Those who have set out to do this thing will scarcely succeed in getting away with it. They may, possibly, succeed in changing the name of Kitchener, Ont., because the people of a city may reasonably desire to change its name, but it is going rather far to except that Canada will permit one of her cities to put off the British name, Kitchener, and in the midst of this war put on the Prussian name, Berlin. No Provincial or Federal Government would permit it, because of the way the thing would be blazoned abroad to the comfort of Canada's enemies. Those who agitate for this change of name presume too far on public patience, and no doubt the Government will call for and examine a secret service report on those engaged in so questionable an activity as this at such a time as this.

A despatch from Kitchener yesterday stated that at the general session of the peace on December 12th there will be 204 applications for neutralizations in that city, of which 197 will be enemy aliens applying for citizenship and the right to vote. And if granted the right to vote, the first exercise of it, not by all perhaps, but presumably by most of them, will be to vote in presumably by most of them, will be to vote in the municipal elections in January for those who want to abolish the British name of Kitchener, and restore to the city the Prussian name of Berlin.

It is only in comic opera and in Ontario politics that such a situation as this could occur. Here's two hundred enemy aliens, most of them probably swearing fealty to us in order to put one over on us, and renouncing the Kaiser and all his works in order to pull off a bit of work for him in the municipal elections.

Also to carry out the comicality of it all in a consistent way, the City of Kitchener has no soldiers in it although the Dominion Government has built fine armouries there at large public cost. As the troops make trouble there with their parades and their singing, and their annoying attempts at recruiting, the amiable Government removes the troops and leaves the armouries idle. But get this: The amiable Government proposes to open a military hospital there instead. Thus, if the population does not like to see husky soldiers parading, recruiting, and training in the streets before going to war against the Huns, they are to be relieved of that, and regaled instead with the sight of wounded men who have been away and come home broken. Isn't amiability being carried to an extreme in thus providing agreeable entertainment to those among us who are alien to us in all their sympathies during this war? Is Kitchener a suitable place, is the atmosphere there adapted to the needs of wounded soldiers back home seeking sympathy, approval and restoration to health?—Toronto Star.

THE MAN WHO QUITS.

The man who quits has a brain and hand
As good as the next; but he lacks the sand
That would make him stick, with a courage stout,
To whatever he tackles, and fight it out.

He starts with a rush, and a solemn vow,
That he'll soon be showing the others how;
Then something new strikes his roving eyes,
And his task is left for the bye and bye.

It's up to each man what becomes of him,
He must find in himself the grit and vim
That bring success; he can get the skill,
If he brings to the task a steadfast will.

No man is beaten till he gives in Hard luck can't stand for a cheerful grin;
The man who fails needs a better excuse
Than the quitter's whining "What's the use?"

For the man who quits lets his chances slip,
Just because he's too lazy to keep his grip.
The man who sticks goes ahead with a shout,
While the man who quits joins the "down and out."

THE OSTRICH POLICY.

There are now ten submarine cases under discussion between the United States and Germany and more in prospect. The best the administration can do to protect American rights is not to let the people know they have been violated." It has been decided that no more news about submarines will be furnished from sources under Washington control—Buffalo Express.

IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

Our Georgian ancestors had more drastic methods of dealing with the problem of dear food than their degenerate descendants. In those brave days the Lord Mayor of London possessed, or usurped, wide powers of "municipal control," which he exercised on the slightest provocation. For instance, in 1813 "several hundred summonses" were issued against city bakers for selling flour at exorbitant prices and in September of that year "many heavy fines were inflicted." Moreover, the Lord Mayor "intimated his resolve to keep watch on the matter until the price of flour was reduced to an equitable level."—London Chronicle.

Government Criticism Strongly Deprecated

To the Editor of The Examiner

Dear Sir,—Not being a resident of Canada many months and being a reader of your paper, as well as the Evening Review, I have been seriously studying the political arguments set forth therein, that I might chose for myself which party I shall place my allegiance with.

I have always been a Liberal in the Old Country, but cannot follow the Liberals of this country, not if they are constituted with and possess the principles set forth in the Liberal press. The statements of many of them are gross insults to any Britain-born subject. Some articles written editorially in the Toronto Globe of conditions and alleged mismanagement of Canadian troops in England are diabolical falsehoods, as I know, from being on the ground. Furthermore every Liberal paper that falls into my hands is full of the most vehement criticism of the Government and the method of handling the Canadian troops. Yet, every paper I get from home, regardless of political leaning, bears testimony to the contrary, both editorially and from interviews with men who are controlling the destiny of Great Britain. Now I think if the party of Liberalism would stop this harping criticism, and do something to assist in this terrible war, it would make a great many more friends, besides assisting in a righteous cause. Try this, and we who have somsat the front will feel more kindly towards your party.

I do not wonder at my sons advising me to get in behind the present Premier when I reached Canada. They had more confidence in him. Now, let us all boost England's cause.

Yours truly,
A. G. Hanson.

HAT UNDER BROTHER'S BODY

Point Used in Effort to Convict Teiper of Murder.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—District Attorney Moore continued to develop from witnesses the prosecution's story of the sequence of events immediately following the murder of Mrs. Agnes M. Teiper and her son, Frederick, and to establish thereby a circumstantial chain by which he expects to convict John Edward Teiper, another son, of the crime.

Dr. Theodore E. Fleming was the first physician to reach the scene of the murder, and it was established by his testimony that John Edward Teiper's hat was found under his brother's body, and that the accused had walked toward a field near the murder scene, in which the State will try to prove the revolver and the other weapon alleged to have been used by the murderer were found.

EGGS 8 CENTS IN GERMANY.

One a Week for Each Person—Meat 74 Cents a Pound.

GLEN RIDGE, N. J., Nov. 27.—A letter which is supposed to have arrived on the submarine Deutschland, addressed to Emil Reich, of New York, describes the high prices demanded for foodstuffs and the heavy taxes imposed in Germany. In the course of the letter the writer says:

"At present we can get along, but everything costs a lot of money. Meat we get once a week, and for six persons we get a pound and a quarter. The meat costs 3 marks (74 cents) per pound. Eggs we get one apiece per week, five eggs for a family of five. The eggs cost 30 to 35 pf. (8 cents) apiece, and you don't get them every week either. Potatoes, which are the only things we really can get, are very high, too, and you get very little. Potatoes now cost twice as much as before the war. We have to pay immense taxes at present. Money we can't get, and you can picture to yourself how we have to live and manage to get along. We hardly get along. We can't save anything at all, and what we earn is hardly enough to live on."

Feed the pullets not only for eggs but for growth. They ought to keep on growing for some time yet.

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, bravely battling for Canada and the Empire. As particulars of Army Reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country or been wounded in action are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

MODERN MOSES LEO THE EXODUS OUT OF ARMENIA

Twenty-five thousand unharmed civilians of Armenia are indebted to a Belfast man for their safe retreat from the danger zone by Lake Van through mountainous country for a distance of 150 miles to Igadjah.

The modern Moses who conducted this remarkable exodus is Mr. George F. Gracey, who has been working for many years in Armenia under the American Mission. At the time he was administering the Lord Mayor's Fund (which is now badly in need of help). He was the only Western European in the district and he managed the entire exodus single-handed, working under Russian authority.

Early in August Mr. Gracey learned that Mush had been retaken by the enemy. He heard, across the lake the guns of the Turkish advance, and was warned by the glare of burning buildings. The military authorities told him that the Armenians under his care should be withdrawn.

The only visible line of retreat lay through the Pass of Berki-kala, a lonely mountain outlet infested by Kurds and other marauders. No Russian soldiers guarded his gateway to safety, and Mr. Gracey began by hastily arming with rifles 250 volunteers. This force seized the pass, dealt with the Kurds, and secured the retreat of a hundred times their number, free from interruption.

For five days the march continued. The average distance covered was thirty miles a day, and the 25,000 refugees, with their 6,000 cattle, took two days to pass any given point. There were practically no mishaps. Many children got separated from their parents, but were "sorted out" at Igdiah.

Five babies are known to have been born on the way and all survived the experience.

Purple will be the favourite color for the smart New Yorker's between hat.

The Flavor Lasts---

In the making of Grape-Nuts there is added to the sweet, rich nutriment of whole wheat, the rare flavor of malted barley, a combination creating a most unusually delicious taste. The palate never tires of it.

People everywhere have found that is the most nutritious and delicious cereal food known. Every table should have its daily ration of Grape-Nuts.

Grape-Nuts

The HOME CIRCLE COLVAN

PATRONIZE HOME STORES.

Holiday time is nearly here and you will want to purchase many things for your friends and for the little folks. That is the true spirit of the holiday season. It is a glad joyous, festive season, a time when good will prevails all over the earth for Christian fellowship has fastened its festoons from every nook and corner of the sphere. Where Christianity goes the spirit of Yuletide is born. Begin to think of some deserving or needy person to whom your generosity should be spread.

The above will surely appeal to ninety-nine out of every hundred. Then why not resolve to make your purchases of the home merchants lest your presents savor of alienation? You will show your home merchant the greatest of courtesy and he can rest after hard labor with the assurance that his existence in the community has at last partially come into its own. He has purchased many beautiful things as well as useful articles he is going to offer you, and he demands the earnest inspection of all the shoppers. You owe the home stores a visit of inspection before sending your money out of town to some merchant prince, filling his coffers, when in turn he cares nothing further about you and never returns one cent of the investment to better your surroundings or home conditions.

Your home is your blessed resort and it can be made better by building up and helping its surroundings. Let us get this motley 1916 sentiment garnered down to home conditions. All will enjoy the holiday season more congenial, and all will save money by so doing.

A Happy Christmas to grown people and a Merry Christmas to the children. And let it be a Happy Christmas; for that one day put away worries and disagreeable feelings and enter into the real spirit of Christmas, which is to give happiness into some human life. It is not in the giving of present alone that is the true Christmas; it is in bestowing kind words, kind looks and smiles, where there is not always sunshine. Why do people so often think Christmas a burden and wish the holiday season past? Why should the sad and sorrowful look forward to it as a dreed anniversary? This is the worst form of selfishness. Christmas should be a day of self-forgetfulness and of thinking of some one else's life, and how it can be made brighter. There is a great deal of sadness and sorrow in all stations of life and a few cheery words, accompanied by a smile, give great encouragement and cost but little effort.

And the children. Does anyone ever notice the wistful faces peering into the fascinating shop windows at this season, and remember that probably this is their owners' only glimpse of Christmas? That in their whole miserable existence never a penny has been handled by them of their very own? Let the childless one and the sorrowful one, as well as those who daily take their walks abroad, think of this, and each one in his own way do his best to gladden some life, and by doing so feel by Christmas night that there is something after all worth doing and living for in this old world, and the New Year will be prepared for by ending the old one well.

Where in all humanity is there greater longing, dearer expectation, sweeter hope than in the heart of a child on Christmas morn. But in all the earth there is no look so sad, no sob so stabbing as are called forth by the empty stocking.

The best part of the holiday season, perhaps, is the opportunity it gives for home gatherings and the family reunions that in these busy days are all too few. Many a young man finds time to get back to the old hearthstone and sits down in the dear home circle, who, if the holidays were omitted, would be kept strictly at his tasks. All the schools are dismissed, boys and girls are at home, teachers likewise are off duty and with no cares pressing, in thousands of places parents and children have happy times together for which they may thank the festive season.

For two thousand years all of the nations, in every generation and every year of that generation, have been celebrating the birthday of one man. This man was not born in a palace, nor in a mansion, but in a manger, for His mother had gone up to Bethlehem of Judea, and the inn was too crowded to accommodate her. And And when the Babe was born, He was wrapped in swaddling clothes and laid in a manger. During his short life of 33 years. He did not sit on a throne nor in halls of state, nor did He associate with the rich and the aristocratic of His day. His birth was not announced to the king nor the rulers, but to some humble shepherds watching their flocks at night, around about whom there suddenly shone a blaze of light, causing them to fear, and angels were singing to them: "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace good will toward men." He has been called the Prince of Peace, and this message, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," has been the message of the Christmas time all down through the ages.

People who use tin cans for canning should be careful never to put vinegar in them.

The activity of local mosquitoes has caused a run on citronella at the corner drug stores.

A Message From Lloyd George

The Right Hon. David Lloyd George, speaking on "The Lesson of Sacrifice," said:---

"We have been living in a sheltered valley for generations. We have been too comfortable and too indulgent, many perhaps too selfish. But the stern hand of fate has scourged us to an elevation where we can see the everlasting things that matter for a Nation, the great peaks we had forgotten---of Honour, Duty, Patriotism, and clad in glittering white, the towering pinnacle of Sacrifice, pointing like a rugged finger to Heaven."

Compared to service in the trenches, Service in the Munitions Plant is the lesser sacrifice, but it is hardly less vital to the Empire.

HARRY LAUDER HAS BOUGHT A NEW ESTATE

His Becomes Territorial Neighbour of Duke of Argyll.

Mr. Harry Lauder, who has just purchased an estate of 14,000 acres 15 miles from his place at Dunoon, denies that he is preparing for old age and frailty.

"Why," said he, "I hope to roam in the gloaming over the world for a long time yet.

"Ballimore estate has cost a small war loan of money, but think of the beauty and surroundings. There's Loch Eck on the one hand and Loch Fyne, with its herrings, on the other, and then there is the Clyde and the memory of its smells at low water."

He added that his new purchase is one of those estates which a landlord buys and then goes bankrupt, and he fears he will require to work harder than ever to keep it up.

Harry Lauder will spend his leisure if he finds any, at Ballimore, and give up Dunoon.

His new acquisition comprises the estate of Glen Branter and the lands of Ballimore.

Glen Branter, which belonged to the late Mr. David MacBrayne, the Glasgow shipowner, is beautifully situated in the hill country on the east side of Loch Fyne.

The mansion house, which is about four miles from the pier of Strachur, stands on the left bank of the stream which runs into the River Cur near Bridgend. Water, hills, and pasture land are features of the estate. Mr. Lauder gets possession next month.

A Laird Since 1911.

Mr. Lauder first became a laird in 1911, when he left Athole Lodge at Tooting, where he had lived for eight years, to take possession of an estate which he had purchased at Dunoon, on the Clyde.

Returning to his Scottish home to spend the Christmas of that year (he was playing in pantomime at Manchester), he hired a rowing-boat to put him across the Clyde from Gourock to Dunoon. The weather was very mild, and in mid-channel the boat was swamped. Harry had a narrow escape from drowning, but won through in the end.

In 1912 Mr. Lauder gave his wife an undertaking that he would retire from the stage when he had saved £120,000. He is credibly reported to have much more than this, and it is possible that the purchase of the estate on Loch Fyne (where he will be a neighbour of the Duke Argyll) foreshadows the fulfilment of his promise.

His Early Days.

Born at Portobello in 1870, he first went to work as a half-timer in an Arbroath flax-spinning mill. Later he worked in a coalpit, before returning to Arbroath to make his first appearance on the music-hall stage.

It was in 1903 that he signed his first contract with the proprietors of the London Tivoli, after making a trial appearance as an "extra turn."

Those interested in Lauderiana may like to know that the songs he sang were "Tobermory" and "The Laird of Killiecrankie." For ten years he never left the Tivoli, where his reputation was made.

His Soldier Son.

Of all his successes, Harry is proudest of his son, who joined the Argill and Sutherland Highlanders soon after the outbreak of the war, was wounded at Festubert, and has been promoted to the rank of captain.

Harry describes his recreations as trying to hit a wee gutty ba', trying to catch salmon and trout, and trying to shoot, in all of which he will be able to indulge to his heart's content on the bonnie, bonnie bank of Loch Fyne.

The late Mr. David MacBrayne, whose estate he has bought was the owner of the famous Clyde excursion steamers, and of the boats which serve the Caledonian Canal and the western islands.

Ease Your Wife's Anxiety

"Indeed, I could not sleep last night," said a merchant to one of our insurance agents. "The insurance on my store expired yesterday, and that pesky fire bell reminded me of it. That store is my living, and I could never start another. If the fire had 'snuffed out' my business last night, instead of Smith's, I would be at my string's end."

"Get insured this morning?"
"Yes, sir; bright and early."
"Own the house you occupy?"
"No; wish I did."
"Anybody helping keep the family?"
"Why, no—why do you ask that?"
"Any income besides the store?"
"No, not a dollar—why?"
"Does your wife sleep well?"
"Why yes; but what on earth are you driving at, anyway?"

"I was just thinking how she could sleep, for if your life had been snuffed out instead of your neighbour Jones' yesterday, she would be at her 'string's end,' for I happen to know that you have no life insurance and your income is her living."

Most men sleep sounder when they know that in event of FIRE their property IS PROTECTED BY INSURANCE. Would not your WIFE AND FAMILY sleep sounder if they knew YOU HAD FULFILLED YOUR OBLIGATIONS and made provision for them in event of YOUR DEATH?

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 1st — RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

WHAT THE Y. M. C. A. IS DOING FOR THE CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Bare statistics cannot properly convey correct conception of this work; they will, however, help to show its scope—

There is a Y.M.C.A. encampment in every training camp in Canada.

There are 43 branches of Canadian Y.M.C.A. in France. Sixty-Three men who rank as honorary captains have been sent overseas; thirty of these are now in France.

Altogether over 500 persons under Y.M.C.A. direction are serving our boys in the Army.

Plans are underway to appoint six conducting officers who will help returning soldiers by vocational guidance, etc. They will make the east bound trip on transports, with troops.

One million sheets of letter paper with envelopes and writing facilities are provided free every month, in both England and France, and two millions have been similarly used in Canada since June.

On request of soldiers Overseas, snap shots of their families are sent to them.

Hundreds of thousands of new and used magazines are supplied in England and France each month.

Circulation libraries are kept in many of the branches.

Wherever possible a Y.M.C.A. officer accompanies troop trains to point of embarkation. These secretaries are well equipped with writing material, reading matter, small games, song sheets, etc.

Errands of varying importance are willingly attended to, and small purchases amounting at times to hundreds of dollars a day are executed for soldiers at the front by a special Y.M.C.A. secretary in England.

Vast quantities of athletic and games equipment are freely supplied in England and France.

Testaments and Prayer cards have been circulated by thousands, every branch is well supplied to meet the many requests from soldiers.

Entertainment in the rest camps in France, and the big camps in England always includes moving pictures, often the small portable moving picture outfits are used to entertain isolated units.

In France wherever the Y.M.C.A. is, grafonolas are to be found. At the present time there are 84 of these instruments in Canadian Branches in France.

The Canadian Y.M.C.A. in France also owns 18 Pianos. Every evening finds thousands of Canadian Soldiers in concerts, entertainments and lectures under Y.M.C.A. auspices.

Thousands of Canadian soldiers assemble every week to hear religious addresses and sing the old hymns. In France Y.M.C.A. Secretaries find great difficulty in closing the meeting, the men are so glad to get together in this way.

The city associations do their part for our soldiers. In a summary covering the Winter Seasons of 1915-16 the following items appear:

46 Associations report a total of over half a million baths.

1200 Gymnasium classes were attended by over 108,000 soldiers.

234 Entertainments and Socials attended by 42,964.

246 Religious Meetings and Bible Classes with attendance of 13,000 soldiers.

300 Educational classes with 5507 in attendance.

Besides these special activities, the Association's service and staff are always ready for the soldiers call. In some cases Y.M.C.A gymnasium is used for regular military training. There are many instances of physically unfit recruits receiving special treatment from Y.M.C.A. physical director and then accepted for active service.

There have been occasions when the Y.M.C.A. canteen near the front line was able to save many Canadian lives by giving away free the entire stock when rations were interrupted during a German drive.

The whole Y.M.C.A. programme is distinctly religious. In the home training camps, this is particularly true. In England while the religious is not overlooked greater use is made of other features to counteract certain outside activities. In France every opportunity is taken advantage of (for religious activities) and the value of the Y.M.C.A. in keeping men in touch with old ideals of living and reminding them of the old environment cannot be over estimated.

A great contribution is made to "the Spirit" of the army in France by supplying quantities of athletic material, the concerts in the rest camps, the service of the dugout canteens, etc.

This programme involves an immense outlay in huts, tents, etc. In France these vary in size from tiny dugouts to immense quarters where 2,000 men may be accommodated in a concert at one time, besides all the writing and refreshments facilities. See the cuts of some of the huts.

Y.M.C.A. officers in Montreal and Toronto give special attention to hospital work.

Twenty-five to thirty-five concerts are held in the Canadian area in England every week when best artists and speakers appear before thousands of Canadians

Major Birks, in charge of the Y.M.C.A. Military work Overseas, says, "The work is about as varied as the number of men."

THE DEAD WHO NEVER DIE

Maurice Maeterlinck Expresses His Comforting Philosophy of the Life Hereafter.

Maurice Maeterlinck, the Belgian poet-philosopher, has written an essay for Figrao of Paris, entitled "The Might of the Dead." In it he revives the idea contained in his play, the "Blue-Bird," that the dead live again when we think of them, and argues from the text "What he saved he lost." The following paragraphs are quoted from a translation of this essay:

"Whatever our religious faith may be, there is at least one place where our dead cannot die. That living dwelling of theirs is in ourselves, and for those who may have lost it becomes paradise or hell, as we are near or far from their thoughts, and their thoughts are always higher than ours. By lifting ourselves, then, we shall go to them. We must take the first steps, for they cannot come down, while we can always ascend for the dead, whatever they were in their lifetime, become better than the best of us. The least good by shedding their bodies have shed their body's vices, foibles and meannesses, and the spirit alone remains, which in every man is pure.

THERE ARE NO BAD SOULS.

"There are no bad dead, because there are no bad souls. And what was always true of all the dead is truer still to-day, when only the best are chosen for the grave. In the world which we call the kingdom of shadows, and which really is the ethereal kingdom of light, there are now as deep perturbations as those we feel on our earth. The young devil flock thither, and since the beginning of the world never were there as many, as strong and as ardent. If such men were really annihilated, had vanished for ever, were for ever to become useless and without voice, all that we have believed hitherto, all that we have tried to do, all our victories over evil days and evil instincts, would be delusion and lies. It is scarcely possible that this should be so, even regarding the external survival of the dead, but it is absolutely certain that it is not so regarding their survival within ourselves. Here nothing is lost and no one dies.

"Our memories are peopled by a multitude of heroes, stricken in the flower of youth, and far different from that procession of yore, pale and worn out, which counted almost solely the aged and sickly, who were already scarcely alive when they left this earth. To-day in all our houses, in town, in country, in palace and in cottage, a young man dead lives and rules in all the beauty of his strength. He fills the poorest, darkest dwelling with glory, such as it had never dreamed of.

WHAT HE SAVED HE LOST.

"It is terrible that we should have this experience, the most pitiless mankind has known, but now that the ordeal is nearly over we can think of the perhaps unexpected fruits which we shall reap. One will soon see the breach widening and destinies diverging between those nations which have acquired all these dead and all this glory, and those who have been deprived of them and it. And one will be astonished to find that those who have lost most are those which will have kept their wealth, and their men.

"There are losses which are priceless gain and there are gains in which which one's future is lost. There are dead whom the living cannot replace, and whose thought does things which no living bodies can do, and we are almost all now mandatories of someone greater, nobler, braver, wiser, and more alive than ourselves. He will be, with all his comrades, our judge.

"If it be true that the dead weigh the souls of living and that our fate depends upon their verdict, he will be our guide and our champion. For this is the first time since history revealed to us her catastrophes that man has felt above his head and in his heart such a multitude of such dead."

Man Under Arrest In Connection With Girls Being in Hut

Windsor, Nov. 29.—Ten minutes after George Dugan, 35 years old, had taken the oath to serve in the Royal Canadian Engineers, a detective arrested him on a charge of supplying liquor to three girls and for criminal assault.

The girls were found in a hut early last week, and they told a shocking story to the police. Dugan was arraigned before Magistrate Leggatt, and pleaded not guilty to both of the charges.

Dugan told the officers that his wife "tipped" the police off that he had enlisted.

Magistrate Leggatt adjourned for one week the case of Mrs. Jos. O'Connor, 26 Cataraqui street, who is charged on information of Probation Officer W. H. Hackney, with contributing to the delinquency of her two daughters, Eva and Beatrice, aged 13 and 14, respectively, who with another girl, Mabel Esseltine, aged 15, was found by police officers in a small shack on Lillian avenue on Thursday afternoon. No evidence was taken and the woman on the advice of her counsel, did not plead.

The three girls who had been held since Thursday afternoon as material witnesses, were released on Saturday morning by the police.

GENERATE ELECTRIC POWER FROM WASTE.

Melbourne (Australia) Turns Rubbish into Revenue of $3,000 a Year in Destructor.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Nov. 27—Just now, when economy and the elimination of waste is so much more widely preached than practiced, it is satisfactory that some of the waste products of Melbourne are being turned to good account. An instance is furnished by the turning of Prahran's rubbish into electric energy which, combined with other economies, makes the municipal destructor almost self-supporting, says the Argus.

The refuse is taken to the destructor by carts, and is used as fuel in specially constructed furnaces. This rubbish furnishes the motor power for boilers, and the steam from the boilers is used to drive an electric generator. The electric current thus generated passes through a meter into the mains of the Melbourne Electric Supply Company. The Company pays the Prahran authorities about $3,000 a year for the power thus obtained. This sum with the amount gained from other by-products in the destruction of refuse goes far to make the destructor self-supporting. For instance, the ashes are used to make concrete for guttering.

HOLD-UP IN TURKEY PRICES.

Boston Retailers May Try the New Method on Thanksgiving Fowl.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 29.— A million pounds of turkey, from Texas and the South-West, rumbled into Boston on two long freight trains yesterday, but very few of the precious birds were offered for sale by retailers today.

If necessary, retailers said to-day, they will conduct an embargo on turkeys and force down the prices at the eleventh hour. Considering the present demands of the shippers, dealers would have to set 45 and 46 cents a pound for turkey to-day. They figure that if they hold off the wholesalers and commission men will find themselves with more turkey on their hands than they know what to do with, and that it will be dumped on the market at almost any price.

FEAR PHTHISIS AFTER THE WAR

FRENCH PREPARE TO TREAT INFECTED PRISONERS FROM GERMANY.

French surgeons and scientists are putting forth every effort to be prepared to cope with a spread of tuberculosis throughout the nation after the war, according to Charles Butler an American architect, who has been in France for the last two years, and who has been designing several hospitals now used by the French military authorities.

Mr. Butler, who came here for a few months' vacation, is going to spend the time investigating conditions in leading institutions for treatment of tuberculosis with a view of giving information to the French Government when he returns.

"About 95 per cent. of the French prisoners now in Germany have tuberculosis", he said yesterday. "This is due to lack of proper housing, to poor feeding, and to the fact that the Germans are deliberately putting prisoners infected with the disease in with well men, thereby spreading the infection.

"The question of what is to be done with these men when they return to France is in the hands of the Minister of the Interior and the Minister of War. The sick men will not be allowed to leave the army, and therefore they will be under the jurisdiction of the War Department, and can be prevented from wandering at large and endangering the health of the whole community. The Minister of the Interior has charge of hospitals for the civilian cases".

Mr. Butler told of the great work of the American Ambulance Corps in France.

"There are 6,000 hospitals in France," he said, "with 600,000 beds. About 500,000 of these beds are occupied all of the time, leaving an even 100,000 for an emergency such as a great battle. At one of the recent attacks in the Somme region where a French regiment of 1,900 men captured a few trenches only 500 returned. Just think of it, 700 killed and wounded out of 1,900."

Mr. Butler said that peace seemed a long way off to the average French mind, but French victory was just as sure as the triumph of the North over the South after Gettysburg.

Mr. Harry Long Is Home From the West

Reports Things As Looking Up in Western Canada

Mr. Harry Long returned last night from Edmonton, where he has been passing some ten weeks looking after his interests in the far West, and renewing old acquaintances. He reports that business and general conditions are decidedly improving in Edmonton district, and the West, generally. Farmers, though they have suffered from conditions inimical to crop production, are actually realising better results than expected, higher prices pretty well compensating for lower yield and quality.

ARE YOU SATISFIED

To suffer day in and day out with lame back, rheumatism or kidney trouble with the prospect of these diseases becoming chronic, when you can secure a medicine at small cost that will cure you. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are so reliable and satisfactory in the treatment of these diseases, that if you are a sufferer you will be well advised if you secure a box of them at once and give them a trial. We know what the result will be. They are sold and recommended at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street, Peterborough.

REMOVE THIS NUISANCE AND SAVE TROUBLE

Why, in the name of civic decency and order, does the Chairman of the Streets and Bridge Committee allow the unsightly-looking old shanties and delapidated remains of the plant used on the outfall sewer, remain on Park street, near the De Laval Company's works. It has become an eyesore and a nuisance to everyone travelling on this section of the street and a danger-spot to those driving past it. Half the street is taken up with this ramshackle remnant of the sewer gang, and some day it will cost the city a lawsuit by a runaway and somebody being hurt.

SHOT IN COLD STORAGE.

Montreal Man Suicides in Plant of His Employers.

MONTREAL, Nov. 29.— Sought for by his family from his home without saying where he was going, Samuel B. Tucker, aged 43 years, general foreman for the Olive, Dorion and Stroud Cold Storage Company, was found dead with a bullet through his brain in one of the cold storage vaults of the firm for which he worked. His own revolver lay near the body.

Manufacturers Are Asked To Assist

In conclusion, Lt.-Col. Ackerman said that he was very optimistic about the prospects. Young men who have hitherto neglected their duty were beginning to understand that the time had come when they must enlist.

The manufacturers present expressed their willingness to assist in these plans.

Capt. E. O'Flynn of the 247th Battalion eloquently pointed out why men were needed, not only for reinforcements, but to give the men of the 1st Division, to which he had belonged a rest. "Some of those boys have been out there nearly two years," remarked Capt. O'Flynn. "They took us out on May 30th last, for a rest, and three days afterwards, on June 2nd, we were thrown into that terrible battle at Zillibeke, and had 4,500 casualties. Afterwards the 1st Division was out for a week and then hurled into the midst of the great battle on the Somme."

Capt. D. Warren of the Army Service Corps, who was at the front for many months for the 1st Division, stated that there was an urgent call for 900 teamsters and 1,000 motor car drivers as well as for a number of other Army Service Corps men. While he was here to see what Peterborough could do to help answer this call, he desired to co-operate heartily with Lt.-Col. Ackerman.

Mr. J. A. Aylmer, president of the Speakers' Patriotic League, who presided, urged those present to assist the 247th Battalion in every way, and advised them to be optimistic about the matter. There was no use going around saying "We'll never get this battalion filled." That was not the right spirit. He wanted to see everybody filled with optimism and anxiety to help in the great work of securing recruits.

ENGLAND IS IN NEED OF WOMEN FOR FARMING

SUBSTITUTES DEMANDED SO MEN CAN JOIN ARMIES—FRANCE SETS EXAMPLE.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Women are still urgently needed to take up agricultural work and thus replace men taken for the fighting line, says the Chronicle.

"It is as easy for a woman to milk a cow as to make a six inch shell," declared Mr. Walter Long, President of the Local Government Board, at a meeting of the Women's Legion presided over yesterday by the Marchioness of Londonderry.

He added that what could be done in munitions work could be done on the land. In Glasgow, for example, women were now doing work which experts had said they could not possibly do. Next year the need for women on the land would be even greater than it was now.

"There are no able-bodied men working on the land in France. The work is done by old men and children and women right up to the firing line.

"No man will be withdrawn from arable farming before January 1," announced Lord Crawford, Minister for Agriculture, "and no man engaged in the milk supply before March 31 unless a trained substitute is provided."

He hoped that the work of the Women's Legion in lending motor tractors and labor saving machinery to farmers would be greatly developed.

Canada's Own Boats To Bring Us Fruit

OTTAWA, Nov. 29.—A further development of the fruit trade between [illegible] and Australia, Porto and the West Indies is expected in connection with the establishment of a steamship service between Halifax and St. John and Pacific coast ports via the Panama Canal. The vessels will call at West Indies ports [illegible] and coming for shipment [illegible] Ports.

It is expected that this trade will contribute materially to the success of the service.

It is not unlikely that instead of calling for tenders the railway department will purchase a couple of vessels now in process of construction in a ship building yard on the Pacific coast. If this course is decided on the service will be established without much delay.

MOVING PICTURES DO NOT HURT EYES

SO SAYS GORDON L. BERRY, OF NATIONAL COMMITTEE FOR PREVENTION OF BLINDNESS.

The development of motion picture making in high art "screen" photography has removed many of the dangers to eyesight, in the opinion of opticians. In a review of the effects of the silent drama on the eyes of motion picture "fans" Gordon L. Berry, field secretary of the National Committee for the Prevention of Blindness, said yesterday that if motion pictures are properly produced there is not much danger from eye strain.

"If under good conditions of production, there are evidences of eye fatigue such as headaches, smarting or itching of the lids, sensitiveness to light, excessive flow of tears, or if circles of light seem to appear on the screen, one should lose no time in consulting an oculist," he said.

"The chief points involved are the effects of glare from a poor screen as the result of improper radiation from the screen; the general surrounding illumination of the auditorium the position from which the spectator views the pictures, the 'flicker' of the films and the effect of constant concentration."

All of these things can be regulated by the motion picture producer, he said.

"Every spectator should demand and every theatre owner should provide the best in screens, surrounding illumination, seating arrangement and projection," he said. "Never get nearer to the screen than twenty feet. The best seats are in the centre of the theatre."

Archie Moore Tells His Troubles To County Council Respecting Enforcement of Venicle Act

The County Council opened this morning's session with a sale of various lots throughout the County, the taxes on which are in arrears. The owners may redeem them in a year. The Township, Mr. T. E. Bradburn, and others were the buyers.

Warden Darling and Messrs. Anderson and Fitzgerald were appointed a deputation to attend the convention of the Ontario Municipal Association.

County Constable's Report.

County Constable A. Moore broke the news that pursuit of the Hills, of Dummer, had cost a considerable sum for vehicles to transport the posse that had conducted the chase. Automobiles had figured largely in the moving of the authorities, but Mr. Moore said he had not intended to charge for the use of his own car. He was advised to present receipts for his expenses to protect the county if it should be entitled to make a claim on the Government to cover some of the expenses.

That Auto Case.

Mr. Moore also mentioned to the Council the recent case in which he had been a complainant with Mr. Fred Cann the defendant. Briefly, Mr. Moore was driving north on the Chemong road and came upon Mr. Cann's waggon drawn up on the left side of the road. There was plenty of room on the right side, but the letter of the law demanded passage on the left side of the waggon. Magistrate Langley gave a decision in favour of Mr. Moore when he charged Mr. Cann with a breach of the Motor Vehicles Act.

Judge Huyoke reversed the judgment on Mr. F. D. Kerr's appeal, and Mr. Moore had a bill of costs of $9.05.

Reeve Fitzgerald—"Was it not worth $9.05 to know that you can pass on the right side in that case?"

Mr. Moore said he was a servant of the Council and he wanted to discuss the situation with them. In short, his strict interpretation of the law had been upset by the Judge's decision and the Constable was uncertain about future action.

County Clerk Elliott pointed out that he could not pay the costs even if the Council sanctioned. He was a witness in the Cann case and went directly to the point of Judge Huyoke's decision. The County Council was no competent court in legal matters, and Mr. Moore should not entertain any impression of that nature. Mr. Cann's waggon was standing far over on the left side of the road, and under certain provisions of the Act covering quiet conditions of traffic, the passage on the right was permitted.

Mr. Moore remarked that complaints of other breaches of the Act had since been made to him, but this case had left him in a quandry. He desired an understanding with the Council.

"This is no legal training school," the County Clerk remarked.

Mr. Moore was told to prosecute the Act, making allowance for the decision against him.

Reeve Crough—"Rules should not be made of cast iron; they should be of rubber."

Reeve Fitzgerald — That decision was very comforting. I slip by now on the right, if there is plenty of room, without fear of arrest. It was pointed out that in case of an accident, responsibility rests with the offender.

BUILDING COMMITTEE OF ST. JAMES' CHURCH HAVE BUSY NIGHT

At the meeting of the Building committee of the new St. James church last night, considerable business was transacted. Mr. Harold Fry, under whose supervision the new church is being erected, made his report, which was very satisfactory to the committee. Mr. Fry is being complimented on all sides on the success of his undertaking.

His report showed the brick work had been completed. Sixty-nine thousand, two hundred Milton pressed brick had been used, also one hundred and ninety-seven thousand other brick, making a total of two hundred and sixty-six thousand five hundred, used to erect the building.

Cuff Bros. did the brick work, and the good workmanship speaks for itself. Adamson & Dobbin have completed the parts of steel roofing, and they have also been awarded the contract for plumbing. Alexander & Miller are doing the wiring. W. R. Turner & Son received the contract for the heating.

If the weather man keeps things in the present shape for a day or two Nehemiah's Band will have another of the many bees and the grounds will all be levelled up.

Those on the job will be the guests of the Ladies' Aid for dinner, and you may be sure the Rev. Benj. Greatrix will be on the job to superintend the work, and you will find him at the head of the table with that good-natured fatherly smile of his that makes the boys feel so much at home and it's sure to bring them back another day, said one of the committee.

Inspector Cooper Out This Morning

Sanitary Inspector Cooper was in his office for a short time this morning. He has not yet recovered from his recent illness. During the absence of Inspector Cooper the work of the office is being carried on by Mr. F. W. Miller.

A Smooth, White Skin That Defies Weather

During the coming month of biting winds and intense cold, you who would keep your skin smooth, white and velvety should turn your attention to mercolized wax. Nothing else will so effectively remove a chapped, roughened or discolored surface. By gradually absorbing the weather-beaten cuticle, the complexion is kept in perfect condition, and even the beauty of expression appears more pronounced. If your skin be blotchy, pimply, freckled, coarse, sallow or over-red, why not shed it? One ounce of ordinary mercolized wax, to be had at any druggist's, will completely transform the most unsightly complexion in less than a fortnight. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

If weather, age or poor health has marred your face with wrinkles, here's good news. You can quickly remove every line by using a harmless, refreshing face lotion prepared by dissolving one ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel. The firmer, smoother skin, the more youthful appearance even after one application, will astonish you.

CERNAVODA MINES FAILED.

Explanation of Mysterious Affair at Danube Bridge.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A Chronicle correspondent at Russian headquarters hints that the mines which were placed by the Russo Roumanians under Cernavoda bridge before their retirement were not properly sprung and hence did not destroy the structure. The Roumanians now hold the dam-like portion of the bridge through the marsh west of the Danube, and their guns control the structure.

"We may rest assured," says the correspondent, "that Northern Dobrudja is now perfectly secure." The allies had withdrawn forty miles north of the railways, "but the change of the high command and the number of energetic measures, including the sending of reinforcements, enabled us to reconquer already a great part of the lost ground."

ANOTHER CHAMPION FOR CAVAN

Cavan again scores in having a champion bull in May Echo's Prince (7429) owned by Jas. Seymour and Sons. He belongs to the great May Echo family. The only family in the world with three generations of 100 lbs cows. May Echo, May Echo Verbelia, and May Echo Sylvia. The average of the three is milk in one day 120.3 lbs. for 7 days; 810.3 lbs and average butter in 7 days 34.06 lbs. Special mention is made of May Echo Sylvia, Canada's first 41 lb. cow, and the greatest milk producer the world has ever known, giving in one day 152 lbs. milk in 7 days, 1006 lbs. milk in 30 days, 3600 lbs. milk and averaged over 120 lbs of milk a day for 100 days. Her sire is Inka Sylvia Beets Pasch. May Echo's Prince is a son of May Echo and Inka Sylvia Beets Pasch. So you can readily see why he is a champion bull. Mr. Seymour is to be congratulated on having such an excellent herd sire for his pure bred herd of Holstein Cattle.

Refreshments were then served. The President thanked Mr. Nicholls, the "Director of the Orchestra" and all those who contributed to the programme. The national anthem was sung at the close, after which the Rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb pronounced the benediction.

Inspector Spence Is In Havelock

The Disposition of the Five Emery Children Will Be Decided To-day

County Police Magistrate Langley and Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Inspector of the Childrens' Aid Society are in Havelock to-day in connection with the case of George Emery, whose five children may be made wards of the Society. Mr. Spence on behalf of the Society has made formal application before the Magistrate with a view of making the children as wards of the Society. If Emery is now in a position to take proper care of his children they will be allowed to remain with him, otherwise they will be boarded out or removed to the Childrens' Shelter. The Society has no desire to inflict any hardship on Emery by taking his children, but demand that they be given proper care.

Emery, it will be remembered, refused to allow Mr. Spence to remove the children on the occasion of his first visit to Belmont township, where the family reside. Emery emphasized his objection with the aid of a gun and on a subsequent occasion brandished an axe. He is now reconciled to his position and has expressed his willingness to provide a suitable home for the children.

Children's Aid Society Need Larger Grant

To-morrow Mr. Joseph Wearing, Solicitor and Secretary for the Childrens' Aid Society, also Mr. C. A. G. Spence, Inspector for the Society will wait upon the county council for the purpose of advancing the claims of the Society for a more substantial grant from the County authorities.

Fire Crief Howard, a member of the Executive Committee may be on hand with a patent fire extinguisher to quelch any incendiary remarks concerning the high cost of living. It has frequently been pointed out that the county grant to the Society is much less than the requirement.

Round Table Meeting of The Council of Women

The meeting of the Council of Women on Friday afternoon at 3.30 in "The Green Room" of the Y.W.C.A. will again take the form of a Round Table Conference. Will the ladies bring their work and other work will be on hand for those who have none.

The work covered by the Executive of the National Council of Women, recently convened in Kingston was important and interesting, and this will be reported by the President. Nomination of officers will also take place, and several important questions will be voted on.

All ladies are welcome but members of the Executive and representatives of affiliated societies are especially requested to be present.

HOW NEW YORK CHEF MAKES PUMPKIN PIE

Here is the recipe for a pumpkin pie as prepared by Louis Sares of the Biltmore Hotel, New York, for the Thanksgiving dinner on Thursday, Nov. 30:

Though pumpkin pie is easy to make, I think that my recipe will give the best results. Take a medium size pumpkin, bake it whole in an oven for four hours, then open it, take the pulp out and pour through a sieve. With one pint of pulp mix one pint of cream, three whole eggs, four yolks, a little nutmeg, cinnamon and ginger powder; four ounces of sugar and three teaspoonfuls of molasses. Mix all together and bake in regular pie crust for half an hour.

SYLLABUS SHOWS EXTENSIVE WORK AT CONSERVATORY

Many Departments in Charge of Qualified and Capable Instructors—Orchestra and Recitals to Aid Students

Those who enjoy the privileged association in the work of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music know that it is a big happy family, united by a common love for music. Its director, Mr. Rupert Gliddon, has surrounded himself with a large and capable staff of assistants, who in turn have attracted a large number of eager students, all bound together by a desire for musical culture and advancement. And this objective is broadened and its way brightened by recitals and class gatherings, as exemplified by the several orchestras and kindred features. To those outside the Conservatory, its recently published syllabus conveys an adequate idea of the comprehensive programme of studies pursued in its many departments from the 1st of September to the 30th of June.

The kindergarten receives pupils at their tenderest and most impressionable age, and in the period of from 5 to 12 years, lays the foundation deep and strong for future development. This is an important feature of the Peterborough Conservatory, and its success is illustrated by the really excellent work achieved my the children's orchestra in recent years. In this organization the little ones find encouragement and mutual support, and receive added incentive to exercise their fullest powers and talents. There is also the advantage in this work of fostering a feeling of confidence in the child at an early age an attainment that will always be a benefit whether in the musical or any other field of activity.

Of this department, the syllabus says:

"By means of kindergarten methods and musical, material, games, songs, finger gymnastic, rhythmic and other interesting exercises, the child's love of play is utilized to make the study of music more enjoyable. This method recognizes the fact that music exists in the heart and mind of the child, and aims at educating and developing it, and cultivating a genuine love for music. Through the ear comes the enjoyment of music, and the audition exercises train the ear to accurate listening, and develop tone thinking and tone production, which, with the breathing exercises, lay the foundation of vocal culture."

The pianoforte, voice culture and violin departments speak for themselves. Carefully graded courses, interesting exercises that give pleasure to the development of technique and the gradual preparation of the student for Toronto Conservatory of Music examinations are desirable features.

Theory of Music.

Theory is known as the science of music. There is no phase of musical accomplishment that will not be benefitted by the study of theory. It is an aid in reading memorizing; it aids in understanding and interpreting the works of the great composers; it advances the prestige of the musician and like all things that kindle originality, it is a means for personal development.

The course in theory includes the following subjects: Harmony, Counterpoint, canon and fugue, orchestration, acoustics, form in music and the history of music.

Free lectures are given on harmony and history at a time, especially arranged to suit the convenience of a majority of the students.

Other Instruments.

Many boys begin piano lessons, spend years in half-hearted practice and in the end are only mediocre players, satisfied, perhaps, with their very limited accomplishment. Had they been encouraged to study a band or orchestra instrument, cornet, clarinet, horn, trombone, saxaphone, flute, etc., the very opportunity and incentive of orchestral or band playing would have led them to greater success and a richer enjoyment of the fruits of their efforts. For it is claimed that the piano is difficult of creditable performance in comparison with most of these instruments. Here, then, is a thought for parents and young men, and the Conservatory not only provides tuition but has also its orchestra for aspiring musicians.

The Staff.

The staff of teachers is as follows:

EDISON'S Christmas Gift to YOU—

Margaret Matzenauer

THE world can never pay its debt to Edison. His genius has brought within the range of every fireside the actual re-creation of the world's finest music. The joys of sound are no longer confined to the platform—it is the gift of Edison that any man who will can command the talent of great singers, orchestras, entertainers and musicians.

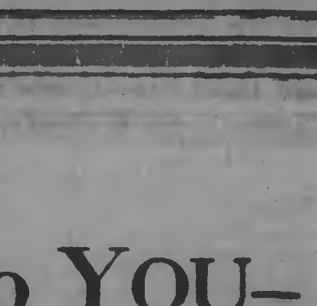
And never think that the mere purchase of the necessary mechanical equipment makes Edison's gift to you less real or wonderful. The genius of Shakespeare cannot be measured by the price ticket on a volume of his works.

These Artists at Your Command

The artists whose pictures appear in this announcement, as well as the leading Metropolitan and Concert Artists, are daily singing to thousands through this instrument which marks the achievement of Thomas A. Edison's ambition to re-create all forms of music so perfectly that the re-creation could not be detected from the living Artist's voice—

The NEW EDISON

Matzenauer, Miller and Rio are singing in Canada. Hear them if the opportunity presents itself. And as you listen, close your eyes. The impression that comes to you as you do so is EXACTLY the same as you would experience if you were seated by your own fireside listening to the recreated voices in your New Edison.



Christine Miller

The New York Tribune says:

"Edison has snared the soul of music."

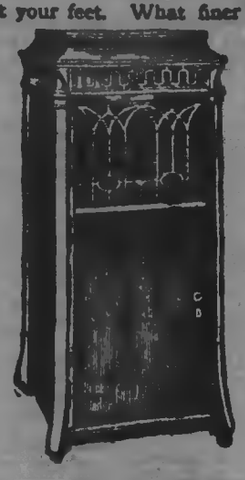
Your Gift to Your Family

Make it possible for Edison to convey his priceless gift to you, your family and your guests. Buy a new Edison and your choice of records—the musical world is at your feet. What finer or more enduring gift could you make to your family?

Before you invest a cent, test the truth of what we have said.



Come and Hear

We invite you to visit our store and let us prove to you that this Re-creation is a literal fact. Come at your earliest opportunity. There is no obligation to buy.

fit to clothe themselves with clothing of this design, the uniform of the soldier, the clothing that really denotes the man. It must be disconcerting to say the least to the minds of the physically fit men of this country to read of the heroism and devotion and martial courage of the brave women of Serbia, Belgium, Poland and other European countries, who are doing a man's part on the battlefields of Europe to-day, whilst they are at home enjoying the privileges of increased wages and other favourable conditions created by their friends and even relatives who are fighting in their cause and sacrificing themselves at the front, to defend them from the curse of Prussian militarism. Wake up men of Canada, wake up to the fact that there is an issue at stake that intimately concerns YOU, an issue that is being fought on the battlefields of Europe just as much for you as for Belgium Serbia, Poland or England. Don't hide behind subterfuges and excuses. There is a place for every man and every man can find that place if he will. Don't go to a phrenologist or palm reader to find out what your character is, enlist to-day, don the uniform that will be evidence of your manly character. The opportunity is at your door. The 247th Battalion need men, the 216th Bantam Battalion need men, every branch of the service needs men, your King and Country need men, so enlist to-day, don't wait till you are compelled to go. Apply at the Recruiting Office, Simcoe street for a complete man's outfit at no cost to yourself.

The Examiner has received the following letter from a member of the 93rd Battalion Band:

Dear Mr. Editor,—In letters received from friends of the 93rd band have been informed of certain letters appearing in the papers of Peterborough, regarding that organization which doesn't worry the boys here at all, but does cause a certain amount of anxiety to the ones left at home, and these letters are written by bandsmen attached to a battalion in this camp, which we are at present also attached to.

Now, in the first place, the 93rd Band isn't broken up, and decidedly are not in the ranks. We have not had any drill or other instruction along that line, and although we are not playing we are earning our board.

In a time like this there should be no strife or jealousy between two musical organizations, but evidently some very narrow-minded persons here want to stir up a little strife, but very unfortunately they don't come to the ones who can defend themselves, but try to take it out on the innocent ones at home.

What the band will be used as remains to be seen, and time will tell. For the present, we are doing fatigues and are doing it well; but we are here to do our bit, and will do it, whatever it is, and we are not complaining to the folks at home, either.

So, Mr. Editor, I hope you will understand why these letters were written, merely through jealousy, but, thank God, everybody doesn't swallow all that is written by these jealous-minded men, who should be brothers, but evidently make themselves "knockers."

Now, who the guilty ones are, I won't venture to say, although I have my own opinion, but will leave that to the public to decide.

I can say, however, that one person wrote a letter home and it appeared in one of your issues, saying he held a certain position in the brigade, but we discovered later that he was "shooting the breeze," and other letters written by him can be taken as such.

I hope, Mr. Editor, this will all be plain to you and the friends at home who have our welfare at heart, and will say to them that they should "worry."

Best wishes to all.

Sincerely yours,

A "Brd Bandsman."

Pte. Rowe in London.

Mrs. Geo. H. Rowe of Lakefield, wife of Private Rowe, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has received the following letter from the chaplain in a hospital in France:

8 Stationary Hospital, B.E.F.,
Nov. 5th, 1916.

Dear Mrs. Rowe,—Your husband is a patient at the above hospital suffering from an injury to his head. But he is doing very well and there is no need for you to be anxious concerning him. In a few days he will be well enough to go to England for further treatment and a period of convalescence. He is quite comfortable and happy and receives the very best attention.

He sends you and the children his best love and tells you not to write until he has a more permanent address. With best wishes, I am,

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. Rowe has also received a letter from her husband, which in part is as follows:

London, England, Nov. 13th.

Dear Wife,—I am going to try to write you a few lines as I am feeling a little better to-night. I say better, for I expect you will know that I have been wounded. I got hit on the head on Oct. 20th, at a little place in France called Kemmau, near Ypres. We were shelled pretty hard about noon, and old Fritz got me somehow. We also lost a machine gun and the gunner was wounded, but our boys were not sleeping, and old Fritz did not have it all his own way, for he always pays for pranks like that.

My wound is healing nicely and I think I will soon be able to be up. I am in the King George Hospital in London, and a lovely hospital it is, the Sisters are all so kind. It is surprising how they wait on so many the way they do.

I have lost track of all my old 93rd chums that I started out with. I can't write to one of them, for I dont know where to find them. I belong to the 32nd Battalion now and I don't even know the captain's name.

The Kingston Whig says:

There will be a 1000-bed military hospital for Kingston, according to an announcement made by Lieut.-Col. R. J. Gardiner, Assistant Director of Medical Services, on Monday morning. There are 3,000 wounded cases now in England, and some accomodation must be secured for this number in Canada. The hospital to be established in Kingston will take a third of that number, and the Military Hospitals Commission will make arrangements for two others of a similar size throughout the Dominion.

In comparison with the Ongwanda Hospital, the new hospital will be twenty times as large, as that at Ongwanda has accommodation for but fifty patients. The Gen ral Hospital can only take 200 patients, so the extent of the new institution may be imagined.

Lieut.-Col. Thompson, of the Military Hospitals Commission, was in the city on Sunday in conference with Lieut.-Col. Gardiner. Various buildings that might be converted were considered, but no final decision was made. The A. D. M. S. could not give any more details, owing to the fact that nothing more than the decision that it will be in Kingston has been decided upon. He stated, however, that it was the largest institution of its kind in this district, and would have a very important bearing on the life of Kingston as a city.

It is learned that the military authorities are making application to the Board of Education for the use of Victoria School, at the corner of Alfred and Union streets. This school accommodates 600 pupils.

Mrs. Monks, of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, Orpington Road, has received the following card from Pte. A. Parrington, 4th C.M.R., who is a prisoner in Germany:

Dear Friend,—I now have great pleasure in writing these few lines telling you I received your parcel, thanking you for the same. We are all keeping as well as can be expected under the circumstances. So I will close with the best of luck from—

A. PARRINGTON.

Tells of Shelling Of Hospital Posts

ENDURE TRENCH HARDSHIPS IN ANTICIPATION OF VICTORY—GRATEFUL FOR AMERICAN GIFTS.

Eliot Norton, Director of the American Volunteer Ambulance Corps in France, of which Richard Norton, his brother, is the field commander, has received a letter from Philip O. Mills, now on active duty with the corps in France, in which Mr. Mills tells of the strenuous work the Americans are doing for France, a work which is shortly to be expanded by the Americans taking over all the ambulance duties of the entire French Army Corps. Twenty additional American volunteers have joined the corps since the letter was written and the corps is now operating in three sections.

The letter to Mr. Norton is dated "Somewhere in France." Oct. 26th, 1916.

"To-day," it reads, "we have been having rather lively times at all our hospital posts. Of course you know almost every hospital at the front is within range of the enemy artillery but you would expect a hospital marked plainly all over with red crosses would be left alone—but in this war it would seem that a red cross is Fritzie's pet target.

"He has been shelling the hospital buildings all the afternoon and we have been helping to move out the wounded to some safe place. Poor fellows, it seems a if they ought to get a little rest at being shot at. This is not a new trick of little Heinie's at all, and it is one of his mildest pleasantries.

"Some of our new men got their first sensation of working under fire. The Almighty is not altogether on the Boche's side for He is certainly taking care of the ambulance drivers here.

"The weather is and has been vilely cold—of a mean, piercing quality, rain and mud all over everything. Even the hard metalled roads are inches deep in molasses-like mud, but we are so well off in comparison with the wonderful French soldiers that we should not mention any little discomforts. I wish that I could describe their cheerfulness under it all in the trenches.

"To give you a picture of it: Imagine yourself out of doors in a cold Boston winter's night, in a mean rain and no waterproof; then get a gun and stand in icewater and mud up to your middle with the ever-present prospect of a shell landing on you, and then and then only will you begin to get the idea. Pile a few nights and days of the same kind on top of one another and the picture will grow clearer: but it does not seem to dampen the French ardour, for every poilu in the army knows that they have the Hun beaten and it is only a question of time before his squeals will grow louder. For even now the Boche prisoners coming through every day are all telling the same tale: 'We have had enough.'

"We are taking on what we are commencing to carry out with enthusiasm and pleasure, viz., distributing the gifts from America to the French soldiers as they go into the front trenches.

"Before I left home I used to wonder sometimes if the men and women at the Lafayette dances ever thought much about the fellows who were going to receive the 'Lafayette kits,' and under what surroundings the Poilus would finally get them into their hands.

"One day last winter I strayed into one of the central offices of the Lafayette Society in New York and there saw some of the girls who had been dancing the night before sorting and packing the kits. My pride and confidence in our American women was rewarded, and now it is our opportunity (I wish it was the girls' also) to see and hear the gratitude and thanks with which the soldiers receive their personal gifts from America. They are amazed and elated that the Americans think enough of them to send them gifts. The chain is complete from the ballroom to the trenches.

"The American Clearing House at 5 Rue Francois Premier in Paris, was started at the beginning of the war. It is run entirely by Americans and receives all the American gifts of all kinds and starts the distribution and we take the packages from the rail heads to the soldiers and distribute to each battalion in turn.

"Some days ago was our first distribution. Company by company the men filed up. The French captain generally made a little speech, explaining that these were personal gifts from Americans to them, sent from America, and handled from the start to finish by Americans. Could you only have seen them gathered about in a semi-circle, stocky, hardy, well-set-up, well-fed young fellows, serious-faced but with bright smiling eyes, listening in attentive admiration to their captain! Then their expression of thanks to America as they took their gifts—candies, sweaters, raincoats, towels, soap, needles, thread, socks, underclothing, mufflers, gloves' etc.—would have amply repaid any American who ever made a gift to France. It was wonderful.

"It certainly is a great pleasure for Norton's section to be a link in such a chain and I hope it will be an never-ending one for the French are surely doing the fighting for the world."

The section, Mr. Mills adds, is distributing bandages and other hospital supplies direct to the hospitals and any gifts addressed to Richard Norton, S. S. V. 7, care of American Relief Clearing House, Paris, will be immediately turned over to the hospitals where they will be the most useful.

LEG CUT OFF, FELT PAIN IN BURIED PART

Strange Stories of Men Who Have Suffered in Limbs Which They Lost.

SEXTON DUG IT UP, STRAIGHTENED IT, AND THEN PAIN WAS FELT NO LONGER.

Soldiers who have lost their arms and legs in battle often tell astonishing stories about feeling intense pain in the stumps of the limbs that have been cut off. One man had his left foot cut off. He used to have corns on it from which he suffered excruciating pain. Now, though he has lost his foot, he states that he still continues to feel the twinges of pain that formerly came from the corns. It seems difficult to believe. But it is true all the same. Here is an instance of a man in America who lost his leg by an accident. It was not buried straight, and the man continued to feel cramp pains until it was dug up and straightened. This is the story as told by a New York journalist.

Strange stories have often been told of cripples who, many years after the accident which left them maimed, have suffered aches and pains from the severed member, though it was safely buried perhaps in some quiet churchyard a thousand miles away, but such statements, though backed by medical science, have seemed so weird and improbable that the average reader will probably remain skeptical, even though such a case has recently come to light in McAlester, and is vouched for by the sexton of Oakhill Cemetery, and his wife, as well as the party who owned the buried limb.

HAD LEG AMPUTATED.

About three weeks ago, Anderson Pugh, a local employee of the Standard Oil Company, had his leg amputated as the result of an accident. The leg was buried by George Burt, the sexton of the Oakhill Cemetery. What happened after that time is told by Mr. Burt in his own way and affirmed by Mrs. Burt, who was a witness to all that transpired.

"A few days ago," says Mr. Burt, "Anderson Pugh came to me and said —'Burt, you have buried my leg in a cramped position leaving a crease in the bottom of my foot, and it is giving me such great pain that I want you to take it up, straighten it out, and bury it again. He described the crease, telling me just how it ran across the bottom of the foot.

"Well, I went to the cemetery the next day and dug up the limb, and sure enough I found that I had buried it so that it was cramped, leaving a crease in the foot just as Mr. Pugh had described. I straightened the member out and replaced it in the grave. Mr. Pugh says that since that time he has not suffered the slightest pain from the missing leg."

SUFFERED CONSTANTLY.

Anderson Pugh, the man who lost the leg, said that everything Sexton Burt had said was true. He declared that he had suffered constantly from the time that his leg was buried, and the feeling had always been with him that the leg was stiff and cramped, until it had been unearthed and reinterred by the sexton, after which all pain had vanished.

Sexton Burt said this was the second case of the kind which had come under his observation, the other being of Elmer Mims, an employee of the City Barber Shop, who had lost an arm in a railway accident about four years ago. Young Mims, when seen recently, said his hand had been buried with the hand doubled, and the pains had become so severe that he was forced to go to Sexton Burt and request him to take up the member and straighten the fingers. This was done but such a space of time had elapsed that it was impossible to fully remedy the evil, and Mims declared that the cramping sensation in the missing arm is always with him, becoming so pronounced sometimes at night that he will awaken from sleep, and spring out of bed crying with the pain.

Stands For Many Things.—A class in Keith Grammar School was one day reading about Caesar's invasion of Britain in B.C. 55. "What do the letters 'B.C.' stand for?" asked the teacher. A red-headed boy of an observant nature at once answered "Bentfshire Constabulary." "How do you make that out?" asked the smiling teacher. "Because I saw 'B.C. 17' on the collar of a bobby's coat," was the quick reply.

PABST TALKS TEMPERANCE.

Thinks the Brewers Should be Leaders of a True Crusade.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 28.—Gustave Pabst, President of the Pabst Brewery and retiring President of the United States Brewers' Association, said to-day that the brewers were in favour of true temperance and were working for laws that would bring it about. He has just returned from the brewers' convention at Cleveland.

"It is not worth while spending any time in holding post mortems over wet and dry elections, unless it be for the purpose of guiding our judgment as to the future," said Mr. Pabst. "Logically, we are on the side of temperance, and we ought to be leaders in the true temperance crusade. We have plenty of evidence that the thoughtful men and women of the country are not opposed to the reasonable use of beer, and we believe that the people are willing to meet us half way in establishing conditions that will promote the welfare of the community.

"We, as brewers, must not only put ourselves abreast of public sentiment, but must be willing to lead it wherever the conditions are such as to make our action of practical value.

"The question for thoughtful men is how this industry may be so regulated that the evils incident to it shall gradually diminish, and intemperance be reduced until it becomes a negligible social factor."

The woman who desires to "look different" usually gets her wish.

Dr. Thomas D. Love, of Atlanta, U.S.A., declares that he has converted his back yard into a garden which produces enough to feed twelve families.

HISTORY OF ARMOURED MONSTERS SKETCHED

Submarine Commander and Aviation Student Get Credit for Innovation—Evolution of the "Land Battle Ship" Which has Wrought Havoc with Prussian is Told

London. — Since the advent of the "tanks" in the second phase of the great offensive on the Somme some secrecy has shrouded their history.

Mr. Lloyd George in the House of Commons recently, mentioned the names of several officers to whom credit was due but his statement went little beyond the mention of names.

The story of the "tanks" has not, and cannot yet be fully told, but the mention of the name of Commodore Sueter, R.N., in the House of Commons, has carried it one step further.

Commodore Murray Sueter, according to those who are familiar with the facts, had probably more to do with the appearance of the "tanks" as the most modern engine of war than any other man. To him, says the Pall Mall Gazette, must be given the credit for the inception of the idea, whatever part others may have played in its development and application.

In the early days of the war the naval authorities deemed it necessary to establish an aeroplane base at Dunkirk, with temporary bases as far inland as the circumstances of the time permitted. In connection with this plan it became essential that some system of armoured car support should be developed. There was not a moment to spare, and Commander Samson, who was on the spot, with characteristic ingenuity and skill, made the most of the material available. Within a very short time there were armoured or protected cars at work, based on Dunkirk.

FIRST CARS FAILURES.

These cars were protected by steel plating, but the thickness of the plates they were able to have gave them little real value.

The failure of the first effort did not discourage Commander Samson, and the experiments were continued until a protected car was produced which was capable of resisting enemy fire at point blank range.

The immediate result of this success was that the war office began to make inquiries, but they went on their own way, and the naval authorities continued to experiment along the lines they had worked out.

Commodore Murray Sueter is understood to have returned to London immediately before the fate of Antwerp, where he had, in the course of his duties, obtained a mass of information with regard to the cars—their weakness and defects.

On every hand it was admitted that the wrong lines were being pursued. The cars which "worked" between Antwerp and Dunkirk were obviously lacking in overhead protection; their crews were exposed to fire from trees and houses, against which they were not secure. It was towards the remedying of this great weakness that the attention of the authorities directly concerned was then directed, with the result that a car with a revolving turret was produced. This, of course, added materially to the weight, but it was found that several well known chassis were capable of carrying it. After much experimental work the cars were produced, and when the time for their employment came they were successful in doing all that was expected of them.

IDEA OF "LAND BATTLE SHIP"

The need for heavier guns than the machine guns the cars carried presented another problem for solution but lorries were built and protected by shields of armor plate which served the purpose with considerable efficiency.

At this period the insistent demand was for heavier guns and to the naval men engaged upon the work the land "battleship" idea made an irresistible appeal.

With energy, enthusiasm and skill Commodore Murray Sueter tackled the problem and within a few weeks it was possible to subject to practical tests a "battle ship" which answered the requirements as to armor and armament.

Mr. Churchill, the then First Lord and Lord Fisher, the First Sea Lord, approved the "land battle ship" idea, but when Sir Percy Scott was consulted he was not favorable to it, being convinced that the enemy would very quickly succeed in wrecking the "battle ships" by heavy artillery even before they could be brought into action. The size of the target supported Sir Percy Scott's contention, and the strength of the position the famous gunnery expert took up was admitted.

It was at this point that Commodore Murray Sueter hit upon the idea of adapting the Pedrail system to the "land battle ship."

Without delay all the information available in this country and America was obtained and before Mr. Churchill, Mr. Lloyd George and a group of high War Office officials, a demonstration was given of the powers of the "caterpillar" in forcing wire entanglements and surmounting obstacles.

The demonstration was so convincing that instructions were given for the building of a considerable number of "battle ships." Commodore Murray Sueter was instructed to take an important part in bringing the squadron into being, but circumstances interfered to prevent his doing so.

Commdore Murray Sueter, to whom therefore a large share of the credit for the "tanks" must be accorded was in the early days of the present century perhaps England's most distinguished submarine officer, the book he then wrote on the problems of organising that service, in the light of his actual experiences as commander of a submarine, being still regarded as a standard work on the subject. He was at one time commander of the ill fated A-1, and before that he commanded the earlier Holland submarines.

From submarines he turned his attention to the air, and he may be justly described as the maker of the Royal Naval Air Service, both before the war and after.

He is an expert on the technicalities of both aeroplanes and seaplanes, and also of air ships.

After Commodore Sueter, Major Hetherington should have more credit than anyone else for the production of the "tanks." He is chief of the Survey Department of the Royal Naval Air Service at the White City, and was formerly in command of a squadron of armoured cars—the predecessors of the "tanks."

Commander Briggs has been chief engineer officer at the Air Department, Admiralty, since war was declared. He is responsible for the present high efficiency of aeroplane engines in the Royal Naval Air Service. He applied his engineering knowledge to assist Commodore Sueter to design the original "tanks."

FINDS STOCKHOLM GREATEST CENTRE WORLD HAS KNOWN

Locks Are No Good in Swedish Capital, Writes American Correspondent—Spy's Hand is to be Found Everywhere

STOCKHOLM. (By mail).—This is the spy-centre of the world. Here foe meets foe—but with his fingers crossed. It is neutral ground and the spy plays his ungrateful game in perfect safety.

"See that chap over there?" a friend asked, pointing across the lobby of one of the prettiest hotels in the world. "That is an Austrian military attache. The man he is talking to is a Russian from Petrograd. I know them both."

There they were playing their games. Each trying to trick the other to some end, only heaven knew what.

"Never mind about locking your chest of drawers, or your bags or trunks," an acquaintance told me the day I landed in Stockholm. "Locks are no good here. If anybodys wants to see what you have hidden away they will manage to do so. And they usually want to see."

There is perhaps no more fascinating spot anywhere than a certain great hotel here. In the world's most beautiful dining-room under a sort of colonade ranging alongside a formal garden where a superb lawn grows under a lofty glass dome. Where huge palms and flowers grow in profusion, and the tinkle of a fountain in the Venetian Court is not much softer than the music of a hidden stringed orchestra, German and English, Austrians and French, Russians and Bulgars, Italians and Turks, Belgians and Hungarians, and all the rest mingle at table. Not that they sit at the same table, but their elbows sometimes literally touch at adjoining boards.

PLAYING BIG GAMES.

There are, of course, big games being played by men not ordinarily called spies. Diplomatic agents is the more dignified term. These are educated, cultivated men. And they do the finer, larger work. Smaller fry keep track of shipments to Russia, of the movement via Sweden of government agents, etc. Or in the case of the allies, of the shipment of materials to Germany by boat, etc. Of course, there are freelances who scurry around picking up scraps of information and selling the same for whatever the interested parties feel like paying. These are the rag-pickers of the profession.

Of course ,there are women spies, or women agents. These are not always used as Oppenheim and other romancers lead one to imagine, but there is just enough truth in such stories to make these women interesting. Their great utility comes through being able to mingle in high circles where they can listen to the gossip.

EASILY ACCESSIBLE.

Stockholm is easily accessible to all the warring countries. At the Central Railway station every night, on adjoining tracks, are three trains. One goes north to Tornea, the Russian frontier town; one to Bergen, whence one takes the boat for England and France; the third goes to Gothenburg, five hours by boat from Denmark, whence an express whirls one to Berlin. The Russian train leaves first—about 9 p.m.; the German train second, at 9.20. So on the platforms one sees mingling and jostling, German and British, French and Prussian, and all the rest.

In the hotels one has the impression that each column conceals a spy and each palm two or three. And one is nearly right in this impression, for they are as thick as flies everywhere. Spies spying on unsuspecting persons, spies spying on spies, and spies spying on spies set to catch spies. It is a great game. There is on record at least one case of one spy doing nearly all of these things at one and the same time, being simultaneously in the employ of France, England, and Germany.

"Listen, my dear," says one lady to another, "there is some great scandal. I promised not to tell, but I must tell it to you, knowing you'll not breathe it to a soul."

And so it goes.

Centre of Activity.

Hotels are packed. Only by reserving a room days in advance can one find accommodation save by rare good luck. At tea time, at dinner, and again at supper, the splendid restaurants here are jammed, and tables are at premium. Champagne corks are popping like machine-guns. Everybody seems to have plenty of money, and nobody appears to be stingy with it.

One sees many German people here Here and there in dining rooms are German diplomats, army officers in multi or evening clothes, and frequently they have their women folk with them. These are wearing skirts, quite as short as any seen in Paris, and the cut of their gowns is proof that though Frenchmen and Germans are killing each other, Rue de la Paix styles have found their way to Unter den Linden.

Great Cross Roads.

This is the Great ross Roads, the meeting place of the folks of the warring nations. To-night in the lovely supper room, at adjoining tables, two men, their wives and daughters, all faultlessly dressed in evening clothes, hear each other talk, though in different languages. To-morrow these two men may be leading charges at each other, over rain-soaked, shell-pitted ground. One may slaughter the other and leave the bloody, muddy corpse to be trodden on by a regiment of iron-shod men, leaving a woman without a husband, a family without a father. But to-night they dine elbow to elbow.

HABITANT TELLS TRENCH STORIES IN HIS OWN WAY

Humour as Well as Horror in His Description of Battlefield.

St. Catharines. — Many descriptions of the battle front and what the soldiers are doing have been printed during the present war, but few of them equal in realism the plain story as told by Charley Ducas of this city who, having performed his bit for his King and Empire—in other words, for himself and those of his fellows who dwell in the shadow of the Union Jack—is now back to work here in an ammunition factory.

Having gone through the thing himself and not merely looked on, his story told from a practical soldier's standpoint, stands out by itself with enhanced interest. Told in his quaint "habitant" English, for Ducas is a French-Canadian, the writer is consumed with a desire to tell it just as Ducas tells it—a feat, of course, impossible.

He begins anywhere, just as the mood strikes him. "Yes, that No Man's Land, he some dangerous." He had often taken part in those crawling adventures under the cover of darkness, when the denizens of one trench made incursions to the "ditches" opposite with a view to finding out what the other fellow is doing or is contemplating doing.

LIKE THRESHING MACHINES

"Yes, we blacken up our face—no white around—then we crawl out, four—five—six. We go to see what we can see. Very well. So quiet we go them other fellow, he never see one single thing. By and by up goes one of them starlights and we duck our heads and lie quiet, just like dead. The German he can't tell if we are dead men or logs or nothing. Dead men lay all over anyway. By and by when it's dark enough we start again—up goes those dam starlights and we duck. It make it light as day and you move just one little finger them German machine-gun fellow, they see you, and bar-r-r-r-r, all around your head like a pack of bees, or maybe like one of them threshing machines. You never know till you're hit. Maybe you don't know then. By Gar you want to be back in the dugout when them machine guns go."

Charley pauses reflectively. "Dead men all lay around," he adds. "Some there one year, maybe two. In the dark you put your hand on face of dead man. He not there long. We know that. You don't have to see those others."

Very often these scouting parties get right over to the German parapets without being seen and many an interesting conversation have they listened to among the Fritzies. Ducas was out with Lieut. Gibson, son of Sir John Gibson, when he was killed. A party was building fences and it was a ticklish job with the starlights going up every little while. Iron posts are used and these are screwed into the ground so there is no noise, and the wires are passed through the holes at the top. At the snap of a twig the fence builders duck to the ground, and lay as flat as they can. The Germans take a few random machine gun buzzes for luck and when all is quiet again the fence building proceeds once more very cautiously.

A starlight ascended and the party dropped. With everything light as day, the Germans searched for a target. Lieut. Gibson moved his head aside ever so slightly but a German sniper saw him and shot him through the temple. The ball passed out the other side, leaving the clay only of another gallant officer who had made the supreme sacrifice.

Ducas tells of the rescue of the lieutenant's body, he being one of those who afterwards crawled out to get it. The Germans more than once played their machine guns on the rescuers.

Trench life, though it has its disadvantages, is not so hard, says the soldier. The greatest troubles are the rats and the wet.

RATS VERY FAMILIAR.

"The rat," says Ducas, "is as big as a young cat. He sit and watch you just one yard away. You chase, and when you look around there he is right behind you. You put bun in your pocket when you go to sleep, so you will have something when you wake up. Rat, he come along, eat bun through your pocket. All soldier boy pockets chewed when he comes out of the trenches. But we don't mind that so much now."

Ducas says that no man goes into battle in this war without fear. "Knees shake together all down the line," said he. "Every man scared at first." And he was of the opinion that the strongest looking fellows are the worst. A young lieutenant, from Toronto, who had been nick-named "Sissy," was the coolest man under fire, lighting cigarettes and encouraging his men just as complacently as if they were at a picnic. A big Buffalo man, who looked as if he didn't know what fear was, almost collapsed.

"Yes, the Germans are good fighters, but we give them hell, too," said Ducas. He told of truces between the trenches when sometimes they were only ten or fifteen yards apart. One day a German stuck his head over the parapet and yelled over to ask if any of the Canadians lived in Toronto. They got quite chummy, and by common consent there was no firing.

The German who opened the ball said he lived in Toronto, and gave the name of the man on Yonge street he had worked for. Another said he belonged to Edmonton, and another to Winnipeg. They had quite a social time together, and then the Germans said: "The Prussians are coming into this trench to relieve us; watch out for them, for they will give you hell."

The soldiers in the trenches are very clever, says Ducas, in taking advantage of circumstances. Sometimes the bottom of the trench gets mushy soft, and they string their rubber blankets over it, just high enough to touch. When a man gets into the blanket he finds a bed very much resembling a feather mattress. Then he would be all right, says Ducas, if the pesky rats did not come along while he is asleep, and eat holes in his pockets.
